FRANCE AND BELGIUM DECIDE TO TIGHTEN PRESSURE IN RUHR

Premiers Announce a "Whole Series of New Measures" to Make Germany Pay.

PARIS CONFERENCES BEGIN

PARIS, April 13.—It was announced tonight that "a whole series of new measures" is to be put in effect in the Ruhr by France and Belgium.

Premiers Poincaré and Theunis held a conference this afternoon and another after dinner, which lasted beyond 11 o'clock. Both Premiers said that there had been no change in the policy announced at Brussels that the Ruhr would be held until Germany paid.

Details were not given tonight as to the new measures, which will form the subject of further talks tomorrow.

It developed today that the British Prime Minister did not accept M. Poincaré's invitation yesterday to assent to the France-Belgian formula that the Ruhr be occupied until reparations are paid. Mr. Bonar Law said that he wished a "more precise" formula. The effect of this development appeared to unite the French and Belgians more closely.

At the end of the afternoon session this communiqué was issued:

"The Belgian and French Governments, each resolved to pursue their common action in the Ruhr until Germany decides to make direct proposals for the payment of reparations, have planned a whole series of new measures to increase their pressure and to continue it as long as it will be necessary.

"They have also passed a certain number of decisions to increase the collection of coal and coke, to assure the receipt of the coal taxes and to better the service of the railroads.

"They will meet again tomorrow to examine questions relating to the compatibility of the fatherallied services for the distribution of the product and guarantees."

Holding Firm on Occupation.

The wording of the first paragraph of the communiqué gave rise to a report, which spread quickly, that France and Belgium had decided to quit the Ruhr as soon as Germany made acceptable propositions. This impression was corrected tonight by M. Poincaré, who insisted that there had been no change in the program of holding the Ruhr.

It was tentatively decided by the two Premiers to assign to the French and Belgian members of the Reparation Commission the task of drafting a common plan for reparations following the lines to be laid down tomorrow. It is understood that this plan will deal directly with 50,000,000,000 gold marks represented by the A and B bonds, and that the evacuation of the Ruhr will be after a settlement of this part of the reparation bill.

It was reported to the Premiers that the daily receipts by France and Belgium of coal and coke from the Ruhr, now 6,000 tons, would be 10,000 within a fortnight. At present 900,000 tons of coke and 1,600,000 tons of coal are under seizure in the Ruhr.

The Premiers also discussed plans for the further recruiting of railroad men for the Ruhr in France and Belgium. For guarding the railroads and the protection of the Germans working for the occupying forces it is possible that 10,000 more troops will be placed at the disposal of General Degoutte in the Ruhr.

Loucheur Reassures Belgium.

Louis Loucheur, who attended a dinner tonight given by M. Poincaré in honor of the Belgian Premier, had a long conversation with Premier Theunis in which it was said that the misunderstandings caused by his trip to England were dissipated.

There exists, it is understood, some difference of opinion between the Premiers as to the wisdom of publishing the Franco-Belgian plan of reparations before Germany asks for terms. It is said to be M. Poincaré's idea that the Allies should wait until Germany asks for terms, whereas the Belgians are inclined to think that letting Germany know under what conditions she can expect the release of the Ruhr at the same time that she observes the increase of allied effort will be good policy. This point will probably be settled before the conference ends tomorrow night.

The general impression of the first day is an apparent lessening of the probability of quick accord between France and Great Britain on reparations, coupled with an evident determination by the French and Belgians to resort to new methods to increase the pressure on Germany.

No Settlement Change Without Britain.

PARIS, April 13 (Associated Press).—The allied representatives confined themselves at today's conference on the Ruhr to a discussion of the details of the occupation and the principle that it will be continued and extended until Germany yields. France and Belgium have no intention of elaborating a plan of settlement, it is said, because when the time comes to consider any proposition which Germany may make it will be necessary that the British take part in the conversations.

Talk of a new conference considered [illegible] is confined to a very limited number of the French press, is regarded as premature. It is said to begin the discussion of the German proposals for settlement as a basis eventually

LONDON, April 13.—The most remarkable of all the wealth of gifts bestowed on Lady Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon, whose marriage to the Duke of York will be celebrated in Westminster Abbey on April 26, is a mammoth wedding cake, presented by the largest firm of biscuit makers in England.

The cake is 10 feet high, 8 feet in diameter and weighs 300 pounds. It is divided into four tiers, each bearing emblems symbolical of the lineage of the royal Bridegroom and his bride.

On the first tier is a reproduction of Windsor Castle and St. George's Church and on the second is a relief in sugar work of Glamis Castle, ancestral home of the bride. Among the figures on the third tier is a Masonic emblem, signifying the connection of the Duke and the bride's father, the Earl of Strathmore, with that order. Below are figures of cupids, standing on ladders and ringing bells of happiness. On the summit of the cake is a massive silver vase of rare design, containing a bouquet of York roses, orange blossoms and snowdrops.

The cake will be placed on exhibition, visitors being charged sixpence, and the proceeds will go to charity.

A FRANKLIN LETTER UNEARTHED IN PARIS

PARIS, April 13.—Le Figaro will publish tomorrow a letter by Benjamin Franklin which, so far as can be ascertained, has not been published hitherto. The document was discovered by Professor Proquet in a private diary written in 1906 by the wife of Colonel de Labedoyere, who was shot for having [illegible] Napoleon during the Hundred Days. The original script of the letter has not so far been found, but it is not impossible that it exists among the family papers of the Comtes de Labedoyere. Unlike other letters of Benjamin Franklin, this one appears to have been written in French, for the French text does not read like a translation. It is headed, "From Dr. Franklin to a lady friend in France," and runs:

"You will no doubt remember, my worthy friend, the agreeable day which we passed in the delightful gardens of the 'Moulin Joli' in charming company. You will, perhaps, also remember that after dinner, when we had all gone for a walk, I let the rest of the company proceed and remained behind alone in an alley. Here an indefinite number of dead frames of little flies had been pointed out to us, belonging to the species of ephemaries whose generations succeed one another day by day.

"These insects only exist for ten hours. They are born in the morning and die in the evening. I saw a cluster of them on a leaf. They appeared to be talking. As you are aware, I understand the different tongues of insects, and it is perhaps the too great time and labor I have devoted to their study which has provided my best excuse for not having made more progress in your agreeable tongue. I had sufficient curiosity to listen to the conversation of the little creatures, but as they possessed the vivacity of their country, and because they spoke, according to custom, three and four simultaneously, I only understood a little of what they said. Nevertheless, I was able to distinguish by their expression that they were having a heated argument among themselves regarding the merits of two foreign musicians, of whom one was a gnat and the other a mosquito. They thus passed the time in discussion without paying any attention to the brevity of their life, and as if they had at least a month to live.

Finds Ephemaries Like Us.

"'Happy people,' I said to myself, 'you must certainly live under a very just, wise and kindly government, and because you have no complaint to make, and because no matter of discontent engages your attention, you can spend your life discussing the qualities and defects of the music of your neighbors.'

"Turning my eyes in another direction, I saw an old, white-haired ephemary walking all alone on another leaf.

CECIL ASKS WOMEN OF AMERICA TO HELP BRING WORLD PEACE

NATIONS CAN'T LIVE APART

Says League Is Not Based on Force, but on Discussion and Mutual Agreement.

WOMEN DELEGATES AT ODDS

Special to The New York Times.

DES MOINES, April 13.—Before a meeting of several thousand persons arranged by the National League of Women Voters and with many of the prominent feminine leaders of America present, Lord Robert Cecil appealed tonight to the women of America to remember the terrible sufferings of the World War and to help along the cause of world peace.

"Women have, or ought to have, a special passion for peace," he said. "I know in my country there is scarcely a woman who has not suffered some terrible loss in the late war, a loss more terrible than the loss of her own life. I do not know how it may be in America, but we in Europe are asking how can this thing be stopped for the future? How can we save those who come after us from the agony through which we have gone?

"I have no request to make to you, no advice to give you. I await with interest any comments or questions you may have to make on the matter. I can only say this: Do not, I beseech you, forget the importance of the question—important to all alike, but perhaps most of all to women. Think, I pray you, of the sufferings of the late war, sufferings which many of you yourselves may have endured, sufferings which have been more widely and deeply felt by other nations of the world.

"Think of what is still going on all over the world—unrest and disquiet—[illegible] and [illegible] preparing men everywhere. Do not in the presence of such events pass by on the other side. Do not imply that you are not your brother's keeper. Whatever you may think, in our less exalted moments we cannot avoid our responsibilities as human beings. We are all members of one family. That is an absolute truth, an unavoidable fact."

Declares League Not Based on Force.

Speaking of the League and its work, Lord Robert said:

"I desire to call attention to one characteristic of all these activities of the League. They do not rest on force or compulsion.

"There is one case where compulsion may be necessary, and that is if the nations enter into war without submitting their quarrels to open discussion. In that case only is any attempt made to coerce or compel. Apart from that no nation is bound to accept the decisions of the League, unless they have agreed to do so before hand. The provision requiring unanimity for a decision of the council or assembly is of value in the same direction. It removes the possibility of a minority being oppressed by a majority. The complete independence and sovereignty of every member of the League is thus secured.

"All this in no way hampers the usefulness of the League, for its weapon is not force but public opinion. Its appeal is not made to the lower but to the higher natures of men. It successfully relies, as experience has shown, on the universal desire of man to do the right, whatever their practice may be. That I believe to be an essential feature of the League.

"If you once have an international organization relying on force you immediately enter into the region of force, excitement, violence, and thus you immediately recreate the feelings which are the enemy of international co-operation. It is this feature of the League which differentiates it from any other previous experiment and adds one more divergences from the old-fashioned alliances between nations which were partisan in their nature and relied on methods of force."

The Folly of Alliances.

Speaking of the need of international co-operation, he said:

"There was a time in my own country when men talked of the splendid isolation of their policy which led to the wrecking of the world peace program by the Senate in 1919. There is no mistaking the growth of popular sentiment for genuine American participation in international affairs to re-establish the moral leadership which the Senate sacrificed. That the Administration, notably Mr. Hughes, is coming to recognize that fact and that Senator Borah is drawing much of his inspiration from it, are put down as the factors responsible for the World Court concession to the public feeling.

"With the Republicans proposing to stage another family row over the issue this Summer, it has occurred to me that the Democrats ought to have the benefits of a positive and clearly defined attitude around which they might rally as a united force; that we certainly ought not to overlook the opportunity of reasserting our own leadership in this whole question. It does seem that little by little the Administration is coming to the course which your vision mapped out for America, though nothing really effective has been done to date.

"The proposal to devitalize the project, so far as possible, through the medium of reservations means to some with whom I have talked, that the United States wishes a court without a sheriff's office, the mere moral influence of which is its readiness to support a decision gives practical effect to the word of that court. Others say it puts us in a position of never doing a full duty, of seeking benefits of world co-operation while attaching conditions to exempt us from a fair share of the responsibility. The apparent resentment against the French proposal to attach reservations to the naval limitations treaty is taken to reflect something of the world opinion to our constantly attaching reservations to every commitment to the general welfare.

"If it is possible, I should like very much to have for the guidance and counsel of your many admiring supporters, some expression of your views. It would be most heartening and invaluable."

ARREST 2 MEN HERE, SEEK CHAPMAN LOOT

TRACE PLOT TO FREE HIM

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, Ga., April 13.—Within two hours after their indictment on charges of having aided Gerald Chapman, million dollar mail robber, in his escape from an Athens hospital on April 4, Dominick Didato and Abe Silverstein were arrested in New York City late this afternoon by Department of Justice agents, according to announcement by Lewis J. Baley, agent in charge of the Atlanta Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice.

Federal authorities announced that they plan to bring Didato and Silverstein from New York immediately and place them on trial in the Federal court at Athens on Monday, April 23.

Chapman is believed by the authorities, they said, to be still in or near Athens. His capture will be effected soon, it is thought. He was wounded in being recaptured after his spectacular escape from the Atlanta Federal Penitentiary, where he was serving a twenty-five-year term for engineering the million dollar mail robbery in New York in 1921. He was under treatment for three bullet wounds when he escaped from the hospital.

Didato and Silverstein were traced from Athens to New York the night Chapman disappeared from the hospital, according to Mr. Baley. During the day of the getaway, it was said, the two men frequented the Georgian Hotel in Athens, where Didato registered as J. Karuse of Boston and Silverstein registered as Abe Cohen of New York.

They were said to have been seen riding around Athens that day in company with a woman, who is declared to have given the authorities valuable information concerning them. It was known that Miss Cora Lee Ramey, a student nurse at St. Mary's Hospital from which the bandit escaped, appeared before the Grand Jury, but it has not been disclosed as to whether she was the woman who figured in the automobile ride.

The two men were the only ones indicted. The bills charged them with having conspired to aid and abet Chapman in his escape.

Agents of the Department of Justice were told in Athens that when Silverstein and Didato arrived there they pretended to be narcotic addicts who desired to consult a specialist in that city for treatment for the drug habit. Didato has served a term in the Federal penitentiary here for selling narcotics in violation of the Harrison act, according to the Department of Justice agents.

Silverstein is said to be a prison parolee in New York. Didato, it is alleged, is also known as Peter Rosen and John Karuse.

The exact manner in which Didato and Silverstein assisted Chapman in his escape was not divulged by agents assigned to the case.

Believe Mail Loot Is Hidden.

The prediction of William J. Burns, head of the Investigation Bureau of the Department of Justice, that the persons suspected of aiding Gerald Chapman in his two escapes from the Atlanta Penitentiary and the Athens Hospital would shortly be arrested, appeared to be partly fulfilled yesterday. Federal agents arraigned before United States Commissioner Hitchcock Abe Silverstein and Dominick Didato, on a charge of conspiracy to aid and abet Chapman's second escape.

The prisoners are young and of the type ordinarily found on the lower east

HONEYMOON IN SCOTLAND

Couple Had Lived in England for Three Months—Bride Was 18 on April 7.

Copyright, 1923, by The Chicago Tribune Co.

LONDON, April 13.—Mathilde McCormick, daughter of Harold F. and Edith Rockefeller McCormick of Chicago, was married to Max Oser at the Lewisham Registry Office at 11:30 o'clock yesterday morning. It is believed that they are now spending their honeymoon in Scotland. Lewisham is a suburb, southeast of London, near Greenwich.

As the English law requires that at least one contracting party to the marriage have a residence in the district where the marriage is to take place three weeks before the ceremony, Oser had been living for three weeks at 127 Ardgowan Road, Hither Green. This was the address given on the license.

The facts concerning Oser were entered as follows on the license:

"William (Guillaume) Max Oser, aged 45; bachelor; profession, Major, Swiss Army; residence, 127 Ardgowan Road, Hither Green; father's name, John Jakob Ruddolf, deceased; his profession, riding master."

Oser proved that he had registered at the Bow Street Police Station as an alien and he showed papers proving that Basle, Switzerland, was his home.

On the license Miss McCormick's data were:

"Mathilde McCormick, aged 18, a spinster of independent means; residence, Old Court Mansions, Kensington, London; father, Harold Fowler McCormick; his profession, agricultural machinery manufacturer."

Miss McCormick showed written permission from her father for her marriage to Oser. The permission was witnessed by a British Consul in America.

The witnesses were E. L. Martin and P. W. Cowham. The marriage was performed by Frank Pelcham, Registrar of Marriages for the District of Lewisham, as dispensation was given to Mr. Owen, Superintendent of Registrars of Lewisham.

Although 18 is the legal age at which a woman can marry in England, the Registrar asked for written consent of the father when Miss McCormick stated that she was 18. Permission was presented at once to the satisfaction of both officials.

So far as is known the couple started for Scotland immediately after the ceremony.

Miss Mathilde has been living quietly in London for three months under an assumed name, while Oser has been living in London but under his own name. During that time they have been seriously reported in Switzerland, France, Italy and Ireland. Ashurst, Morris, Crisp & Co., London solicitors for the International Harvester Company, leased the flat where Mathilde has been living.

The flat was at 5, Old Court Mansions, Kensington. She had been living there with Miss Julia Mansold, a friend, in whose name the flat was rented. Mathilde was known to the flat as Miss Mansold's sister. The servants were foreigners, who talk little with other occupants of the building.

Mathilde left her flat yesterday morning and returned two hours later, accompanied by Oser. She packed up and left for Scotland last night, leaving no address.

The mother is said to have continued her opposition to the marriage, but Mathilde came of age a few days ago and she was therefore free to marry without her mother's consent.

Oser lived at the Devere Hotel, two blocks away, and was a constant visitor

Wilson for the World Court Unconditionally; Says Candor Would Lead Us to Join League

PHILADELPHIA, April 13.—The Public Ledger will print tomorrow a copyrighted dispatch from Robert Berry, its Washington correspondent, stating that ex-President Woodrow Wilson is opposed to President Harding's proposal for "conditional" American adhesion to the World Court, but favors "unconditional" adhesion.

This expression of Mr. Wilson's view is embodied in a letter sent by Mr. Wilson to Representative Arthur B. Rouse of Kentucky, Chairman of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee, now at his home in Covington, who had addressed an inquiry to Mr. Wilson.

Mr. Wilson's reply is quoted as follows:

"My Dear Mr. Rouse:

"In reply to your letter of March 20, let me say that I approve not of the 'conditional' but of the unconditional adhesion of the United States to the World Court set up under the auspices of the League of Nations, though I think it would be more consistent with the fame of the United States for candor and courage to become a member of the League of Nations and share with the other members the full responsibilities which its covenant involves.

"Respectfully yours,

"WOODROW WILSON."

Mr. Rouse's letter to Mr. Wilson reads:

"My dear Mr. President:

"Since my return from Washington I have found a growing popular discussion of the proposal by President Harding to have the United States join the Permanent Court of International Justice, established by the Leagues of Nations. There is, moreover, a very deep interest and there are numerous inquiries as to what your views are with respect to the conditional adhesion of the United States to the court.

"Among our Democratic friends the feeling is somewhat general that the Republicans are coming by steady, even though reluctant, steps to repudiation

SAYS MURPHY QUIT TO AVOID A PROFIT OF $5,000 A DAY

GLUCOSE DEAL DESCRIBED

HE WAS BEGGED TO STAY IN

Leader Annoyed When He Heard Hartog Was Boasting of His Influence.

Arthur J. Baldwin, personal attorney for Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany, testifying yesterday in Mr. Murphy's suit to recover $375,000 he paid Louis N. Hartog for an interest in his malto-dextrine business in the war days of 1918, said the chief reason Murphy wanted to get out was because Hartog was making an "unholy profit" in food profiteering. Another reason was because the newspapers were criticising profiteering, and he heard that Hartog was boasting that he was Murphy's partner.

Mr. Baldwin, continuing before Supreme Court Justice Davis and a jury the story of the Tammany leader's venture into malto-dextrine during the war, testified under questioning by his law partner, Martin Conboy, who is Mr. Murphy's trial counsel, that when he saw the possibilities of the business he urged Hartog to obtain larger quarters for his plant for the manufacture of the glucose product used as a substitute for malt in beverages. Finally a building was contracted for.

The witness said that discord had developed between Hartog and Paul Klopstock, a broker who was willing to give him an order for 30,000 tons of the product to be shipped to the British Government for use in brewing beer for the army. Although the big contract was never signed, a credit was established and shipments began. Klopstock complained that Hartog was not shipping all he could but was favoring [illegible] the foreign order to raise his price here. A new agreement was made by which Hartog agreed to ship a certain amount of his output to Great Britain, and later, after Klopstock had set detectives to watch the plant, he contended that the agreement was not being kept.

Murphy Takes Quarter Interest.

Mr. Baldwin said he then protested to Hartog that it was not fair to neglect the British order because the Murphy interest was in that business chiefly. Hartog suggested that Mr. Murphy attend his interest to cover the entire output. It was then agreed, on April 1, 1918, that the stock of the North Kensington Refinery be increased to $1,000,000, and that Mr. Murphy take a quarter interest, paying $125,000 cash and the remainder in a note payable in ninety days. Mr. Murphy also got an option on $200,000 stock additional, running to Oct. 1 that year.

The testimony showed further that the corporation was formally organized, and that Hartog, his son, and James J. Hines, Tammany leader in Harlem, who brought Hartog and Murphy together, were chosen directors. A resolution for the opening of a bank account for the new corporation was adopted and was left at the Chatham and Phenix National Bank on April 4, but previous testimony of an employe of the bank showed that the Murphy checks were deposited in the old account maintained by Hartog under his trade name, the North Kensington Refinery. Mr. Baldwin stated that he handed over Mr. Murphy's check for $125,000 without waiting for the transfer of Hartog's business to the corporation, because of the delay that would be occasioned for the necessary inventory.

Mr. Baldwin said he went to Washington and interviewed the officials of the Food Administration in the matter of getting enough glucose to fill the British order for malto-dextrines and pointed out that since glucose was made from corn, of which there was plenty, it would save the use of barley by the British brewers, barley being scarce. The officials agreed with him that the shipments of the product would help win the war and promised help, not only in making the shipments, but in getting a sufficient supply of glucose from the Corn Products Company.

Letters written by Mr. Baldwin from London, in which he and Mr. Murphy were staying, were introduced dealing to some extent with inability to get enough glucose. In one of them Mr. Baldwin wrote that if the supply did not improve it would be necessary to "put on a little pressure," Mr.

Propose Hylan and Craig As New Names for Streets

The Committee on Public Thoroughfares of the Board of Aldermen decided yesterday to recommend that the new Coney Island boardwalk, to be opened on May 15, should be named the Riegelmann Boardwalk in honor of the Borough President of Brooklyn.

It was learned that while the committee was considering the proposal to change the name of Southfield Boulevard, which runs for fifteen miles across Staten Island, to Hylan Boulevard, after the Mayor, it also had under consideration the naming of a small unnamed street near Tottenville, Craig Avenue, after the Controller. Both names were suggested by Edward J. Atwell of Staten Island.

PACKERS RAISE PAY OF 200,000 WORKERS

FOUR BIG FIRMS TAKE LEAD

Example of Armour, Swift, Wilson and Cudahy Will Be Followed by Others.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, April 13.—A wage increase of about 11 per cent. for workers in the packing industry was announced tonight. It affects about 20,000 employes in Chicago plants and about 60,000 in outside cities. 80,000 immediately and will eventually benefit 200,000.

The increases were negotiated through employes' councils at the Armour, Swift and Wilson plants and the other packers fell into line.

Common labor, which at present receives 37½ cents an hour, will receive 42½ cents, an increase of 5 cents an hour, which means something like $3.50 to $5 a week, depending on the number of hours worked.

Semi-skilled labor which has had more than 37½ and under 47 cents an hour receives 4 cents an hour more.

Skilled workers now getting 47 cents and more has been receive a 5 cent increase. Women on piece work increases [illegible]

Pieceworkers' rates are to be adjusted and are not to be above the rate of Nov. 22, 1921, nor more than 10 per cent. of the present rate.

Almost 10,000 building craftsmen and laborers working under the Landis award also were informed of increases tonight. These range from 12½ cents to 18 cents an hour, and are effective on May 31.

The new wages in the packing plants become effective Monday. Word from other packing centres tonight was that the general move follows the new rates announced for Chicago, with a few differentials.

For months wages have been going up here and there, the most common advances being 10 or 12 per cent. Textile and steel mills and factories in general have been making increases. A few days ago the steel industry increased the pay of common labor from 38 to 40 cents an hour, as compared with an increase of from 37½ cents an hour to 43¾ cents given to unskilled labor by the packers.

The peak rate for common labor in the packing plants in 1920 was 53 cents an hour.

At the Swift plant the joint council some time ago agreed on a week's vacation with pay for all employes of five years' service in the case of men, and three years in that of women. About 25,000 employes of the Swift Company in various cities are affected by the wage change.

OMAHA, April 13.—Wage increases for all employes of the Cudahy Packing Company plants in Omaha, Sioux City, Wichita and Kansas City, effective April 16, ranging from 2 to 5 cents an hour, with proportionate increases for those engaged in piecework, were announced here this afternoon.

Announcement of the increases followed a two-day conference between representatives of the company and employes held under an industrial relation plan.

Employes now receiving 37½ cents an hour or less are to get a five-cent increase; those getting more than 37½ and under 47 are to get a four-cent advance, while those receiving 47 cents or more are to benefit by a three-cent raise. Proportionate advance for pieceworkers restores them to the scale as in effect on Nov. 6, 1921.

As Only Witness at Hirshfield Inquiry He Asserts That Hylan Ignored Complaints.

CITES TWO SPECIFIC CASES

Three Policemen Split $800 and Two Cases of Liquor, He Declares —Ignores Contempt Threat.

Widespread corruption or inefficiency in the enforcement of the prohibition law is the general condition among the New York City police, as reflected by years of observation as a City Magistrate and by the records of the District Attorney's office, Magistrate Joseph E. Corrigan declared yesterday, testifying before David Hirshfield, Commissioner of Accounts. His dependence as a Magistrate, he said, had forced him to the belief that there was "no honest effort on the part of the police to enforce the law.

"If a police force cannot get more than 658 indictments and eighteen convictions out of 13,000 cases," he said, after quoting from the District Attorney's records of last year, "it is either absolutely inefficient or criminally corrupt.

"If the arrests were justified either the police made corrupt bargains with the defendants before the arraignments before the Magistrate Courts, or that a fair trial was assured, or after these arraignments or that a dismissal by the Grand Jury was assured, or the Magistrates, the Grand Jury and the District Attorney's office are corrupt and in league with the bootleggers.

"These figures do not lie. Not even the most astute abominators of the 'plain darbeen' could twist them to show a decent administration of the law."

Magistrate Corrigan declared at the outset of his testimony that he was a Magistrate—not a detective. He said that he had been on the bench for [illegible] years and had [illegible] to grant [illegible] cases. Whenever [illegible] he had [illegible] his charge of hearing [illegible] police. In response to Commissioner Hirshfield's insistent questioning for specific instances to back up his charges, the Magistrate gave two cases with names, in which, he said, there was evidence of bootleg profiting.

Says Mayor Ignored Complaints.

"I have called the attention of the police authorities and the attention of the Mayor in private to what I thought were abuses in the Police Department and the results were all," he declared in reply to a question from the Commissioner as to why he had not followed up the cases with complaints.

The Magistrate said that his testimony with regard to both of the specific cases which he cited was based on information that he had received. In one case he declined to give the name of his informant and this led to an intimation by Commissioner Hirshfield that his refusal might result in contempt proceedings.

One case concerned a raid on an Italian restaurant at 136 West Broadway, Street, run by a man named Carlo. "The police searched this place and could not find anything," he said. "Then they broke into a place next door and drank about seventy-five bottles of beer, breaking off the tops of the bottles. I am also told that three or four hours later some of this liquor was offered for sale by civilians in the Bronx."

The other related to a raid on a saloon owned by a man named McGrath. Magistrate Corrigan said that he had been informed that McGrath had made a bargain with the policemen by which three of them were to take two cases of liquor and $300 to drop the case. One of the men named in this charge was "this" officer, McAllister. I had to dismiss the other day." He declared that McGrath's complaint to Commissioner Enright had resulted in demotion for one of the policemen and promotion for McAllister.

Clashes With Hirshfield.

Sharp clashes between Commissioner Hirshfield and Magistrate Corrigan marked the session. The Commissioner declared that the Magistrate was "talking for effect and not to help," and that his statements were based only on "surmise and general rumors." He disputed the logic of the Magistrate's conclusions from the District Attorney's figures, asserting that they proved only that the police were doing their duty in making arrests, but that the Magistrates were turning out about two-thirds of the cases and that a larger proportion of them were turned out by the Grand Juries.

"Grand Jurors are human and can be voltstead act is not popular," said the Commissioner.

Magistrate Corrigan answered the implication that "in thousands of cases a year is made between the time it gets to Magistrate's Court and get to the Grand Jury."

"You know," said the Commissioner, "that the police could not stop [illegible] going even if there were a hundred thousand policemen. You know that if you were Police Commissioner of the City of New York you could not stop it." "I frank to say that I am disgusted with your testimony," said Mr. Hirshfield. "I expected that you would come here with some facts, but outside of the Corrigan and McGrath cases you have given us nothing. I regret to say it, but I am forced to the opinion that [illegible] statements from the bench are [illegible] first by your political associates, and then by your natural dislike of [illegible] headline in the newspapers. [illegible] know you can stand [illegible] Police Commissioner [illegible] the police."

Politicians Seeking Judge Barton's Place; Business Men Want Him Kept in Labor Board

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—Three vacancies on the Railroad Labor Board are expected to be filled tomorrow by recess appointments by President Harding. Appointments to vacancies in the Federal Reserve Board and the Farm Loan Bureau will be delayed a few days.

The White House was silent today regarding the changes of the present members of the Railroad Labor Board, whose terms expire April 15. These are Judge R. M. Barton, representing the public group; Alvey A. Adee, labor member, and Horace Baker, representing railway management.

Rumors were current in several quarters that the President had decided at the last minute not to reappoint Judge Barton, who is a Democrat. He has been urged to name a regular Republican for this post. One report was that former Representative Andrew J. Volstead, of Minnesota, had received the offer of Judge Barton's place. Mr. Volstead was a White House caller yesterday, but the announced purpose of his visit was given as a farewell call before leaving Washington.

Countering the political drive against Judge Barton has been influence asserted in his behalf by business men, as well as railroad executives, on the ground that throughout his service he has been against either labor or railroad domination of that body. These advocates maintain that, regardless of Judge Barton's political affiliations, his services entitle him to reappointment.

Within a few days Presidents Harding is expected to appoint Henry M. Dawes of Chicago as Controller of the Currency.

The death of Milo Campbell, having left a vacancy for a "dirt farmer" member of the Federal Reserve Board, several candidates have been proposed for the place. Senators Cummins and other members of the Iowa delegation in Congress called at the White House this afternoon to urge the appointment of E. H. Cunningham of Des Moines.

Paris Hears of Attacks on Mussolini's Life; One by Royal Guard, Another in His Car

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, April 13.—Two attempts have been made on the life of Premier Mussolini of Italy, according to Aux Ecoutes, which declares that all mention of them has been kept out of the press by the Italian censorship.

The first attempt, the Aux Ecoutes says, was made in the Chigi Palace by a royal guard, who fired a revolver at the Premier. The shot missed the mark and the guard was seized, but almost immediately ordered freed by the intended victim. The second attempt was made, it says, while Mussolini was returning in an automobile from the country. The Premier was driving, and that fact saved his life, says the Aux Ecoutes, as the chauffeur who was sitting at his side was shot dead. Mussolini drew his revolver and wounded the assailant, who [illegible] escaped. Carabineers, who came running to the scene, the Premier ordered not to say a word of the occurrence.

Attempts on the life of Italy's "strong man," while kept out of the press, have flown about Rome by word of mouth, it adds, and have caused great anxiety among Romans for the safety of the Premier. He is necessitated for exposing his life by always entering and leaving the city by the same gate, and without being accompanied. To these approaches, he answers: "I would rather refuse all the pleasure of dying like a King or an Emperor."

have given me an assistance which would bear out your accusations against the police.

Commissioner Hirshfield began Magistrate Corrigan. Then the Commissioner had a private talk with the Magistrate, and when they came out of the room Fallon said the Commissioner said that subpoenas would be issued for Mrs. McGrath and Caridi, and they probably would be called as witnesses when the inquiry was resumed at Magistrate Corrigan's court.

Throughout the hearing Magistrate Corrigan was cool and unruffled, despite Commissioner Hirshfield's frequent sallies. Whenever the Commissioner would interrupt him in the middle of an answer, Corrigan would wait until he could begin where he had left off. As a result of these waiting tactics he was generally successful in getting his answers into the record and in offsetting efforts to divert him from his train of testimony.

Magistrate Corrigan was the only witness called. Among those who listened attentively to his testimony was Harry A. Gordon, attorney for Commissioner Enright in his fight to oust Mr. Cuvillier's agents. Another was Louis A. Cuvillier.

At the outset Commissioner Hirshfield outlined the purposes of the investigation, which was called at the order of Mayor Hylan following Mr. Cuvillier's charges of bossism. "Some errors have occurred as to the definition of the investigation," Commissioner Hirshfield said that the ordinary rules of evidence held in the inquiry and that he expected the witness to give "competent testimony and not generalities."

Offers to Guide Inquiry.

"Perhaps," said Magistrate Corrigan, "the information that I have acquired from almost twenty years on the bench may serve some good purpose in showing you how to start your inquiry and what leads you may follow. I can give you my conclusions from the observations of hundreds of cases."

The testimony then continued as follows:

Q.—Judge, I think it was on the 31st of January, you made a statement while sitting in West Market Court in behalf of the cops of the City of New York are bootleggers, and I believe you made some other statements; I would like a statement somewhat like that after. I don't recall the exact words.

Q.—After having explained to you our position, will you state whether that statement was true? Is any knowledge that you have personally of bootlegging on the part of policemen or of any wrongdoing in connection with bootlegging of those kinds on the Police Department? A.—If under the definition of a bootlegger you mean that the police actually deal in liquor, and I had been there when the liquor was sold, then I know of no particular case of bootlegging on the part of policemen. But I have been on the bench for nearly twenty-seven years, and I have heard, and have been told over New York City, in all the various districts of the Magistrates' Courts, that policemen have been implicated and I have been forced to draw certain conclusions, which to my mind justify me in making that statement. I have some figures further on that I obtained from the District Attorney's office and from the Magistrates' Courts which I thought might be useful.

Q.—When you made that statement that many of the policemen are bootleggers, you did not say it as indicating that you had knowledge of the bootlegging transaction?

A.—Yes. A.—I never saw any policemen sell liquor.

Q.—Do you know of any particular policeman—have you been told by any one of such a case? Give us the name of the person. Where one case rests on your individual evidence, there are one or two cases. There was Caridi. He ran an Italian restaurant at 164 West Houston Street, Policeman Lutgi went in there four or five months ago—haven't got the date. The landlord made a promise—Luigi tells me this—and did not find anything and went into the premises next door and found a set of liquor which belonged to him, and which he values at about $20,000. He told me there were about twenty-three officers engaged in making Caridi and breaking down the premises; that in the course of the raid they drank about seventy-five bottles of this liquor. They just broke the top off and threw it off. Caridi broke a new bottle and Luigi said that within the next four hours after the raid was made some of his liquor was being offered for sale by civilians in the Bronx.

Names Luigi Caridi.

Q.—What is his name? I want to subpoena him. A.—Luigi Caridi, and Mr. Lockhart is his counsel. Luigi's address is 126 West Houston Street. That was one specific case. Of course, Luigi was not under oath, but he told me that and I simply tell you what he told me.

Q.—Now, you believed that statement? A.—I certainly did.

Q.—Did you get Luigi Caridi to make a complaint and did you issue a warrant against the scoundrels? A.—I did not. It was not in my district.

Q.—You are a City Magistrate? A.—I was not sitting in that court at that time and he did not come in to make a complaint. He was advised by his counsel, I believe, not to make a complaint.

Q.—Now, that is one case, is that? A.—I think his counsel told me so.

Q.—But as a City Magistrate you have jurisdiction in the entire City of New York? A.—Yes. But I am talking of the City of New York.

Q.—I understand that; but if a flagrant violation at that kind came to your attention as a City Magistrate, you would issue a warrant and brought those accused before you. A.—I don't see how I could unless Luigi came forward and made a complaint. I don't see how I could force him to make a complaint.

Pressed for an explanation of why he did not make a complaint, Magistrate Corrigan said:

"You must realize, Commissioner, that to a magistrate positions of great many things are told in confidence or in semi-confidence in the way of giving him information which he would not be justified in forcing a man to give."

"But, Judge," said the Commissioner, "if Luigi's statement to you is true, it is a very serious proposition. As City Magistrate you should have taken action immediately. I know that I would if I were in your place. Of course, you and I may differ. Let me ask you, did you call the Police Commissioner's or the Chief Inspector's attention to this statement of Luigi's?

"I don't remember," was the reply. "I am not obligated in any good faith by calling his attention to anything. I have called the attention of the police authorities and I have called the attention of the Mayor to what I thought were abuses in the Police Department and the results were nil."

"Did you go to the Mayor or to Police Commissioner Enright with any facts or did you simply tell them some general ideas you had? Did you tell them something you heard from somebody else?"

"I went down to see the Mayor."

Q.—Will you tell me what facts you gave that he could have acted on? A.—I went down to see the Mayor about three years ago in reference to two officers who I thought were not telling the truth in these cases of social evil. The Mayor said he knew the names of these two officers and he believed from the information he had that they were acting the part, and made a memorandum of the names and put it on his desk. The names were Kelly and O'Malley, as I recall it. I thought that meeting would result in action being taken against Kelly and O'Malley, but for a long time afterward they continued in the same course, so I thought I wasted my time and didn't go down again.

Q.—Then you never called the attention of the Mayor to any bootlegging policemen? A.—This was not bootlegging.

Q.—You didn't call Commissioner Enright's attention to any bootlegging matters? A.—No.

Q.—So because your word concerning two policemen who were acting as the Vice Enforcement squad? A.—Two in the Vice Enforcement Squad.

Q.—Three years ago because your word was not acted upon immediately, therefore, you think it is granted that no attention should be paid to your complaints concerning anybody and you never push any? A.—That was not the only reason.

Q.—Did you call on the Mayor but once? A.—Only once, I think.

Mischief Because Denied.

Commissioner Hirshfield's assertion that he did not remember that Magistrate Corrigan ever criticized the police under Mayor Mitchel led to a long discussion, in which pool-rooms, William Travers Jerome and other subjects were brought up.

"If your will be fair in the matter," said the Commissioner, "you will have to admit that gambling and vice flourished during the days of Jerome, where today under the administration of Police Commissioner Enright and District Attorney Banton they're not flourishing proposition. If there is anything of that kind it is an exception."

"I think there is just as much and more vice and probably fewer pool rooms now than there used to be. But the vice has taken an entirely different form," Magistrate Corrigan retorted.

Q.—Has it come to your attention as a Magistrate that there are houses of ill repute or gambling houses in the City of New York, and if so will you give us the addresses so we can give them to the Police Department? A.—I don't know of any.

Q.—Personally, did you ever call the attention of the Mayor or of Police Commissioner Enright to the existence of vice and gambling and the places where vice and gambling are being conducted? A.—I don't know of any such incident. I never claimed to know of such matters.

Q.—Except that you said—Judge, I think thinking, Judge; sometimes it gives a person a headache," retorted Hirshfield. "Tell us the facts. You know, what I think and what you think doesn't matter. It's a question of what is the facts."

Then Commissioner Hirshfield, Fallon and Gordon went into a huddle, and Fallon said:

"Commissioner Hirshfield, we there will be no questions as to whether or not you had an opportunity to explain on what you base your charge against the Police Department. I will let you make any statement you want to make."

Go ahead. Make any statement you want to make on which you base it, and of course we will reserve the right to ask some questions after you have made it."

"If you want me to make a statement of what I base it on—"

"Well, I'd like you to keep out statements that are not based on facts as much as you possibly can, because it's unjust toward the persons against whom the accusations are directed to go around and broadcast in the newspapers without any foundation."

"Well, let's put it this way: My experience on the bench, my observation of the testimony adduced by the police in liquor cases, my observation of the way in which those cases are made and brought in, and that I constantly hear around the court—because you can't prevent it in the court—"

Q.—You mean gossip around the court? A.—Gossip, that it's the very rule, a fact, I presume, for me to believe that the prosecution of a very large number of police cases was got up at the request or under the direction of the police to enforce the law and satisfy complaints.

Q.—You mean—you are talking about the Mullin-Gage law? A.—Mullin-Gage law, of course.

Asks for Experiments.

Q.—Now, wait a minute. Will you now step and tell us what these experiences were and give us some facts upon which you base them? A.—I thought you asked me to make a general statement of what I believe and of what I based my charge on, and I am trying to tell you that.

"Go ahead," said the Commissioner.

"I based them on observation and knowledge of what went on in the courts."

"And the gossip that you heard around the courtroom," broke in the Commissioner.

Magistrate Corrigan persisted. "Now I will give you some figures," he said.

"From April 21 to Dec. 31, 1922—the Mullan-Gage law was passed in 27—the District Attorney's office received 5,597 complaints from the Magistrate's Court for violation of the Mullan-Gage law. That means that 5,597 people were held for violation of that law. Out of those 5,597, 948 were indicted and 3,612 dismissed.

Q.—Has the Grand Jury had anything to do with the dismissal of these complaints? A.—Complaints are dismissed by the Grand Jury."

Q.—You don't hold the police responsible for the action of the Grand Jury, do you? A.—I hold the police responsible for the testimony given before the Grand Jury, and in the police, don't give them evidence, they can't indict.

Q.—Judge, how do you know what the testimony of the police is before the Grand Jury? A.—I don't know, but I know what the testimony must have been in the Magistrate's Court to justify holding.

Q.—Wait a second. Have you ever seen the minutes before the Grand Jury in any of these cases? A.—I have not.

Q.—Now, what is the basis for what the testimony before the Grand Jury was? A.—I do to a certain extent. I know it wasn't sufficient to find an indictment, or else an indictment would result.

Q.—How do you justify your charge here that these thousands of cases were dismissed by Grand Juries because the police testimony wasn't set the data. The second is the promise—Luigi tells me this—and did not find anything and went into the premises next door and found a set of liquor which belonged to him, and which he values at about $20,000. Letter of Sailor on Whisky Ship to Wife in Scotland Is Intercepted in Seizure.

GET 3 BOATS AND CARGOES

Customs agents here yesterday captured three rum-runners, two being overtaken by Government boats and the third seized at a pier in Brooklyn, representing the biggest day's work in this line of enforcement of the Volstead act in several weeks. Besides the seizures of the boats, the agents confiscated liquors valued at more than $100,000 and arrested seventeen men.

On one of the prisoners was found a letter that had been written by a member of the crew of the foreign vessel, S. V. Istar, an alleged liquor ship stationed off Sandy Hook for the last two months, to his wife in Scotland. The missive describes conditions aboard the vessel and clearly indicates that life on a rum-runner is far less desirable than ashore. The sailor was thoroughly disgusted with the smell of rum and the drunken condition of the other sailors and expressed a strong desire to be back home.

The ocean-going tug Peerless of this city, said to be valued at $60,000, with a cargo of 600 cases of Black and White Scotch, furnished the biggest capture of the day. The tug was taken in the Narrows by Customs Inspectors Samuel Pollock, James Nail and Frank Thropp aboard the customs boat Lexington.

This is the second time within the last few months that the tug has been seized by the police. Early in May it was in pursuit some time ago and the race led past City Island and up Long Island Sound. She was reported then to have 5,000 cases of liquor aboard.

They were first examined by Edward Barnes, Assistant Solicitor to the Collector of the Port, and later taken to the Federal Building, where they were arraigned before United States Commissioner Samuel M. Hitchcock and held for hearing on April 25. Snyder was released in bail of $5,000, while the others gave bonds of $3,500 each.

The shore seizure was made by customs agents at the Thirty-first Street Pier, Brooklyn. A small launch, K-10443, with eight bags of Benedictine, containing 360 bottles, valued at $3,000, fell a victim to Customs Guards Edward Fitzsimmons and John Fisher. Jack Green of 522 East Houston Street and Eddie Leonard of 560 Grand Street were arrested while loading the sacks into the motor boat, the guards said. The Benedictine, it is said, came from the steamship Patria of the Fabre Line, which arrived in New York recently from Marseilles, Genoa and Naples.

The third seizure by the customs men came last night when the Senator, a Coast Guard cutter, in command of Lieutenant P. J. Roach, captured a motor boat with 100 cases of liquor and 50 cases of liquor on board. The Lexington went from New York to meet the motor launch and bring in the liquor and prisoners.

One of the prisoners taken off the tug boat Peerless had a letter in his pocket which he expected to mail here. The letter, which was written by a sailor on the yacht S. V. Istar to his wife, Jenny, in Greenock, Scotland, and was dated March 18, is said in the possession of Major John Hollis Clark, Jr., Assistant United States District Attorney. It will be held as evidence when needed to support the contention of the Government that foreign vessels are aiding violations of customs, tariff and national prohibition laws. The intercepted letter in part said:

Letter Tells of Hard Life on Ship.

"By the looks of it we will be a couple of months before we leave here for Greenock. We have only got rid of about 4,000 cases of whisky so far, and it has taken us two months to get that out so you may well guess how long we will be. We still have 18,000 cases aboard and the weather is no good for the boats to come off as it is always blowing. We are laying about nine miles off the land. A boat loaded with fifty odd cases of whisky was lost on Tuesday night with the heavy seas. We are on watch all the time and we get called out at all hours to see if the boats have any come alongside and I can tell you we are all fed up day after day with bad food and rotten meat to eat. The head ones aboard are trying to tell us we will be home in the beginning of May, but it doesn't look like it. I wouldn't be so bad if we could go ashore once a week but we are penned up like convicts aboard here.

"It takes some doing to keep up one's spirits here. I wouldn't do a second trip in this ship for twenty pound a month especially running whiskey. Sometimes I feel like getting drunk to cheer me up but getting mixed up to keep teetotal. So long as we get good weather homeward bound I don't mind if we are here another month but I know I wouldn't like to come through what we came through coming over here. I have the Cameronia coming into New York yesterday from Glasgow. I wish I had a chance of going home in her on Saturday.

"Do you know Jenny I haven't had a bath since I left home as I got cold in this ship I suffered in case I get a cold. I don't feel like one now until we get home as I haven't got a decent shirt of clothes last to put on. I wish I was home. out of this ship, for when with drunken men and the smell of the drink it near knocks me sick. This is no place for anyone teetotal as they don't like me a bit because I won't drink with them.

"I expect that I will be going to Halifax in a fortnight's time and if she is going to come back here I am going to try and get out of her. The whole crowd may try and get paid off and send home and I pray to God that we will. I couldn't express in words what I think about it but if I am spared and well to come home I will tell you all about it."

19 POLICEMEN HIT BY 'FIXER' INQUIRY

Suspended Men Will Be Tried at Once on Charges of Civil Service Frauds.

Mayor Hylan's recent order to Commissioner Enright to investigate reports that "fixers" were going among city employes promising, for a monetary consideration, to use their influence with heads of departments to obtain promotions and smooth over difficulties, was believed to have precipitated the suspension yesterday of nineteen policemen in connection with alleged Civil Service frauds.

Deputy Police Commissioner John A. Leach said last evening that charges were being prepared against the policemen and would be prosecuted in the trial room in Police Headquarters in a few days by Assistant Corporation Counsel Mayer. Old police officials do not recall when so large a number of policemen have been suspended from duty at one time. It was understood that the men were accused of having paid $1,500 each to a "fixer" for promotion to the rank of sergeant through tampering with the papers in the examinations of the Civil Service Commission.

An investigation was started last Summer when it was alleged that Policeman Patrick J. Twomey of the Gunnersboro Bridge Station collected money from other policemen, which he turned it over to Michael J. Burke, who kept a saloon at 2,121 Lexington Avenue, and who previously had been a policeman. Those suspended besides Twomey were:

George von Mara, Webster Avenue Station; Benjamin W. Foster, Brooklyn Bridge Station; James F. McGannon, Bathgate Avenue Station; August Suhr, Traffic Precinct B; William J. O'Gorman, Brooklyn Bridge Station; Joseph O'Keefe, West 135th Street Station; Victor L. Chavrett, Astoria (Queens) Precinct; Charles F. Hayes, Alexander Avenue Station; Timothy F. Grady, attached to the staff of Inspector Thomas F. Wade of the Fourth Inspection District Headquarters, Liberty Avenue, Brooklyn; William H. Byrne, Motorcycle Squad No. 1; John Hewitt, Queensborough Bridge Precinct; Joseph R. Devlin, Motorcycle Squad No. 2; John H. Oliver, East 104th Street Station; Dennis F. Lynch, Motorcycle Squad No. 1; John L. Griffin, Queensboro Bridge Station; Patrick J. Clancy, Queensboro Bridge Station, and Elbert M. Fagan and Harry McGough, both of Motorcycle Squad No. 2.

DISCOVER 500,000 FALSE PRESCRIPTIONS

Dry Agents Report on Five Months' Work in Checking Up Druggists' Sales.

Five hundred thousand counterfeit and forged physicians' whisky prescription blanks have been discovered in retail drug stores in New York City in the last five months by prohibition agents checking up the permit holders, according to Palmer Canfield, Federal Prohibition Director for this State. Prior to the adoption of the new prescription form on Nov. 1, last, the number of "fake" prescriptions accepted at drug stores was far greater, it was said, according to Director Canfield, who said, "that New York was entirely flooded at one time with bogus prescriptions."

The Director declared that "since we have been conducting a persistent drive against druggists who accept bad prescriptions and have revoked a great many permits, the sale of genuine prescriptions and of liquor in general has increased and is expected in short time to have it down to a minimum."

It was pointed out by prohibition officials that a holder of a permit to sell liquor and alcohol for medicinal purposes has the opportunity of clearing on these items alone more than $3,000 a year in doing business on a strictly legal basis. Each retail druggist is entitled to withdraw 100 gallons of distilled spirits and 100 gallons of fermented wines every two months, it was said. The distilled spirits may be either whisky or alcohol, or both. Ordinarily, a druggist withdraws 50 gallons of whisky and 50 gallons of alcohol. At times, however, a druggist will withdraw 2,500 pints of whisky annually. He buys it for $1.50 a pint and sells it for $3 to $3.50 a pint, thereby making a profit of $1.50 to $2 on each pint, prohibition officials say. The net profit on whisky is roughly estimated at $3,000 a year by these officials, and they consider that an additional amount of $3,000 is cleared on the alcohol withdrawn on permits.

WINS ASTRONOMICAL PRIZE.

La Lande Award for 1922 Goes to Dr. Russell of Princeton.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., April 13.—Henry Norris Russell, internationally-known scientist and Professor of Astronomy at Princeton University, has received the La Lande prize for 1922, it was announced here today. The award is made each year for the most interesting research or contribution in astronomy.

Established in 1802 by the famous French astronomer La Lande, the prize pays 540 francs annually to its beneficiary. Dr. Russell also won the Henry Draper medal last year, a similar award.

Dr. Russell, in collaboration with Dr. Hinks of England, set out to apply a new method of determining the distances of stars by photography, and after much work published his results, showing the approximate distances of fifty-five stars. He showed that stars may be divided into two classes, giants and dwarfs, and that the astronomer, by observing the spectrum of a star, can tell with reasonable exactness the total light emitted by the star, as well as its distance from the earth.

HINES FINDS NO GRAFT.

Says He Has Discovered No Evidence of It in Veterans' Bureau.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—In his six weeks' incumbency as Director of the United States Veterans' Bureau, Major General Frank T. Hines said today he had discovered no evidence to support graft charges being made against any present or former members of the bureau.

An investigation into the affairs of the bureau during the directorship of Charles R. Forbes is now being made by a Senate committee, for which Major General John F. O'Ryan is special counsel. General O'Ryan said a few days ago that he was convinced that the honesty on a large scale would be uncovered by the Senate committee investigation, although he did not say whether he believed this evidence would be discovered among employes of the bureau or outside contractors.

PROHIBITION TO STAY, SAYS JUDGE AT YALE

SEES GAIN IN BRIDGEPORT

He Predicts the Government Will Eventually Prevail on British to Block Liquor Supply.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., April 13.—Statistics showing a decrease of from 180 to 200 per cent. in all classes of crime were presented tonight by Judge William E. Boardman of the City Court of Bridgeport and President of the Connecticut Bar Association, in addressing the Yale Student Council which recently took action in co-operation with President Angell to drive bootleggers from the campus.

"The nation cannot be half 'wet' and half 'dry.' The prohibition law is here to stay. The alternative of enforcement is the wide-open town, disregard for this law and a tendency to disregard every law."

Judge Boardman's figures disclosed that of the 841 saloons operating in Bridgeport in 1921 only 40 now remained. Instead of a "saturnalia of crime" existing in Connecticut, as Senator McGrath of Waterbury asserted in the State Senate recently, Judge Boardman's data showed that arrests for drunkenness dropped in Bridgeport from 2,072 in 1916 to 315 in 1923. Of the 561 liquor cases tried in Bridgeport, three out of four had been found guilty, and in the 106 cases appealed to the Common Pleas Court nearly all the sentences had been confirmed.

In New Haven County the decrease in total arrests was from 5,316 to 4,267; in Hartford County from 14,796 to 7,518, and in Fairfield County where Bridgeport is located from 5,566 to 3,400.

"It was the saloon," said the Judge, "and the manner in which it was conducted which more than anything else brought about the adoption of the prohibition amendment. Since the conviction of all members of the court that no penalty short of an occasional jail sentence will prove effective against saloonkeepers and others who break the law, money

"Importation of liquor from abroad will eventually cease, for I am of those who believe that the day will come when the United States Government will call to the attention of the British people the existence and policy of our laws forbidding the sale of liquor on board the ships, as is aimed to the violation of the laws and policy of the United States.

"As to observance of the law by our own people, there will be periods of shortages and of bootlegging, but the ultimately the people will insist that it be observed as well at lease as the law forbidding the sale of narcotics, the law forbidding fifty different things connected with operating an automobile and the law forbidding dozens of things connected with health.

"Much of the agitation against the present Volstead act is placed upon the ground of personal liberty or State's rights. As to the latter, I would call your attention to the fact that the State of Connecticut has a law forbidding the sale &c., of intoxicating liquors.

"Again as to State's rights. Various States had voted dry. But neighboring States would not let them be dry. Abraham Lincoln said this nation could not be half free and half slave, and today we find that the nation cannot be half wet and half dry.

"An appreciable part of the population is engaged in smuggling or selling liquor directly or indirectly from bootleggers, as a major sport. They know that the business is forbidden, and like children and Adam and Eve, delight in being forbidden. They want all the more the things forbidden. If doubt if the extent of lawbreaking on that account is as great as many believe it to be. And further, I believe that after they have had their fling and shown that they can do it, though forbidden, they realize the benefits that the law has even in three years brought about, or most important of all, that disregard for the law brings great evils in its train.

"For the prohibition law is here to stay. The alternative of enforcement is the wide open town, disregard for this law and a tendency to disregard every law. There is no question where the Judges of the Superior Court or the State's Attorneys will stand on such a plain matter."

CALLS GOVERNORS ON RUM.

Harding Plans Another Conference for Next Month.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—Governors of the several States are to be requested by President Harding to meet with him in Washington in May for a second discussion of means and methods of cooperation between the Federal and State Governments in the enforcement of the prohibition laws.

The conference, which has been planned by the President for several months, will be in the nature of a meeting to go over the results of the steps toward co-operation initiated at the first Governors' conference, held at the White House last Fall. It had been expected that the Governors would be asked to meet with the President this month, but the announcement from the White House today said that the legislative situation in several States made it advisable to postpone the conference until May.

side, where they were arrested. They were questioned by Prosecutor Charles J. Morasco, but refused to reply. Each furnished $1,500 bail for examination on May 8 in removal proceedings.

After Chapman's last escape from the hospital in Athens, Ga., where he was being treated for gunshot wounds received during his capture after a pursuing flight that lasted long enough to enable him to get 70 miles away from Atlanta, it was remembered by some of the residents of Athens that two strange men and a woman had been conspicuous in the neighborhood of the hospital just prior to Chapman's escape. It was said that the persons who noticed the strangers will be called as witnesses in the removal proceedings.

The identity of the two defendants and information as to their probable whereabouts reached here from Department of Justice agents in Atlanta, with the added intelligence that they had been indicted by a Federal Grand Jury in Athens.

It was said the two men had been trailed to this city from Athens on the day of Chapman's last escape. Mr. Morasco said he did not know the details that led to the capture of the arrested men, that they had been identified as friends of his. Mr. Morasco also said that Silverstein had an unpleasant record.

It was learned that the two escapes of Chapman, taken in connection with his attempted escape from the courtroom during his trial, had created a suspicion that something more substantial than love for him had caused soon activity in his behalf. The guess was hazarded that Chapman has in some secure hiding place, known only to himself, a large amount of loot, and that some of his old associates are eager to place him in a position where he can recover and divide it.

MISSILE FALLS NEAR PAYOT

DUESSELDORF (via Cologne), April 13.—In an effort to prevent the French from transporting coke out of the Ruhr, the Germans are increasing every day the number of attempts to destroy the railroads and other means of communication.

Following the blowing up of the Rhine-Herne Canal and the Buer railroad bridge, four attempts were made last night to destroy rails. In two of these small bombs were used to tear up short sections of the line, and in both cases the explosions were heard by sentries in time to prevent trains from being derailed. At one point stones were fixed in such a way as to derail any train had not the mischief been discovered in time.

At Merlonde a new method was used of filling a freight car with explosives and allowing it to run down grade into St. Vion. There the explosion took place, doing considerable damage to buildings.

Yesterday when General Payot, Director of the French railroads, was motoring through a village in the district a missile was thrown or fired at his car, smashing the window, but doing no other damage. No one was seen near the place, but the probability that the missile was a stone thrown by a child is one which the General himself prefers to credit.

In the situation as a whole there is a marked slowing up in all directions, except with regard to the removal of coke. On Sunday it is expected that more yards will be seized. On the other hand, there seems to be little prospect that any wholesale attempts will be made to prosecute coal owners for non-payment of the coal tax even when April 15 comes, the last day on which they are to pay.

The French fully realize that they cannot put all their threats into effect and that when they say a month, a week or so ago they underestimated the German power of resistance or perhaps rather overestimated their own intention to act as harshly as they declared they would do. They have, for instance, practically abandoned the idea of proceeding with any wholesale expulsion of railroad men who refuse to work for the new administration. In those cases where expulsions were made it was done only to provide accommodations for their own men in houses owned by the railroads.

The increased pay which has been given the German railroad men by the Government, and the threats of penal servitude which have accompanied it in case they work for the Franco-Belgian régime seem, for some time to come at least, to have persuaded them that they had better remain loyal, and there, as at the mines, the French are being met by a very solid front of passive resistance. Their only real gain during the last six weeks has been in the increased amount of coke shipped.

There is every indication that the increased sabotage is a part of a very deliberate and well planned effort to wreck the water and rail systems on which the French must depend and that these attempts will be increased in the near future.

ESSEN, April 13 (Associated Press).—The numbers of soldiers guarding the bridges and railroad junctions at all important transportation points throughout the Ruhr and the Rhineland have been doubled, owing to the increase in acts of sabotage. The renewed endeavors at destruction have convinced the French authorities that the Germans have started on a well-organized plan of using explosives where passive resistance has failed.

GERMANS FINE FRENCHMAN.

Labourel, Writer, Is Assessed 100,000 Marks in Passport Case.

BERLIN, April 13.—Georges Labourel of the Paris Intransigeant has been fined 100,000 marks at Elbing for having entered unoccupied German territory without a passport visa. The charge against him of attempting to smuggle money out of Germany has been dropped.

When M. Labourel was arrested some time ago the French immediately retaliated by arresting a German journalist in the Ruhr.

A dispatch from Paris on March 29 said that the Anglo-American Press Association, composed of correspondents in Paris, had added its protest to that of the French and other newspapers against the arrest and imprisonment of M. Labourel. The protest, which was made on purely professional grounds, set forth that the association felt that journalists could fulfill their important duties "only if they are assured against arbitrary and repressive action by Governments."

SPEED WORK IN LONDON ON WAR DEBT COMPACT

No Difficulties Have Been Met, but the Distance Causes Delay in Passing on Details.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 13.—The task of reducing the terms of the Anglo-American war debt funding agreement to a regular and enduring document is steadily, if somewhat slowly, progressing toward completion. While it is impossible to give the date on which the formal agreement will be ready for signature, no difficulties have been encountered beyond those inevitably connected with the drafting.

A leading official pointed out to THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent that delay incurred has been due solely to the great distance between Britain and the United States. It has been necessary to refer several questions of detail from one Government to the other, each such reference involving loss of time.

It is declared emphatically throughout British official circles that no political changes could alter Britain's determination to discharge her obligations. Two changes of government occurred in the period between incurring them and the dispatch of the mission to Washington. It would be absurd to think that further changes would lead to any change in the British policy.

It is interesting to recall in this connection that when announcement was made in the House of Commons that an agreement had been reached with America the members of the Labor Party were among the first to signify their approval.

Third International Backs the Scheme—Corn Sent to the Ruhr for Political Aims.

RIGA, Latvia, April 13.—Reports from an authoritative source are that the Third International is trying to effect a series of "putsches" (revolts) in Germany with the intention of establishing Socialist Governments.

The corn which the Russians sent to the Ruhr, ostensibly for the workmen, is described in the reports as intended to form a Socialist reserve fund, "thus proving the seriousness of Trotzky's recent declaration that during Europe's revolutionary upheaval Russia will feed Europe."

PLAGUE IN INDIA KILLED 36,900 IN FOUR MONTHS

Health Commissioner Deplores Absence of Organized Attempts to Stamp It Out.

SIMLA, British India, April 13.—The Public Health Commissioner announces a rise in mortality due to the plague, which began last December and which caused 36,900 deaths in India up to the end of March. In the previous four years the mean average of deaths from the plague had been 14,400.

The Commissioner says that the destruction of rats is imperative, and that careful attention must be paid to grain storage if the ravages of the plague are to be reduced. He urges that India make an organized attempt to stamp out the plague, which thus far it has not done.

LEAGUE IS USELESS, DECLARES CZERNIN

Without America, Germany and Russia, He Says, It Means Nothing at All.

CREDIT AUSTRIA'S BIG NEED

If America Would Give It, She "Could Look Further Than Just Existing," Ex-Minister Says.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, April 13.—Count Czernin, who was Foreign Minister of Austria-Hungary from 1916 to 1918 and is now in Holland to deliver a few lectures on "War and Revolution," gave me an interview today.

Brushing aside my questions about the reconstruction of Austria, he began by telling me in his short, jerky manner that he thought the League of Nations as it now stood a useless institution.

"It is all nonsense," he said. "As long as America and other nations, such as Germany and Russia, stay out of the League it means nothing at all. Without America the League has no future. First and foremost, America must become a member of the League, and, secondly, Germany and Russia, but without these States the League amounts to nothing. It is not a league, but merely a trust of victorious States as it now stands."

"Count Czernin considers that the League has accomplished nothing up to the present.

"If the League succeeds in the work it has undertaken in Austria," he said, "it will be the first success it has scored."

Condemns St. Germain Treaty.

I asked him whether he thought the economic reconstruction of Austria possible in view of the present situation in Europe.

"That depends," he answered, "entirely on what 'reconstruction' means. There is a world of difference between mere existence and the possibility of growth and development. Certainly consider that the treaty of St. Germain has made the latter almost an impossibility, although with the obtaining of sufficient credits this might be changed. Austria, with her 8,000,000 inhabitants, 2,000,000 in Vienna alone, has not only been enormously diminished in size, but has been deprived of most of her resources, her industries, her coal, &c., and her values has been destroyed, as every one knows. Naturally, in this case it can live on the land, but that is only existence, and does not necessarily mean development or progress."

The Count said he considered that Milford Zimmerman, the Dutch banker, under the League of Nations was accomplishing a great work in Austria, in spite of much criticism, but that there was still a question whether this work would result in giving Austria the possibility of progress and development, or merely the possibility of existence.

"The question of Austria's existence," he continued, "is in the first place one of credits. We need large credits in order to progress. If only America would give us sufficient credit we could then look further than just existing and think of progress and development, even in spite of the restrictions placed upon us by the St. Germain treaty; and then it would very soon come to a point where a loan to Austria would mean good business for the American subscriber. We are, however, in dire need of credit."

Deplores America's Aloofness.

Count Czernin then spoke of America, saying:

"America came into the war with the big and wonderful democratic words, 'freedom, justice, progress,' &c. America has won the war—America alone. But she now withdraws entirely from Europe, and everything which happens in Europe leaves her indifferent, although what is happening is far removed from the ideas of freedom, justice, progress, &c. I believe it would be a great advantage for the whole world if America took more interest in Europe.

"I had hoped and even planned to go to America myself to lecture on conditions in Europe, but was obliged to postpone my visit on account of the elections in Austria, for which I must return. I greatly regret not being able to go."

When I asked Count Czernin what were Austria's relations with neighboring States, especially those created by the war, and what would be Austria's policy toward them, he said:

"Austria is endeavoring and will endeavor in future to maintain the best relations with all the neighboring States; but first of all we must make every effort to enter into the closest economic relations possible. We are making great progress along these lines. There are great improvements since the end of the war. Naturally, incidents which have taken place along frontiers have not exactly served to improve relations, but they are not really serious, and things are gradually improving. So far as political co-operation is concerned: I do not think this is feasible at present, although we never can tell what the future will bring. At present, however, all efforts should be concentrated on economic co-operation."

Czernin Is Supporting Seipel.

Speaking of Dr. Seipel and his policy as Chancellor, Count Czernin laid stress on the fact that he belonged to no particular political party, but was entirely independent, although he supported Seipel and the bourgeois bloc as against the Socialists.

It appeared to believe that Seipel's policy was advantageous for Austria, and said he hoped that the elections which would take place soon would again mean a majority for the bourgeois bloc.

The Count shrugged his shoulders in a hopeless way when he mentioned the Ruhr, saying he thought the situation was disastrous.

"It is war again—just another war," he said. "Of course in this question I am quite on the side of Germany and I think France's policy quite impossible, to say the least."

He was somewhat ironical when he spoke of ex-President Wilson. "I do not want to be too unkind about Mr. Wilson," he said, "but you can tell them there was a time when I thought he was a star in the political firmament. But I have changed my mind and do not know exactly what I think—perhaps it is better not to say."

Whereupon Count Czernin walked away hurriedly.

JITNEY BUS KILLS TWO.

Miss O'Donohue and Mrs. Byrnes Run Down in Glenbrook, Conn.

STAMFORD, Conn., April 13.—Miss Mary O'Donohue and Mrs. Hattie Byrnes of Glenbrook were killed late last night when they were struck by a jitney bus in Glenbrook. Mrs. Byrnes's six-weeks-old baby was ashort.

Orie Waterbury of this city, driver of the bus, was arrested by the Glenbrook police and is held pending the Coroner's inquiry. Persons living in the vicinity told the police that the bus, which had no passengers, was traveling at high speed.

52 British Candidates Lost Deposits.

LONDON, April 13.—According to an answer in Parliament today, fifty-two candidates at the last general election failed to obtain one-eighth of the total votes cast in their constituencies, and therefore they have forfeited £159 ($765) each. This provision in the election law is designed to check frivolous candidates. Each candidate when nominated must deposit with the returning officer £150, which is refunded if he polls one-eighth of the votes.

COMMONS IN SESSION FOR TWENTY-ONE HOURS

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 13.—Labor members kept the House of Commons sitting all last night and until 11 o'clock this morning. The result was that the regular Friday sitting was abandoned. About 300 members were present throughout the twenty-one hours of the session, including leaders like Mr. Lloyd George, J. H. Thomas and Arthur Henderson.

The prolonged debate was quite regular as compared with the outburst that disgraced the Wednesday session. The Army Annual Bill was under discussion. It holds a peculiar position in the Constitution. Though on it depends the maintenance of discipline in the army and authorization to the Crown to raise a standing army, it is only passed for a year at a time, and one of the tests of the ability of the Government to command a majority is its power to put the bill through the House.

The Opposition consequently was within its constitutional rights in challenging it, and in addition, the Labor members had certain amendments of their own to propose. George Ladebury, thus, wanted to limit the power of commanders to order drastic forms of field punishment in wartime, and Mac moved that recruits on enlisting could have the right to refuse duty in the event of strikes. There was also a suggestion to alter punishment for desertion from death to penal servitude. The Government easily defeated all such suggestions, which, it declared, would undermine military discipline. Fairly consistent majorities of about 80 were shown.

A number of odd incidents occurred, as members slumbered on the benches and had to be prodded up to vote as divisions were called for, but there was no disorder. The members made their weary round of the voting lobbies to the tune of "John Brown's Body," but no one started the "Red Flag." Consumption of sausages by the hungry legislators was enormous, and one earnest student of parliamentary institutions has put the entire proceedings in the Strangers' Gallery.

TIDAL WAVES AT HAWAII.

Four Ports Are Visited by Minor Disturbances.

Copyright, 1923, by The Chicago Tribune Co.

HONOLULU, April 13.—A slight tidal wave disturbance occurred this afternoon at Kahului, Hilo and Honolulu. A four-foot wave hit Kahului at one o'clock, washing over the road in two places. Some debris was lifted up on shore but no particular damage was done.

Hilo reports two waves in the mouth of the Wailoa River. The first at 12:40 P. M., height of one foot, while a second, not so high, occurred a half hour later. All the sampans in the river ran out to sea and the bridges were crowded with spectators.

There were slight waves in Honolulu Harbor, the first at 1:48 P. M. and the second ten minutes later. The water rose eight inches and slowly receded. The sampans in the harbor were lifted on the crest of the wave as the water ran out the skiffs were left high and dry on land. No damage was done. Haleiwa, on the windward side of Oahu, reports four small waves, the maximum being two feet high. The ocean is now normal.

at the flat. Three weeks ago he departed from the hotel, leaving no address.

CHICAGO, April 13.—Both Harold F. McCormick and Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick tonight refused to discuss printed reports that their daughter, Mathilde McCormick, and Max Oser, 46-year-old Swiss riding master, had been married secretly in London.

"Mrs. McCormick does not care to discuss the matter," said Mrs. McCormick's secretary.

It was in February a year ago that it became known Mathilde McCormick, then aged 17, planned to wed Max Oser, proprietor of a Zurich riding academy. Mathilde, then visiting in Switzerland, hastened to Chicago to obtain her father's permission "to carry out the understanding I have with Mr. Oser." Mr. McCormick, it appeared, already knew of the affair, and had tentatively given his permission, while the girl's mother was opposed. The match, from the outset, was the rumor of the betrothal, followed quickly by a family conference of the McCormick family at Chicago, brought a definite announcement of the engagement from Harold McCormick, the announcement being "hastened a few weeks by the fact of the recent newspaper publicity."

Then from Oser, in Switzerland, came a vigorous denial that he was a dowry hunter. He added that he had told his fiancée to "make new friends and see life" before accepting him.

Reports from Switzerland related that Miss McCormick first became attached to Oser two years before their engagement was announced. They told early romance of Swiss mountain trails and along the shores of Lake Zurich. Mrs. McCormick objected strenuously, and Prince Alexander von Hohenlohe, an intimate Zurich friend of the McCormicks, registered disapproval of the match because of the contrast in the social standing of Miss Mathilde and Max Oser.

John D. Rockefeller for a time was looked to as a solution, but with the appointment of Mr. McCormick as guardian following his divorce, the authority and also the responsibility shifted to him. Mrs. McCormick invoked the aid of the courts to hasten the proceedings by which Mr. McCormick was made Mathilde's guardian. In an effort to stop the impending wedding, but the court declared that it would not act unless "grave circumstances arise."

Miss McCormick became 19 years of age on April 7.

SEE IN STANDARD OIL A CHECK TO CHESTER

CLAIMS ARE IN CONFLICT

By EDWIN L. JAMES.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, April 13.—European diplomats, who with cross cynicism expect the Washington Government to be more firm in supporting the material interests of Americans in Turkey than it showed itself in supporting their moral interests—in the debate on the Armenian home, for example—think Secretary Hughes will not strongly back the Chester concessions.

The reason they give is that Standard Oil is interested in Turkish petroleum concessions conflicting with Chester oil claims. They believe Standard Oil has more influence in Washington than Admiral Chester and his friends. It will be recalled that representatives of Standard Oil introduced by the State Department made a bargain with the British oil interests empowered to act by the British Government by the terms of which Standard Oil was to have 25 per cent. of the Mosul oil. If Admiral Chester and his associates get the Mosul oil, naturally the Turkish Petroleum Company will not, and that means that Standard Oil will not.

It is true that at Lausanne Ambassador Child took the attitude that the State Department was not acting on behalf of any one American concern, but merely insisted on the open door. But now through the open door both Standard Oil and the Chester syndicate have entered. If the American Government backs Chester it must oppose Standard Oil interests. If Washington stands back of Standard Oil, which got its hold through the famous Colby Mesopotamia note to London, which the present Administration approved, then the Washington Government can scarcely support the Chester claim to Mosul, which is held by the British anyhow.

The State Department, it is understood here, now suggests arbitration, but it is probable that this attempt to avoid making a decision will meet with difficulties when the European diplomats at Lausanne ask the American diplomats if the United States stands back of concession which takes over the rights which the French regard as theirs, and which aspires to the oil fields the British occupy.

It would appear that the Washington Administration could scarcely escape becoming involved in the Asia Minor mess unless it "stood from under" on the Chester proposition. If Chester has not support from Washington his contracts will not be worth the paper they are written on. If Washington supports him the representatives of America will be star performers in a nice diplomatic debate.

In the meanwhile the Quai d'Orsay awaits the authentic text of the Chester concession in order to prepare a note to Angora demanding that the French concession be respected or that Turkey repay at once the 500,000,000 francs loan in return for which the concession was granted.

Several Paris papers today demand that France refuse to send delegates to the Lausanne conference until the allocation caused by the ratification of the Chester project can be straightened out.

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 13 (Associated Press).—"Our mothers, sisters and wives have toiled in the past carrying shells on their heads against the national foe. In the future, thanks to the proposed railways, they will not be sacrificed."

Thus spoke Recuf Bey, the Premier, in addressing the session of the National Assembly at Angora, which approved the Chester concession. It was considered one of the strongest arguments used during the debate in favor of satisfaction of the project.

The plan of the Chester syndicate proposes to embrace the famous copper mines at Erghana and also to tap the supposed oil fields between Bitlis and Mosul. The course of the railway may be diverted in order to traverse the Mosul oil fields, but this point probably will be left open until the settlement of negotiations between Great Britain and Turkey.

The Government at Angora is reported to hold the opinion that the French protest against the Chester concessions is unjustified. The Commissary of Public Works points out that the grant to the French in 1914 was never approved by the old Turkish Chamber and consequently is not legally binding.

ATTACKS CHESTER GRANT.

Louis de Bourbon Says Heirs of Abdul Hamid Own the Oil Fields.

Don Louis de Bourbon, who says he is a half-brother of the King of Spain, but has become an American citizen, in an interview yesterday attacked the so-called Chester concession granted by Turkey. Don Louis last year announced that he had entered into an agreement with the heirs of Sultan Abdul Hamid to seek American aid and capital for the development of some of the same property, including immensely rich oil fields, that is covered by the Chester concession, but he says that his only purpose in attacking the grant is to protect the name and prestige of his adopted country.

According to Don Louis, the Chester concession, supported by the American Government and carried through to a finish, would violate the principle of open door for international trade, which the United States demanded at the last Lausanne conference and would cause the whole world, especially Turkey, to look upon this country with distrust.

Up to the present, he said, the Turks have put America on a pedestal above all the other nations because they believed the aims had no imperialistic aims in the extension and protection of her international commerce. Turkey, he added, had been suspicious for American economic penetration for the very reason that the United States was the only nation that did not link up its economic assistance with other political motive. The Chester concession, he argued, was a politico-economic manoeuvre on a par with the machinations of European diplomacy and would go far toward destroying American prestige unless repudiated by this country.

Don Louis also inquired how far the American Government could be expected to go in supporting a concession to oil fields in the Mosul region and the Mesopotamian fields, where the British are strongly entrenched. He declares that the Chester concession is not actually a "concession," but only a franchise. He says the Angora Government has a right to do more than to give the American interests the privilege of buying the private property of the heirs of the Sultan.

MR. CHILD TO SERVE AGAIN.

Washington Expects Same Representation at Lausanne as Before.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—American representation at Lausanne in the same form as during the first sessions of the Near East conference will probably be authorized by the Washington Government when the conference reconvenes.

This announcement was made today at the White House, and it was interpreted in some quarters as indicating that Ambassador Child would return to Switzerland to act in the capacity of observer and probably again would be assisted by Minister Grew at Geneva, and in an advisory capacity, by Rear Admiral Mark L. Bristol, American High Commissioner in Constantinople.

Formal announcements of these appointments was said by State Department officials to be under consideration, but not definitely decided upon as yet.

PROPOSE PIUS X. AS SAINT.

Pope Begins Procedure at the Request of 28 Cardinals.

ROME, April 13 (Associated Press).—On the request of twenty-eight cardinals that he begin the procedure for the beatification and canonization of Pope Pius X., the Pontiff has acquiesced by appointing postulators, or supporters of beatification. The chief appointee for Italy is Abbe Pisrami, Procurator General of the Vallambrosan Benedictines.

Other postulators have been appointed in the dioceses where the late Pontiff lived. Their task will be to gather evidence showing that Pius X. practised "in a heroic degree" the three theological virtues, faith, hope and charity, and the four cardinal virtues, prudence, justice, courage and temperance.

Usually the process is long. In some cases it has lasted for centuries. Before proceeding to the canonization it must be proved that at least two miracles occurred through the intercession of the proposed saint.

The cardinals who signed the request for beatification include Vannutelli, Dean of the Sacred College; Gasparri, the Papal Secretary of State; Merry Del Val, Oberrattt and Casquet. All the members of the Sacred College living in Rome, except Cardinal Pompili, who, as Vicar to the Pope, must be the judge in the canonical process for beatification and sanctification, signed the petition.

The cardinals in proposing beatification said in their petition that the fame for sanctity of Pius X. was spreading throughout the world.

FREE STATE FACES £20,000,000 DEFICIT

NO REDUCTION IN TAXES

President Cosgrave Says Loan Will Be Necessary and Will Seek It in Ireland.

DUBLIN, April 13 (Associated Press).—The first Free State budget was introduced in the Dail Eireann today by President Cosgrave. The estimates for next year's expenditures show that £46,500,000 must be found, more than half of which is required for the upkeep of the army and compensation for damages caused by the irregular campaign.

Mr. Cosgrave estimated the receipts at £20,500,000 from taxes and £6,000,000 from non-tax revenue, leaving a deficit of £20,000,000.

The existing taxes, he said, would be continued at the same rates, as a reduction was impossible. Borrowing would be necessary to a great extent, but it was impossible at present to form a conclusion as to the credit of the State and the terms of borrowing.

The Irish customs would increase by nearly £5,000,000. Mr. Cosgrave continued, but the excise taxes would be decreased by £8,000,000 because Irish liquor sent out of the country would be taxed in England or in other countries where consumed. The income tax would be adversely affected by economic conditions to the extent of £1,500,000.

He proposed confirmation of the preferential rates on British and colonial goods in order to avoid dislocation of trade. Ireland was entering on better times, he concluded, and the attack on the nation by the irregulars had failed. The cost of defending the people's liberties was well within the people's resources.

Thomas Johnson, Labor leader, complained that the President had failed to disclose how much Ireland must pay in satisfaction of her pledge to assume a share of the British war debt and pensions, but he agreed that the Irish people were able to make their liabilities. He was glad Mr. Cosgrave had not waited to learn the proposals of the British budget but had maintained the income tax, which the British budget might reduce.

The attendance at the session of the Dail today was sparse, and Mr. Cosgrave was severely statistical in his speech in announcing the budget figures. Generally the members of the Dail were familiar with the figures. It was known that the cost of the army upkeep and the outlay in compensation for outrages would necessitate extensive borrowing, aggregating at least £20,000,000.

Mr. Cosgrave expressed confidence that an Irish loan could be raised in Ireland. He also evinced satisfaction over what he termed the failure of the Republicans in their attacks on the State. The members of the Dail generally received the budget favorably. Nobody had expected any remissions in taxation, and there was relief over the statement that the deficit would not compel any increase in taxation.

The thorny questions regarding free trade or protection, or concerning indirect taxation on various classes of the community were shelved by the proposal which left all changes to the future Parliament.

IRISH PLOTTERS RAIDED IN NEW LONDON DRIVE

Secret Arrests of Suspected Republican Conspirators Made in Several Areas.

LONDON, Saturday, April 14.—Another secret raid upon persons suspected of plotting in behalf of the Irish Republican cause was made in London early this morning, according to the Daily Express.

The paper mentions Gunnersbury, Wembley and Bermondsey as the districts where the police operated.

Scotland Yard detectives went in motor vehicles to the various districts and swooped suddenly on many houses. The occupants were taken by surprise. Many of them were shed.

Important documents, referring to the activities of the workers for the Irish Rebels, are said to have been discovered in the search, which occupied some hours, but The Express does not state whether these were any arrests.

Since the round-up of March 10-11, the Paper adds, it has become known that a considerable number of men, women and girls belonging to the Irish revolutionary party were under surveillance preparatory to the detection of active propaganda work in London. This led to exhaustive inquiries and today's raids.

DECIDE TO TIGHTEN PRESSURE IN RUHR

may be required to make in order to reach complete accord with Great Britain. Official circles, however, say it is ill-timed and that it has no foundation in fact.

There are many among the well-informed French politicians who believe that the time will come when it will be necessary to let the French people know that they cannot expect all from Germany that France thinks she ought to pay, but that time, they say, will be when Germany has shown some disposition to do what she can.

London Reports Brought to Poincaré.

The trip to London of Louis Klotz, former Minister of Finance, has greatly diminished the importance that was at first attached to M. Loucheur's visit there. The intervention of prominent public men such as these two is explained in political circles as being due only to their personal desire to have a leading part in a solution of the reparations problem. The Government, it is pointed out, could not refuse to hear reports of what they were able to learn regarding the attitude of the British statesmen without provoking adverse criticism.

Premier Poincaré, it is understood, may exchange views with the Belgians as to a possible basis of discussion with the Germans when the latter signify that they are ready to negotiate, but nothing will be decided even tentatively until the question comes up before all the Allies, including Great Britain and Italy.

France is particularly anxious not to forestall Great Britain in any way in reparations, and it is held in official circles that nothing useful can be accomplished in making preparations for a final settlement without British participation.

Disappointed on Coal Receipts.

Those here who are in touch with the official German viewpoint of the reparation issue say that the Loucheur and other plans, apparently intended to provoke a response from Berlin are bound to fail in view of the fact that the effort of the French and the Belgians to get coal has so far been practically fruitless. They declare that Germany will not negotiate so long as the allies occupy the Ruhr, and they contend that the two Allied Powers are "killing the goose that laid the golden egg," since the Ruhr is now unprofitable and Germany's ability to pay any reparations is diminishing.

The explanation offered of the success of the German passive resistance is the attitude of the workmen, who, it is said, will not mew, and never will, work in the presence of French troops. Those in contact with the Germans say that the latter admit that they themselves were surprised to find the coal delivers had been so small, as compared with what the French and the Belgians said they expected to obtain when they entered the Ruhr early in January.

At that date the Allies, as a whole, were receiving a total of 1,800,000 tons of coal monthly, of which the French share was 1,000,000 tons. It is pointed out that Italy, which did not participate in the military occupation, is still receiving her full quota of coal, as provided for, under the 1922 reparation schedule, while there has been no 1923 schedule prepared by the Reparation Commission, which declared Germany in default early in January.

During the last three months Italy has received 500,000 tons of coal, it is stated, and better coal than before, the German declare. The coal that formerly went to Italy came from Silesia. Now much of it is coming from the Ruhr.

Germany has been able likewise to continue her shipment of coal to Switzerland and Holland under the old economic agreements, separate from the reparation question. As for Jugoslavia and Rumania, it is asserted that the full reparation quotas of those two countries for 1922 were filled and that Germany is attempting to supply their demands for this year as far as possible, even though lack of an official reparation schedule does not oblige her to do so.

Loucheur Predicts German Weakening.

M. Loucheur said this afternoon that he had "brought back from England a well-defined impression, based upon information gathered there in official circles and others, that Germany cannot resist in the Ruhr more than two or three months longer at the maximum." He made this statement to the correspondents when he appeared in the lobbies of the Chamber of Deputies for the first time since his return from England.

"It is a question of discomfort on two sides; with Germany's discomfort much more serious than France's," he said. "It is not a matter of one or two more French blast furnaces idle that will trouble the economic life of France.

"I feel," continued M. Loucheur, "that the English entirely approve the policy of the man whom they commonly refer to as 'the man from the Ruhr.' The British are good sports and they realize that in occupying the Ruhr Premier Poincaré took a sporting chance. Only one question separated England and France at the Paris conference in January, namely, the seizure of guarantees. With the occupation of the Ruhr by the French the situation has changed."

Referring to the comment caused in Belgium by his trip to England, M. Loucheur said:

"That emotion was absolutely unwarranted. I never, directly or indirectly, have mentioned the suppression of Belgium's right to priority. For that matter, I was responsible for its acceptance by the Peace Conference after much opposition from Mr. Lloyd George.

"The figure of 26,000,000,000 gold marks mentioned in the English papers as France's share of the reparations did not originate with me; it is written in bold characters in the Yellow Book recording the deliberations of the last Paris conference in January."

START MOVE TO BUY JEFFERSON'S HOME

Citizens From All Over Country Honor Patriot's Birthday at Monticello.

UNITE FOR $1,000,000 FUND

Special to The New York Times.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., April 13.—The national movement to raise $1,000,000 for the purchase of Monticello, the home of Thomas Jefferson, to preserve it as a monument to the principles of the Declaration of Independence, was inaugurated here today at the celebration of the 180th anniversary of the patriot's birth.

The Thomas Jefferson Memorial Foundation, which has charge of the acquisition of Monticello, was simultaneously incorporated today at Albany, N. Y., by people prominent in public life.

On account of rain which prevented the programs being given at Monticello, the University of Virginia was host to the people who came here today from all parts of the country, combining their celebration with its own tribute to Jefferson as its founder. After a luncheon, the university opened Cabell Hall to its guests.

Stuart G. Gibboney, a New York attorney, who is Chairman of the Board of Governors of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Foundation, presided. He read a telegram from former Governor Charles N. Haskell of Oklahoma, notifying him of a personal gift of $10,000 toward the fund.

After the invocation by the Rev. Henry B. Hattle and the formal welcome by Judge Archibald D. Dabney, the following speakers paid tribute to Jefferson and expressed confidence in the success of the movement to endow his home as a national shrine:

Lieutenant Governor, Junius E. West, representing Governor E. Lee Trinkle; Mrs. Marietta Minnegerode Andrews of Washington, D. C., President of Monticello Memorial Association; Mrs. E. D. Hotchkiss of Richmond, Va., President of Thomas Jefferson Memorial Association, and Professor Armistead M. Dobie of the University of Virginia.

During the program a minuet of the period of Jefferson was danced by members of the Albermarle Community Players in costume to the music of a stringed orchestra selected from the university glee club.

Following the exercises at Cabell Hall, a pilgrimage was made to Monticello and the tomb of Jefferson. The visitors from New York in the party, headed by Chairman Gibboney, included J. H. Ranger, Gregory Doyle, Robert A. Bachman, Walter D. Yankauer, Manley Strauss, Judge William Grossman, A. Manton, Henry Wortham, H. Clay Strauss and Stanley H. Howe.

At the tomb brief exercises were held as memorial wreaths were placed at the base of the granite monument, the first being from the National Democratic Club of New York City, by the hand of Mrs. Martin W. Littleton of New York. Other floral tributes were presented by Manley Strauss of New York on behalf of the Board of Directors of the Foundation and by Colonel Thomas Jefferson Randolph. On behalf of the Albemarle Chapter Daughters of the American Revolution Mrs. Littleton delivered an eloquent address in tribute to the life and services of the great patriot and Democratic thinker.

On reaching the mansion the guests were escorted around the home of the statesman.

Prominent Incorporators.

The names of many prominent persons appeared on the certificate of incorporation of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Foundation, filed at Albany yesterday, according to announcement here. Yesterday was the 180th anniversary of Jefferson's birth.

The foundation plans to purchase and maintain Monticello, Jefferson's home in Charlottesville, Va., as a national monument to the "immortal principles inscribed in the Declaration of Independence" so that Monticello may rank among the country's sacred altars with the birthplace of Washington and the tomb of Lincoln.

Lady Astor and her sister, Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson; Col. Theodore Roosevelt, Assistant Secretary of the Navy; Charles D. Hilles, Republican National Committeeman from New York; Mrs. Martin W. Littleton, Alton B. Parker, Felix Warburg, Governor E. Lee Trinkle of Virginia, John W. Davis, former Ambassador to Great Britain; James G. Gerard, former Ambassador to Germany; Mrs. Rose Gouverneur Hoes of Washington, great-granddaughter of James Monroe; William G. McAdoo, Dr. Edwin A. Alderman, President of the University of Virginia, and Bainbridge Colby were among the incorporators.

Monticello, drawn from plans made by Jefferson himself and built under his immediate supervision, has been pronounced one of the most artistic homes in America. It now is owned by former Representative Jefferson M. Levy, who inherited it from his uncle, Commodore Uriah Phillips Levy of the United States Navy, who bought it in 1833, seven years after Jefferson's death.

Attempts had been made for many years to buy Monticello, but Mr. Levy always refused to sell. Mr. Levy now has joined the movement and has agreed to sell, holding the estate, it is understood, at $500,000.

UPHAM COMES HERE TO LIFT G. O. P. DEBT

Confers With Hilles and Hays About Plans to Pay Deficit of $300,000.

Fred W. Upham, Treasurer of the Republican National Committee, came to New York yesterday to confer with Republican leaders here on ways and means to raise $300,000 to wipe out the deficit the National Committee sustained during the last Presidential fight. When the campaign was over the committee faced a deficit of $1,805,000, but steady work since then has reduced the amount to $300,000.

Treasurer Upham had a short conference with Charles D. Hilles, Republican National Committeeman for New York, and Will H. Hays, former Chairman of the National Committee. Later Mr. Hilles declared that the outlook for cleaning up the deficit was excellent and that the party would enter the next campaign with all decks cleared for action. Mr. Upham and Mr. Hilles will have another conference today, at which it is expected that details incident to holding the next Republican National Convention will be worked out. It is likely that John T. Adams, Chairman of the Republican National Committee, will take part in the conference.

Mr. Hilles declared last night that all speculation as to who the next National Chairman would be was futile, as Mr. Adams would hold on until the meeting of the National Committee during the convention, at which his successor would be determined upon. There is no reason whatever, he said, for Mr. Adams to retire before then. At Mr. Hays's office his associate, Courtlandt Smith, said:

"Mr. Hays is out of politics to stay out, until Jan. 1, 1925, if not longer. Nothing could induce him to change his mind about this."

GARY BACK, CALLS PAY RISE VOLUNTARY

END OF A 67-DAY CRUISE

Declining for the present to give his impressions of conditions abroad, Elbert H. Gary, Chairman of the United States Steel Corporation, returned yesterday on the Mauretania of the Cunard Line from a sixty-seven day cruise of the Mediterranean. Regarding the wage increase to workers in the plants of the Steel Corporation on receipt of a radio from himself, Judge Gary said that the action was voluntary.

"I will say that Mrs. Gary and I had an enjoyable trip," he said. "I may have something to say later, possibly at the annual meeting of the American Iron and Steel Institute on May 25. I have given no interviews since I left here on Feb. 7."

Victor Murdock, Chairman of the Federal Trade Commission, who took the cruise, said he saw little improvement in countries of the Near East. Tut-ankh-Amen seemed to provide the livest subject of conversation there, he found.

Ira Nelson Morris, former United States Minister to Sweden, returned home after settling his affairs in Stockholm.

William Allen White of Emporia, Kan., who went abroad to make a report for the Near East Relief, said that for a week after the Mauretania had left New York the favorite sport was trying to discover the identity of Mrs. Frances Hall, widow of the murdered New Brunswick clergyman. Finally a radio was received that Mrs. Hall had not sailed on the steamer as planned, but had left on an Italian liner.

Miss Elizabeth McQueen of Tamsworth, N. H., who said she was President of the Anglo-American Society of America, said she had renewed an acquaintance with General and Mrs. Allenby, the former of whom had sponsored a daily newspaper she ran during the military occupation of Palestine. Miss McQueen said that Zionism was now a dead issue there and that Jerusalem looked "far more tidy" than during the British military regime.

Horace M. Pindell, one time Ambassador to Russia, and newspaper owner of Peoria, another tourist, said his trip had convinced him that the United States could not longer occupy an isolated position in regard to Europe. He believed America should join the League of Nations or a similar organization to help Europe as well as ourselves.

H. A. Tallmadge, owner of The Toledo Blade and The Newark Star-Eagle, told reporters that he had won 150,000 francs on three turns of the wheel at Monte Carlo. He repeated the performance in a gaming casino at Lisbon, winning about $1,000.

E. O. Dunne, Secretary of the Atlantic passenger conference, arrived to confer with various lines here regarding the immigration quotas. He said he would present statistics of the number of aliens embarking in Europe for American ports. An effort, he stated, was being made to prevent the embarkation of such numbers as would cause the quotas to be overfilled.

Miss Henrietta Szold, founder and honorary President of the Hadassah Organization, returned from Palestine, where for the last three years she has been voluntary Director of the Hadassah Medical Unit. Representatives of Zionist organizations were at the pier to meet Miss Szold, who is here for a brief visit to Mrs. Morris Jastrow, her sister.

Among others on the Mauretania were Derwent Hall Caine, son of the author; Mr. and Mrs. George F. Tyler and children, General Asher Miner and the Misses Margaret and Lonsdale Miner, Cyrus McCormick Jr. and Mrs. McCormick, Mr. and Mrs. Barton W. Currie, John L. Anderson, President of the Selchow & Righter Company, Chicago toy makers; Professor William A. Boring, Professor Harry A. Garfield, President of Williams College, and Mrs. Garfield, Mrs. Robert L. Stevens and the Misses Esther and Mary Stevens.

BARNES AN OPTIMIST ON EUROPE'S FUTURE

President of United States Chamber of Commerce Sees Hope for Recovery.

The industrial and commercial rehabilitation of Europe is steadily progressing, with the consequent expansion of world trade clearly marked, according to Julius H. Barnes, President of the United States Chamber of Commerce, who returned yesterday on the Cunarder Mauretania after attending the Congress of the International Chamber of Commerce at Rome last month. Mr. Barnes sounded a note of optimism which contrasted with the pessimistic views of European conditions brought back recently by other American observers.

"Everywhere in spite of the shocks which followed the Lausanne breakdown and the occupation of the Ruhr, there is conclusive evidence that industry is increasing, earning and spending power of the people is being enlarged and the saving margin of almost peoples of Europe is distinctly above their current living consumption," said Mr. Barnes.

Italy had turned away from socialistic state operations, planning the return of the parcel post, telegraph and railway systems to private enterprise, he said. He termed the results already accomplished in Italy "a marvelous transformation, adding that Italy was solidly on the road to national recovery."

Mr. Barnes said that in England industries were expanding though dependent upon world trade and the recovery of other peoples. Austria, by closing the door to socialistic ideas was restoring confidence and no longer "the international beggar nation," he declared.

In speaking of the Rome conference, Mr. Barnes said that declarations as to the reparations and other economic questions had been inspired very largely by the American delegation, which obtained "a peculiar influence" at the gathering.

Mr. Barnes said that an important step in the American program at the conference was the declaration of principles for settlement of post-war problems, which "partake partly of the political and partly of the economic complexion." It was held that Germany should make restitution to the extent of her wealth, resources and earning power and that coupled with the assessment of damages should be some method of certainty of payment. Mr. Barnes added that it had been held that with these requirements a method of assuring the security of France against aggression in the future would have to be evolved.

"Now," Mr. Barnes said, "if the German people are ready in good faith to accept these requirements, as their statements today indicate, and if France is ready in good faith to recognize these requirements as the only proper claims growing out of the allied victory against the aggressor, then there must be some way to make these secure outside of the burden of an army of actual occupation, discouraging to industry and impossible of payment charges exceeding $100,000,000 per year, which should be used instead to reimburse injured France."

CARTER IGNORES CURSE IDEA

Never Thought of It, He Said—Returns to Luxor Next Week.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

CAIRO, Egypt, April 13.—The dowager Countess of Carnarvon is completing preparations for her departure from Cairo on Monday. Her departure is contingent on the completion of the formalities for the transportation of her husband's body. Howard Carter is endeavoring to complete the final arrangements, but time is of less consequence in Egypt than elsewhere in the world, and he is continually balked by the inability of local officials to speed matters.

So far as her health is concerned the dowager Countess is well, but she has suffered deeply during the last few harrowing weeks.

Mr. Carter intends to return to Luxor next week. He told me this morning that he had been advised that all is going well at Luxor, the preservative work on the antiquities from the tomb is progressing normally, but he expected it would be the middle of May before they are ready for transportation to the Cairo Museum. I suggested it would be almost unbearably hot in the Valley of the Kings during May. He assented, but added that he was determined to conclude the work on those objects before his vacation.

Some one asked him this morning whether he thought there really was a curse ready to condemn any one who violated Tut-ankh-Amen's tomb. He replied simply that he had not considered the matter.

But whether there is a curse or whether there is anything in the superstition about the malignant influence radiating from the tomb, the fact remains that those most intimately connected with it during the last few months suffered in some way or other. Even the journalists who covered the story have felt the reaction. Three of them have been ill in Cairo in the last few days.

Will Make Apology Demanded in Will.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., April 13.—Although her brother, B. A. Linderman of Washington and Chicago had notified the Probate Court at Muskegon that he would waive the provision in a codicil to his mother's will providing that his sister must make a satisfactory apology to him to share in the estate, Mrs. Gertrude Linderman Gilmour announced today that she had signed papers intended to meet the requirements of the will. Mrs. Gilmour's share in the estate is $137,000. She said she would not use it for herself, but would expend it in relief work among children of Europe.

"I am the unfortunate victim of an alienation of my mother's affections," she declared.

CECIL ASKS WOMEN OF AMERICA TO HELP

tion of England. We thought we could cut ourselves off from the world and live our own lives in peace and quietness, but it was impossible. We found that conditions were too strong for us and that we had to take our share of the responsibilities of the world if we were to live our natural lives.

"What then can be done? There are those in my country who advocate alliances—agreements that is with other countries by which the Allies treat their interests as common interests, and by which the strength of the countries concerned is to enforce the peace of the world and to maintain a policy which would be of advantage to ourselves, and incidentally, it is hoped, of advantage to others.

"I believe that policy to be both pernicious and useless. If it were successful it would mean the enslavement of one portion of the world by another with the inevitable evils to the progress of mankind. It is perhaps fortunate that the plan is quite impracticable. It only leads to counter alliances, with all the familiar evils of the balance of power and competitive armaments and the like.

"To exercise the spirit of war, you must put something in its place. So the covenant of the League in its first words declares. That it is the business of the League to promote international co-operation. The first step toward that object is to bring the nations of the world together, to make them understand one another. To make them appreciate the other man's point of view.

"To me the experience of the work of that assembly of the League is among the most valuable results of the League. They have produced results. They have worked together.

"One great step has been taken outside the League, though in accordance with its spirit. I mean, of course, the Washington conference. There agreement has been arrived at to limit the capital ships of certain of the navies of the world. Though it is a great step in itself, still more is needed. One might almost say that if you can reduce land armies to a sufficient extent the fleets would be relatively unimportant. So with the air. That is the most aggressive of all armies."

Lord Robert told of the accomplishment of the League up to the present, especially emphasizing its humanitarian work and the agreements it has arranged in regard to the opium traffic and the white slave traffic. He mentioned also its settlement of the dispute between Albania and Jugoslavia, and of the controversy between Sweden and Finland over the Aland Islands.

"The League," he said, is now tacking perhaps the greatest problem of all, that of disarmament. Lord Robert remarked that the League has a definite scheme before it which commission is studying. On June 4, he said, this commission will hold a session to consider whether it will recommend the scheme to the League, and if it does so, the nations belonging to the organization may be induced to lay the foundations of a far-reaching plan for the reduction of armaments throughout the world.

Women Split on the League

Shortly before Lord Robert's speech the National League of Women Voters adjourned for the day in the midst of a furious discussion as to the extent of its recommendations for participation in foreign affairs and for American entry into the League of Nations. At times the League seemed close to a division on partisan lines, but each time it kept its balance and when the discussion ended to adjourn to the coliseum for Lord Robert Cecil's address only one change had been made in Miss Ruth Morgan's resolution, introduced yesterday, approving American participation in certain aspects of the League of Nations' activities, urging entry into the World Court, praising progress in friendly Pan-American relations, and urging the United States to call a new international conference for agreements to end war.

The net result of the afternoon's debate was the passage of an amendment to the original paragraph of the resolution endorsing American entry into the World Court. The amendment declared that the entrance of America into the World Court would be "a step toward that fuller and more far-reaching international co-operation which is necessary to prevent war." It was introduced by Mrs. Charles Tiffany of New York as a substitute for an amendment proposed by Miss Florence Halsey of New Jersey.

Miss Halsey's amendment, which was defeated, proposed the declaration that entrance into the World Court would be a step toward "the entrance of the United States into the League of Nations."

League Adherents Claim Majority.

League adherents in the convention declared that so far they are victors; that Mrs. Tiffany herself is strongly pro-League, and that her amendment was introduced merely to avoid antagonizing the anti-League faction, which, it is said, is in the minority.

The resolution's proposal that the United States called another international conference to consider definite and immediate steps to end war was the subject of another controversy when Mrs. William G. Hibbard of Illinois called for the floor and submitted an amendment to it as follows:

"Be it further resolved that we call upon all citizens of the United States to unite in support of every constructive effort toward permanent world organization for peace without regard to party affiliations."

The President announced that this resolution was lost after a very close vote, and tomorrow the convention will open its debate again upon the same clause. Each paragraph of Miss Morgan's resolution, the most important before the convention, will be debated and voted on separately, after which the resolution will be voted on in its entirety.

The section which aroused the convention by injecting the League of Nations issue now reads as follows:

"Resolved that we pledge our active support to the proposal of the President and the Secretary of State for participation by the United States in the permanent court in international justice, believing this to be the first step toward the outlawry of war, and toward that fuller and more far-reaching international co-operation which is necessary to prevent war."

The convention also engaged in a warm discussion of the propriety and advisability of women's dual activities in the National League of Women Voters and political parties after Mrs. Emily Newell Blair's address. Mrs. Blair, who is Vice Chairman of the National Democratic Committee, urged every woman to affiliate with a party.

DES MOINES, Ia., April 13 (Associated Press).—In his speech Lord Robert Cecil argued that no place in the world is in a situation of economic isolation. He analyzed present industrial and financial difficulties abroad, tracing their causes back to war conditions, and he pointed out that Europe and America are economically interdependent.

"The war showed," he said, "that Europe must buy from America, and if she must buy she must sell to America. Otherwise she has no means of paying for her purchases. And may we not say that the peace has shown that European buyers are essential to American prosperity? That it is almost as vital for her to be able to sell to Europe as it is for Europe to be able to buy from her?

"Let us look at the present situation. I will not take your country to illustrate my meaning; I will take my own, as to which I am more fully informed. Take England. What is the position of that country? We are suffering from the greatest mass of unemployment that we have ever known. A million and a quarter of our workers are out of employment. They are suffering the gravest hardship and all the evils from want of work.

Points to Need of Credit.

"As you know, commercial transactions are now simpler things than they were in the old days. Originally if one man had something to sell he bartered it against something that he desired to have. Then came the invention of money. It enabled transactions to be more easily carried out. The seller got the money exchanged for his goods, with which he could buy other goods, but now that system has very largely been superseded. In the great majority of cases no money passes—nothing but the promise of it in some form or another.

"But credit is a psychological matter. It depends on trust between man and man, and in a period of destruction trust vanishes. It is a delicate plant and the first blast of the storm is sufficient to destroy it. That is what has happened all over Europe. Credit is not dead; it is very sick. That means that the whole machinery of commerce works stiffly and unsatisfactorily. Transactions are difficult to carry out and they meet with obstacles, obstacles which increase. It is not only individual countries which are involved, but the whole world. Prices are now world prices. It has been said that the price of grain in America is the price of the exportable surplus. That is quite true, and what is true of grain is true of almost every other commodity. Modern means of transportation and communication make all the world one market and offers and acceptances flash through the globe so that prices in England and here are directly affected by the welfare of the rest of the world.

Mrs. Pinchot Speaks.

More women in the dual rôle of "politician and housewife" are needed if the fullest possibilities of the American political system are to be realized, Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, wife of the Governor of Pennsylvania, told the meeting. Women no longer are seeking rights, she declared, but are bending efforts to measuring the responsibilities which are theirs in their present politic status.

"I am a politician of the most hardboiled and shelled-back variety—and proud of it," she declared in a brief exposition of the gubernatorial campaign in Pennsylvania in 1922, in which she declared women were an important influence. "We elected a Governor against the united effort of a supposedly unbreakable machine," she said, and told of the "hectic days of our campaign."

"Every one of us has to be in politics in the fullest sense of the word. We cannot afford to stand aside."

The world movement for security and peace offers probably the most attractive field for woman's influence and activity, Mrs. Pinchot said, but domestic problems are not to be forgotten.

Touching on law enforcement, with particular reference to the Eighteenth Amendment, Mrs. Pinchot said:

"If individuals are going to arrogate to themselves the right to decide which of our laws they shall observe and which they shall violate, then the whole fabric of our Constitution is destroyed."

She quoted Lincoln that "reverence for the laws should become the political religion of the nation," and suggested that women be used in enforcement units in every community.

"The American people are sick to death of this hideous farce and determined that honest effort shall be made to enforce the law—and remember that none has yet been made."

America should have a national Presidential preference primary, and then the direct election of the Chief Executive, instead of choice through the Electoral College, she said, and she urged women's organizations to lend their influence to movements in this direction.

ANTI-WAR COUNCIL DENIES RED TAINT

Leaders Ask Weeks to Correct Charges of Communism Made by General Fries.

ASSERT LOYALTY TO NATION

Secretary of War Calls Their World Court and Arms Reduction Aims Vague.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—Officials of the National Council for the Prevention of War today protested to Secretary Weeks against being classed as an organization promoting communism in the United States and fostering movements encouraging enemies of the Government.

The Council was charged in public speeches by Brig. Gen. Amos A. Fries, Chief of the Chemical Warfare Service, as favoring the red doctrine, and also recently the Secretary of War issued a statement in which he attacked the organization quite as vehemently, and said that their action might easily encourage those who are enemies of the Republic.

The committee visited the Secretary in his office and presented to him a written protest. The signers and callers were Charles A. Lyman of the Farmers' National Union, Marian I. Parkhurst, National League of Women Voters; Ethel M. Smith, National Women's Trade Union League; the Rev. Dr. John A. Ryan, member Executive Board National Council for Prevention of War; Frances F. Bernard, American Association of University Women; Mrs. E. C. Watkins, member of the Executive Board, and S. E. Nicholson, Secretary of the National Council for the Prevention of War. All are members of the council, as well as representatives of other associations, for which they also appeared.

The written protest denied that the organization had been preaching communism, and insisted that all its members were loyal, patriotic citizens. It declared that the real purpose of the organization was the promotion of an International Court of Justice, progressive reduction of armaments by international agreement to a police status, and education for world peace by sane and practical discussion.

The protest reads:

"The issue which led to the convening of this informal conference originated in the repeated public charges of Brig. Gen. Amos A. Fries to the effect that the purpose of the National Council for the Prevention of War is to establish communism in the United States. Prompt denials of this charge were sent to General Fries from the headquarters of the National Council.

"Failing to receive any reply and learning that the charges were being repeated, certain officials of the National Council wrote to the Secretary of War, repeating the denial previously made to General Fries and asking to what extent army officers are permitted to make unwarranted attacks upon civilians and civilian organizations, to which no reply has thus far been received.

"Statements to which we object are not only wholly untruthful but are obviously calculated to injure the influence of an organization in which millions of patriotic citizens are placing their faith and whose confidence is regarded by us in the nature of a sacred trust.

"The National Council for the Prevention of War unqualifiedly repudiates as untruthful the charges which have been made by Brig. Gen. Fries or by others to the effect that the purpose of the council is to establish communism in the United States. The Council, moreover, has no member organization whose purpose is to establish communism. In addition, the Council is absolutely opposed to including in its membership any organization which is advocating communism.

"The National Council for the Prevention of War is composed of patriotic affiliated organizations which are engaged through orderly processes and constitutional methods of procedure in working for better social, economic or political conditions, or for other properly recognized legitimate purposes.

"These organizations are also working individually and through the National Council for World Peace.

Aim at World Organization.

"The Council has a threefold purpose: ultimate world organization, by whatever name, which includes the plan for a permanent court to which all questions of international differences can be dealt with on the basis of reason, understanding and ultimately of international law; progressive reductions of armaments by international agreement to a police status; education for world peace by sane and practical discussion. The Council stands for the orderly processes of government and is merely endeavoring to aid the development of that intelligent public opinion which will find a better way than war to settle international differences.

"With the above as the basis of discussion, the committee representing the National Council wishes to point out to the Secretary of War the fact that any and all unwarranted and untruthful attacks against the honor and integrity of the Council amounts to a positive public disservice.

"The National Council has at no time suggested that army officials should not discuss, publicly or otherwise, policies of the department. The protest of the Council has been, and will continue to be, against the misrepresentation of the views and policies of the Council.

"The Council, we believe, is doing only what every individual has the right to do and should do when it protests as unfair, unsportsmanlike and un-American, against the misrepresentation or slander of those with power to do it injury. As individuals we protest against charges made by General Fries or others, which, by implication, might appear to involve our own loyalty to our own Government.

"Each and every one of us is proud of the fact that we are American citizens with a full consciousness that our patriotism cannot be successfully challenged.

"There has been an intimation that patriotic citizens in the various bodies composing the Council are being misled by bad leadership. We challenge the statement and call for names of any such leaders who are misrepresenting the work of the Council through their respective organizations.

Financed Wholly by Americans.

"There have been intimations also in two or three quarters that probably the National Council is being financed by foreign interests. The books of the Council will show that not a dollar has been contributed to its work except by American citizens.

"There are many reasons why governments, working without the support of great democratically constituted organizations such as ours, cannot so quickly effectuate a program of common understandings among nations that will make war difficult, if not impossible.

"The minds and hearts of mankind demand that wars shall cease. On this the voices of statesmen, of army and navy officers, and of our President are being raised with all possible earnestness. Then shall our Council as representative of a great part of the people remain silent or be in divided camps at a time when inaction and silence will be considered as indifference?

"Our solemn duty as we conceive it is to associate our various organizations together in work which our judgment tells us will bring into the world some betterment of human relations.

"The high character of the officers and staff of the Council, as well as of the organizations which compose it, is sufficient guarantee of the high-minded and patriotic purposes which control the Council.

"In the face of these facts and in view of the misleading implications as to the character of the National Council which have been given to the newspapers by the War Department, thereby confirming in effect the untruthful statements of General Fries on this subject, we ask the Secretary of War to take steps to correct the misrepresentation.

"Furthermore, we regard the requests of the six officers of the National Council addressed to you in a letter on Feb. 26 as reasonable and pertinent and as requiring an answer from the War Department in justice to those who have been unjustly attacked."

Weeks Fears Council Aids Disloyal.

After the protest had been formally read to the Secretary of War there was a frank discussion of the controversy.

The conference apparently led to a satisfactory understanding between the protestants and the Secretary. Following the meeting, which lasted for more than an hour, Secretary Weeks issued the following statement:

"The ladies and gentlemen who came to see me, representing seven different organizations, presented in writing their reasons for desiring the interview with me. This statement they read. I then discussed with them what I understood to be their propaganda and the motives behind it.

"I told them that I did not accuse them of being disloyal citizens and I did not think they were, but I was afraid they were engaged in endeavors which were giving succor and aid to those who are disloyal.

"Then I asked them to point out in just what way they believed any modification could be made in the military establishment of the United States, in its disposition, how there could be a reduction in expenses, or in other matters. To this there was no definite reply.

"I further stated that the doors to my office are always wide open any time they may have a concrete proposition to bring to me, and if it is meritorious I will adopt it; but they should not continue the methods used in the past of advocating vague and indefinite propositions which have no practical value and which can only embarrass the Government. The meeting was entirely harmonious and friendly and I think will result in benefit from the standpoint of those who feel that they have a mission and who were represented here today."

2,000,000 PERSONS LEFT FARMING LIFE IN 1922

Only 880,000 Went From Town to Country, Making a Net Shift of 1,120,000.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—A decrease during 1922 of approximately 460,000 persons in the agricultural population of the United States was reported today by the Department of Agriculture, which said its figures were based on a survey of 10,000 representative farms and groups of farms.

The estimate, which included not merely workers, but men, women and children living on farms, showed a decrease of about 1.5 per cent. from the 1920 census, which placed the agricultural population in rural districts at 31,359,000 persons.

The movement from farms to towns and cities last year was estimated at about 2,000,000 persons, offset in part by the shift of approximately 880,000 persons from towns and cities to farms. This left, it was pointed out, a net shift from farms to urban centres of about 1,120,000 persons, or about 3.6 per cent. of the rural agricultural population.

Births on farms in 1922 were given as 925,000 and deaths as 265,000, the excess of births over deaths reducing the net loss in agricultural population to the 460,000 figure.

In the shift of agricultural population to cities and towns relatively the largest movement was in the mountain States, followed in order by New England, the Pacific, the Middle Atlantic, the East North Central and the South Atlantic States, all above the national average. Below were the West South Central, the West North Central and the East South Atlantic States.

ITALY STANDS READY TO SEND FARM HELP

WILL PLEDGE SELECTION

But Mussolini Opposes American Inspection Before the Immigrants Sail for Here.

WASHINGTON, April 13. — Prince Caetani, the Italian Ambassador, is expected soon to notify the State Department and the Department of Labor that Italy stands ready to supply on short notice the 12 per cent. deficit in farm labor reported recently by the Department of Agriculture by offering the best of selected farmers.

The Ambassador has already indicated in public speeches the desire of his country to send her surplus population to America under conditions as to the character of the immigrants that will meet the requirements of sections of this country where laborers are needed. Existing law prevents the acceptance of any considerable number of Italian immigrants, but Secretary Davis has indicated that he might recommend new legislation. It is expected that the Italian Government will try to have included in the proposed changes some provision to increase the quota assigned to Italy.

Whether Secretary Davis will look with favor on the Italian proposal, which has the strong backing of Premier Mussolini, is problematical. The Italian position is based on a belief that the principal objection to unrestricted immigration is the unfit character of many of the newcomers, and the Ambassador is willing that the Department of Labor specify exactly the kind of immigrants it wishes. Whether farm workers, artisans or mechanics are called for, Italian officials say, Italy can supply the demand.

Some difficulty in the way of agreement on such a plan is expected if Secretary Davis insists upon an inspection of emigrants by American officials stationed in Italy. The Italian Government, it is said, would regard that as an infringement of its sovereignty. It feels that as it has already established a fully equipped department to control emigration, the United States should be willing to accept the pledge that emigration to America will be regulated along the lines agreed on.

Italian immigration is now limited to 42,000 a year, while it is said that the number willing to come averages more than 300,000.

talking to himself. As this monologue seemed to me of interest, I wrote it down, in the hope that it might interest you, to whom I owe so many delightful moments with which you provided me by your friendly conversation and your rare musical talent.

"'It was,' said he, 'in the opinion of our wisest philosophers, held that the world of the Moulin Joli could only last eighteen hours, and this opinion seems to me well founded. For the apparent movement of the source of daylight, which instills life into the whole of nature, has, during my century, considerably declined toward the ocean which surrounds our globe. It is there that it ends its course and extinguishes its lights, leaving our world in darkness and cold, which must necessarily lead to the destruction of all beings and to universal upheaval.

"'I have lived during seven hours, which is a great age, seeing that it amounts to no less than 420 minutes. There are few people whose careers last so long. I have seen generations born, flourish and end in this same day. My present friends are the children and grandchildren of the friends of my youth, who have departed, alas! and whom I will soon follow. According to the laws of nature, even though I am well I cannot expect to live more than seven or eight minutes. What use will my work be to me? What use the trouble I have taken to gather the juice of flowers? I shall not live long enough to enjoy them. What use will be to me those political discussions to which I devoted my life in the design to instruct my compatriots inhabiting this bush? What will become of my philosophical researches, which I dedicated to our species in general? [For in politics, of what use are laws without their moral?] My contemporaries are becoming corrupt, and in a few minutes the nation of ephemaries will be morally lost, like all those which inhabit the neighboring bushes—and in consequence they will be as unhappy as others.

Good Memory Better Than a Name.

"'Alas! how slow is the progress which we make in philosophy, and, alas! how difficult the acquisition of knowledge while life is so short. My friends endeavor to console me by making me hope that my name will survive. They tell me that I have lived long enough in the order of nature and of my own glory. But of what use is a name to an ephemary who perishes? And what will become of all history in eighteen hours, when the Moulin Joli and the whole world will come to an end, when all things will be enveloped in universal ruin? As for me, among all my serious occupations only one real pleasure remains to me, and that is the conviction I have tried during my whole life to do good, and a delightful memory of having enjoyed the amiable conversation of ephemary ladies and of having from time to time listened to the divine notes of charming Madame B., who has sometimes smiled upon my endeavors.'

"BENJAMIN FRANKLIN."

SEES IN RELIGION A GROWING POWER

INSPIRED NATION'S IDEALS

Freedom and Equality Can't Rest on Any Other Basis, He Tells State Y. M. C. A.

ALBANY, April 13.—The force of religion on a nation's destiny was emphasized tonight by Vice President Calvin Coolidge in an address before the New York State Convention of the Young Men's Christian Association. The strength of America, and of all civilized society, he declared, was represented in its religious beliefs and convictions.

"They are not a power which is diminishing, but a power which is increasing," Mr. Coolidge asserted. "The standard of conduct which they require was never before so universally recognized and accepted. It sanctifies every place of worship. It is revealed in every institution of learning, it supports every activity of Government, it sustains every economic structure. In domestic affairs, in international affairs it is more and more the reliance of mankind. The evidences of it are increasing, the results of it are increasing. More and more the people are living under the conviction that it righteousness alone which exalteth any nation.

"Surely the recognition of this fact, which stands out above all others, ought to make these days of abiding satisfaction and of continuing faith and determination for the American people."

Source of Country's Ideals.

The source of this country's ideals of government was in the great movements for religious liberty of the Sixteenth and Seventeenth Centuries, the Vice President declared.

"It was for the principal of personal judgment in matters of religion that the English and Dutch were contending and which set the common people to reading the Bible," he said. "There came to them a new vision of the importance of the individual which brought him into direct contact with the Creator. It was this conception applied to affairs of government that made the people sovereign. It raised up the common man to the place which heretofore had been reserved for a privileged class in church and State. It ennobled the people.

"The logical result of this was the free man, educated in a free school, exercising a free conscience, maintaining a free governmnt. The basis of it all, historically and logically, is religious belief.

"It was the American colonies that defended and re-established these everlasting truths. They set them out in resolutions and declarations, supported them in their Constitution. The broader freedom which they acquired in that century was supplemented by the broader equality which they established in the nineteenth century.

Gave the People Freedom.

"It was because religion gave the people a new importance and a new glory that they demanded a new freedom and a new government. We cannot in our generation reject the cause and retain the result.

"If the institutions they adopted are to survive if the Government which they founded is to endure, it will be because the people continue to have similar religious beliefs. It is idle to discuss freedom and equality on any other basis. It is useless to expect substantial reforms from any other motive. They cannot be administered from without. They must come from within.

"That is why laws alone are so important. To enact or repeal laws is not to secure real reform. It is necessary to take these problems directly to the individual.

"There will be a proper use of our material prosperity when the individual feels a divine responsibility. There will be obedience to the law when the individual feels that government represents a divine authority."

SMITH TELLS POLICIES IN ROCHESTER SPEECH

Special to The New York Times.

ROCHESTER, April 13.—The Board of Elections of Monroe County, publicity of campaign contributions before election, the proposed $50,000,000 bond issue for the building of State hospitals, automobile taxation and licensing and the Republican majority in the Assembly, came in for a share of attention at the hands of Governor Smith, speaking before a luncheon meeting of the Monroe County Democratic Club at the Seneca Hotel this afternoon.

Governor Smith charged that the Election Board in Monroe County was partisan because of single-headed management and urged the desirability of a double-headed board.

He advocated making campaign contributions public before and not after election on the ground that the force of the law requiring publicity could be vastly increased if the voters knew the amounts in every war chest prior to going to the polls.

The need of the proposed issue of $50,000,000 of State bonds to finance the building of suitable State hospitals which would remain efficient for a hundred years, arose, the Governor said, from the inability of the State to spend the amounts required year by year to build enough new hospitals to replace out-of-date structures.

His automobile bill, he pointed out, would give the various localities of the State one-half instead of one-quarter of the funds received from automobile taxation and establish a Central State Bureau to which reports of all accidents would be made.

He assailed the course of the Assembly in dealing with legislation he suggested.

The luncheon was an enthusiastic affair and was attended by a large number of the prominent Democrats of the county.

Woman's Democratic Club Elects.

The annual meeting and election of Directors was held yesterday afternoon by the Women's Democratic Club at the Hotel Commodore. The new Directors elected were Miss Martha Byrne, Mrs. M. F. McPhilips and Miss Ella T. Sullivan.

BRYAN RENEWS WAR ON DARWIN THEORY

Urges West Virginia Legislature to Forbid Teaching of Evolution in Public Schools.

STILL WATCHING POLITICS

But Says It's Unfair to Ask Him Whether He Thinks of Seeking Office Again.

Special to The New York Times.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., April 13.—Denouncing evolution as being contrary to the teachings of the Bible, William J. Bryan, addressing the West Virginia Legislature today, urged that school teachers paid by taxation should not be allowed to teach, under the guise of science or philosophy, anything that undermines faith in God, impairs belief in the Bible or discredits the Son of God and Saviour of the world.

A bill is pending before both Houses to prevent the teachings of Darwinism, and several members wished to hear the views of Mr. Bryan, who was invited to speak.

"Evolutionists rob the Saviour of the glory of virgin birth, the majesty of His deity and the triumph of His resurrection," Mr. Bryan declared. "They weaken faith in the Bible by discarding miracles and the supernatural and by eliminating from the Bible all that conflicts with their theories. They render that book a scrap of paper."

Mr. Bryan confined his argument to Biblical history and recorded events as narrated in both the Old and New Testaments.

Darwin's experiments and research in both animal and bird and insect life, extending over a lifetime, meant nothing so far as humanity is concerned, according to Mr. Bryan, who frequently reiterated the statement that the origin of man could be correctly traced only through Biblical history.

Bryan Forecasts Issues of 1924.

Special to The New York Times.

LEXINGTON, Ky., April 13.—The Anti-Evolution bill before the West Virginia Legislature, which William J. Bryan endorsed in Charleston today, is similar to that which was defeated in the Kentucky General Assembly last year, and which is expected to be revived at the next session. He is beginning a new campaign against evolution instruction, which is expected to continue until the fight ends in the Kentucky Legislature next year.

In an interview here on his way to Charleston, Mr. Bryan said he held nothing in common with Professor Ralph Demaree of Kentucky Wesleyan College, who declared last week that the theory of evolution was not in conflict with the the first chapter of Genesis. Bryan declared they did conflict.

When asked whether he thought of offering himself as a candidate for public office again, he declared the question was unfair.

"Issues make candidates," Mr. Bryan said. "I couldn't answer a question like that without placing myself in an embarrassing position."

He added that at this time he was not considering any political moves, but was keenly interested in politics, issues and candidates.

"International issues," Mr. Bryan remarked, "may or may not be paramount next year. It all depends upon what occurs in Europe and what takes place in the Federal Congress between now and the time of the national conventions. The domestic issues which are likely to be prominent, however, may be discerned from this distant date."

As the first probable issue, Mr. Bryan placed relief for the farmers, adding that "legislation which will provide a means for reconciliation between capital and labor is of second importance."

Mr. Bryan described eradication of the profiteer as the third issue of importance. Law enforcement, he said, would be an issue unless legislation removed it.

SACCO FOUND INSANE; DEFENSE FIGHTS ON

New Trial Is Still Sought for Vanzetti as Prosecution Accepts Alienists' Report.

BOSTON, April 13.—The long struggle to bring about a new trial for Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, convicted in 1921 of the murder of a paymaster and guard at South Braintree, will be continued in spite of Sacco's new legal status, Fred H. Moore of counsel for the defense, announced tonight. A report of alienists made public last night declared Sacco insane and recommended that he be committed to a hospital for mental diseases. District Attorney Harold P. Williams of Norfolk County said today that he regarded this report as conclusive evidence of Sacco's mental state and would accept it.

"The basic merits of the case have not been affected," said Moore. "Vanzetti still stands convicted of murder. Both men are innocent of the crimes of which they have been convicted. The finding of the alienists affects only Sacco. There will be no let-up until these men are cleared.

The finding of Vanzetti innocent would also prove Sacco guiltless. Sacco, according to the alienists' report, is suffering only from a prison psychosis induced by his 36-months' confinement and acquittal would have the effect of bringing his mind back to normal."

A conference of attorneys for the defense will be held here tomorrow to discuss what Moore termed "questions of policy."

SPENDS UNLUCKY DAY ABED

MACON, Ga., April 13.—J. A. Parham, Macon business man, is spending today in bed.

While working on an automobile several months ago a steel splinter destroyed the sight of one eye. It was on the 13th of the moth.

The next 13th he broke an arm while cranking an automobile.

A month later, on the 13th, he slipped in his garage and broke his leg.

Two months after that he was able, by extra precautions, to avoid a mishap.

Then the 13th came again, and while he was watching mechanics repair an automobile a block broke loose and smashed his foot.

Last month on the 13th fire destroyed his garage.

Today's combination—Friday the 13th—was too much for him.

DENBY FINDS FLEET IN NEED OF CRUISERS

WOULD STRENGTHEN CANAL

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—Secretary Denby and members of the Congressional party which went with him to Panama to witness the tactical manoeuvres of the United States fleet and inspect points of important American contact in the West Indies returned to Washington today convinced that one of the primary needs of the American fleet is cruisers, that the defenses of the Panama Canal should be strengthened and that it would be a mistake to withdraw the American marine contingent from Haiti for a long time to come.

The United States has already given its pledge to withdraw its marines from Santo Domingo, and plans for the turnover are under way, but probably a year will elapse before the Dominicans have reached the point where the situation can be entrusted to them. The consensus of opinion among Senators and Representatives who went to Santo Domingo with Mr. Denby is that, even after the American marine forces have been withdrawn from that republic, it would be only a matter of time before the situation would become such as to force American intervention again.

The naval transport Henderson, on which the party made its cruise through the West Indies, docked at the Washington Navy Yard at noon today, fourteen hours ahead of schedule time. Not until this morning had members of the party seen rain since their rough passage six weeks ago around Cape Hatteras on the outward voyage to Panama. When the transport passed Mount Vernon on its way up the Potomac through a driving rain the ship's bell was tolled, taps sounded and the band played the National Anthem.

Since leaving Washington on March 5 the Denby party had traveled more than 6,000 miles on land and sea. The distance covered by the Henderson was 5,800 miles, including a round trip through the Panama Canal and visits to the ports of Kingston, Port Antonio, Santiago de Cuba, Guantanamo, Port au Prince, Santo Domingo City, San Juan and St. Thomas in the Virgin Islands.

While at Panama the Secretary's party was distributed among the various dreadnoughts of the fleet and steamed nearly 500 miles in the Gulf of Panama during the manoeuvres. By automobile the party covered an additional 500 miles on land crossing the Island of Jamaica from Kingston to Port Antonio, going fifty-five miles into the interior of Haiti to study conditions and covering 125 miles over the fine highways of Porto Rico from San Juan nearly to Ponce on the Caribbean shore.

Close attention was given to the work of the marines in Haiti and Santo Domingo. Members of the Denby party were able to visit any part of either Haiti or Santo Domingo without the slightest molestation. A few years ago it was as much as a man's life was worth to visit parts of the Cacos bandit country in the heart of Haiti.

In Panama, Haiti and Santo Domingo members of Congress and newspaper correspondents accompanying the Secretary made airplane trips in service machines and made birdseye surveys of the regions traversed. While at Panama members of the party spent an afternoon witnessing the work of the airplane carrier Langley, and Secretary Denby and other members of the party also went down in submarines in the Bay of Panama.

The fleet at Panama was the most formidable ever assembled under the American flag and it was the first time that American naval units in the Atlantic and Pacific had been brought together in combined manoeuvres on so extensive a scale. Practically everything the American navy has in units in active commission, other than ships in the Far East, was utilized in the tactical manoeuvres which began with a naval attack on the Panama Canal Zone and ended with the sinking of the historic old battleship Iowa.

The Denby party returned convinced that the combined fleet under the command of Admiral Jones is on tip-toe in efficiency, but that the fleet greatly lacked cruisers. During the manoeuvres theoretical cruisers had to be simulated by destroyers. An analytical study of the fleet's tactical problems showed that the American navy needs cruisers more than any other type of vessel. Ten of these are being built and seven are due for commissioning in June, but more of them will be required to round out the American battle fleet for service against any real enemy in actual battle.

One of the striking features of the work of the fleet in connection with the Panama manoeuvres was the performance of the squadrons of the eighteen planes which accompanied the Atlantic scouting fleet of battleships to the Canal Zone. The eighteen planes arrived in Panama after a 2,400-mile journey by air from Hampton Roads and with scarcely more time to make minor adjustments and refuel were sent out on the scouting line in a problem involving 15,000 plane miles of flying. When the scouting planes have returned to their base at Hampton Roads they will have completed in the neighborhood of 130,0... plane miles of flying.

Nearly 200 successful flights have been made by planes taking off from the airplane carrier Langley without mishap, and no plane has yet failed to make a successful return landing on deck of the Langley.

The gunnery work of the fleet was very impressive. Hits were made with algebraic precision. The battleship Maryland, which sailed from Panama for New York City immediately after the close of the tactical exercises, constitutes the last word in American gunnery evolution.

EXPECT NAVAL PROMOTIONS

WASHINGTON, April 13.—Sweeping changes in the high command of the American Navy are expectedto follow Secretary Denby's return today from his visit with the fleet. Recommendations for the readjustment were on his desk when he reached the department.

It is understood the suggested changes included the following:

Admiral Robert E. Coontz, now Chief of Naval Operations, to command the combined fleets, succeeding Admiral Hilary P. Jones, who would go to the General Board.

Admiral E. W. Eberle, commanding the battle fleet, to be Chief of Naval Operations.

Rear Admiral Thomas Washington, Chief of the Bureau of Navigation, to command a foreign squadron, probably the Asiatic Fleet. He would be succeeded by Captain Richard Leigh, now Assistant Chief of the bureau.

Command of the battle fleet held for the present in abeyance, with Admiral S. S. Robison, a member of the General Board, heading the list of officers recommended.

Rear Admiral W. V. Pratt, also a member of the board, and one of the two advisers to the American arms conference delegation, to command the scouting fleet.

Rear Admiral Charles H. McVey, Chief of Ordnance, to command a battleship division.

Changes in command of most of the individual battleships also are in prospect, and several already have been announced.

Most of the major changes to be made are incident to the biennial shifts in assignment customary in the service. Others are the result of vacancies and emergencies.

Bossange, Director of the College of Fine Arts at the Carnegie Institute of Technology, was appointed Professor of Archaeology and Director of the School of Architecture in place of the late Prof. Howard Crosby Butler. Frank L. Eldman, who was Supervising Instructor of Aviation in the Engineering Officers' School at Columbia during the war, was appointed Associate Professor of Civil Engineering. Dr. Richard Montgomery Field, Assistant Professor at Brown University, was appointed Assistant Professor in the Department of Geology.

Frank A. Heacock, who has been connected with the Faculty of the Virginia Polytechnic Institute, was appointed Assistant Professor of Civil Engineering. The following Assistant Professors at Princeton were promoted to the rank of Associate Professor:

Willson of the Department of Engineering, Henry Jones Ford of the Department of History and Politics.

The Trustees raised the tuition fee to $350. At the time tuition was raised to $300 the number of scholarships was extended to about 300, so that at present about one man in seven is the beneficiary of university aid. In addition, remission of tuition is granted to all needy students maintaining a certain standard of work. It is understood that further arrangements along this line will be made. Last year the average cost of educating a student at Princeton was $525, and it was decided that, rather than defer deserved and necessary increases in salary to members of the Faculty, the parents should be called upon where possible to meet more nearly the cost of education, provided that the burden upon deserving but needy students was not increased.

PRINCETON TO GET ESTATE.

Stock Valued at $558,188 Subject to a Life Interest.

Princeton University will get the bulk of the estate of Charles F. Williams, officer of the Baker & Williams Company, storage warehouses, and a resident of Connecticut, who died on Aug. 11, 1921. The appraisal, filed yesterday, shows that the total estate was $648,996, of which $558,188 was in stock of the Baker & Williams Company, consisting of 1,755 shares of common valued at $464,688, and 935 shares of preferred.

Mr. Williams gave $20,000 in real estate and $10,158 in personal effects to his cousin, Frances L. Howland. He also left to her the $558,188 of Baker & Williams stock for life. Upon her death it goes to Princeton University.

"It's a mighty big family"

I HAVE always been glad that La Palina is an easy cigar to ask for by name. The words La Palina are derived from the family name of Paley. It is the fitting name for this cigar, for the simple reason that its manufacture is a family affair. It's a mighty big family, too. For it includes every employee on the payroll of this company.

You won't find one person connected with the manufacture of La Palina who isn't vitally interested in its quality. From the time it is received at the factory until the finished cigars are shipped, the fine imported tobacco is treated with the utmost care.

No process is hurried, nothing is neglected that will preserve the full flavor and aroma of the tobacco for the smoker. The method of packing and shipping is given just as much care as the manufacture of the cigar. Every possible effort is made to see that the La Palinas at the cigar counter are always fresh. And this is the only way to make and sell a fine cigar.

To-day, after 27 years of manufacture, judging solely by the friends it has made, I am more proud than ever to explain the meaning of the name La Palina.

"Come Into My Office"

Are You Proud of Your Floors When You Invite People to Enter?

Luckily a floor of Armstrong's Linoleum can be laid over wood or concrete. And this laying can be done in such a manner that not only is the new floor a cheerful note of color, but it presents a smooth, clear expanse, unbroken by gaping cracks or seams.

Armstrong's A Linoleum

In choosing such a floor, bear in mind what can be done with bordered linoleum. A border of Armstrong's Jaspé linoleum or of Armstrong's plain black, gray, or green linoleum set around a field of marble or inset tile linoleum will give your office floor all the dignity and beauty that you can desire even with the finest appointments.

These bordered linoleum floors, while inexpensive, are permanent, quiet, resilient and comfortable. They offer designs and colors to blend with any scheme of office decoration.

This idea of bordered linoleum office floors is especially effective when extended to suites of offices. To all appearances the floor is built to fit each office. Put your rugs on these floors, wax the linoleum occasionally and you will have an office that you will be proud to invite people to enter.

Armstrong's Linoleum is economical because it never needs expensive refinishing. Your architect, contractor or any good linoleum merchant can give you information on the installation of linoleum floors and their low upkeep cost.

Linoleum permanently cemented in place requires no stretching or retrimming. Such a floor is smooth and tight

Kellogg's Bran is permanent relief for constipation if it is eaten regularly—at least two tablespoonfuls daily; in chronic cases, with each meal. And, Kellogg's is a taste-delight because it is delicious and comes to you as a highly palatable, desirable food, as well as a corrective.

You will greatly enjoy Kellogg's Bran as a cereal; its nut-like flavor improves any hot or cold cereal, and innumerable inviting bakery batches can be made with Kellogg's. Try some Kellogg's Bran pancakes. They're great! Or, raisin bread or gems! Kellogg's recipes are printed on each package.

READY TO EXTEND INWOOD HILL PARK

WOULD PAY $3,500,000

WILL ADD 92 ACRES TO CITY'S PARK AREA.

Action favoring the acquisition of ninety-two acres as an addition to Inwood Hill Park at the northern end of Manhattan, was taken by unanimous vote of the Board of Estimate yesterday. The map submitted by Julius Miller, President of the Borough of Manhattan, which shows the boundaries of the proposed addition was approved by the board and on motion of Murray Hulbert, President of the Board of Aldermen, the matter of obtaining options on the land was placed in the hands of Controller Craig.

The Controller was authorized to obtain offers from the thirty or more persons who own the property. If the property can be acquired for $3,500,000 it will be taken. The Controller was asked to make his report within the next sixty days.

The acquisition of the Inwood Hill Park addition which, according to plans now under preparation in the offices of President Miller, is one link in a connected chain of parks adjoining Riverside Drive at the northern end of Manhattan Island, seems to be assured after twenty or more years of discussion. Controller Craig said that he had obtained prices from a number of property owners and that from these it appeared certain that the total cost would be within the $3,500,000 which the board will allow.

Viaduct and Bridge Proposed.

Eventually it is planned to extend Riverside Drive across the Dyckman Street valley by a viaduct, connecting Inwood Hill Park and ultimately a bridge across the river to the Bronx will be built. Most of the land in the new park is natural wildwood and, according to officials of the Park Department, the cost of making it suitable for park purposes, including the laying out of roads, would be comparatively small.

More than 100 persons appeared at the Board of Estimate's hearing on the proposal yesterday morning. Only one man—E. Feilman of 1,476 Broadway—opposed it. He declared that the money should be spent for schools or subways.

Representatives of a number of the organizations interested in the parks were present at the hearing, but only one—Reginald P. Bolton, Washington Heights historian and representative of several societies—spoke. Before he finished the board took up the question of financing and after an extended discussion the plan referred to was adopted.

Controller Craig and Presidents Miller, Hulbert and Riegelmann all favored the plan and no opposition was voiced by the other members of the board. The Mayor, however, believed that the whole matter should go over for thirty days, and in the meantime the Corporation Counsel should take steps to learn what the cost would be.

"My judgment," said Controller Craig, "is that if we can get the land for $3,500,000, we should not let it go. Figures that I have received from a number of taxpayers indicate that the price will be within that figure."

The Mayor said that he still held to the view that if the map were adopted the city was committed to the plan and the price of the land would go up.

"There are large numbers of people who are interested in the proposition from a standpoint of property," said President Hulbert. "These people are interested in seeing the city acquire additional parks. Personally, I feel that the time has arrived when the city should decide one way or another whether the land is to be taken or whether the property is to be improved. The difficulty is that we have been put off for years by the same kind of suggestions that have been made here today."

Calls It "Bunch of Rocks."

"You don't want to pay an exorbitant price for that bunch of rocks," said the Mayor.

"There is no more ideal property in the city than this," President Hulbert told him. A woman in the room cried: "There is not one single foot of it that is not usable. The price is jumping every day."

"We ought to mark a step of progress today by doing something," said Mr. Hulbert.

Mr. Bolton said that no one could question the desirability of acquiring the property. "It is a priceless possession," he told the Mayor. "The acquisition of it would be the crowning achievement of your administration."

"Oh, I am getting crowned every day," said the Mayor with a side glance at the Controller.

After some discussion a motion was carried to adopt the map and the matter left in the hands of the Controller to obtain prices on the parcels.

Under the plan proposed owners of property that will be directly benefited by the acquisition of the additional park land will pay 10 per cent., or about $200 for a lot twenty-five by 100 feet. Manhattan Borough will pay 80 per cent. and the Bronx will pay 10 per cent.

The possibility of a renewal by John D. Rockefeller Jr. of his offer of a fifty-seven-acre tract, including the Billings estate, to the city was not brought up at the meeting. President Miller has ordered an investigation to see whether this park may come into the city's possession, but it was thought advisable to wait until action was taken on the addition to Inwood Hill Park.

The Rockefeller property includes a hill south of Inwood Hill and facing it across the Dyckman Street Valley. The proposed Dyckman Street viaduct would connect the two parks.

NO PAYROLLS PADDED CONNOLLY REPORTS

ADMITS ERRORS IN NAMES

Many Signed Up for Snow Work Who Were Ashamed to Reveal True Identity, He Finds.

Borough President Maurice E. Connolly of Queens declared yesterday that there had been no "padding" of snow removal payrolls in Queens, as intimated by Controller Charles L. Craig. Mr. Connolly asserted that an investigation by his office had failed to reveal any intentional wrongdoing, although he admitted that fictitious names and addresses had been used by some of those who received checks.

"There has been no padding, so far as I have been able to learn, and the hue and cry of wholesale fraud is ridiculous," Mr. Connolly said. "Our inquiry shows that some of the snow shovelers did give their addresses in stables and some did put their addresses down as in a brewery, but every one of them had what he considers a real reason.

"For instance, there is a coterie of American Legion men, war veterans, who were ashamed to have it known that they had to shovel snow. They gave their address where there is a brewery. Another coterie of 'down and outers,' whose address was given from a stable, actually have no homes, and they really sleep in that stable. Others gave an address where there is a saloon. Many of them are in that saloon twenty out of the twenty-four hours, for they have no other place to go.

"There is one man on the payroll who gave an Irish name, although he is German in name, features and accent. I asked him why he did it, and he told me that his wife, who is separated from him, would have grabbed the money, and he was anxious to fool her. There is more than one case of that kind, too. Subterfuges were practiced by quite a few of the men, but so far we have found that every one of them actually shoveled snow. That, after all, is the main question. Let those who will make political capital or fun of the poor fellows."

THIRD TORNADO IN 10 DAYS.

Three Dead, Twenty Injured in Latest Louisiana Storm.

THIBODEAUX, La., April 13.—Three negroes were killed and a score of whites and negroes injured when a tornado swept across Bayou Lafourche early today. Many houses in the path of the tornado, which was estimated to be 20 yards wide, were wrecked.

A courier on horseback rode wildly into Thibodeaux soon after daylight and told of the destruction. Sheriff Stark went to the scene and reported conditions at Lafourche as extremely grave. Physicians and hundreds of others left here for the village carrying supplies and medicine.

It was reported that Lockport, La., twenty-two miles from this place, suffered from the tornado.

This was the third tornado to strike Louisiana within the last ten days, taking a toll of lives and property.

CULLMAN, Ala., April 13.—Three persons were injured, several residences and barns blown down and scores of animals were killed in a violent windstorm which swept the Sincoe section, fifteen miles northeast of Cullman last night. The injured are Mrs. R. A. King and her baby and Miss Lola Manning, daughter of John Manning, a planter, whose house was reported to have been destroyed.

GIANTS AND YANKS PLAY HERE TODAY

HUGMEN TO MEET ROBINS

New York's two championship major league teams will make their first appearance in this city this afternoon. The Giants will meet the White Sox at the Polo Grounds and the Yankees will resume their series with the Robins at Ebbets Field. The world's champions, accompanied by the White Sox, arrived in town from Norfolk, Va., last night. The Yankees and Robins were scheduled to arrive at the Pennsylvania Station at 10 o'clock this morning. Both games today are scheduled to start at 3 o'clock.

The clash between the Giants and the White Sox at the Polo Grounds today will be the fifteenth of the series between the two clubs this Spring. Of the fourteen games played to date the New Yorkers have won six, the Chicago Club has captured seven and one game ended in a tie. The two teams are also scheduled to meet at the Polo Grounds tomorrow in the final game of the series. If the world's champions are to finish the series with an edge on Kid Gleason's tribe they will have to win the next two games. On Monday McGraw will lead his team to West Point for a game with the Army nine, which is coached by Hans Lobert, former star third baseman of the Giants. On Monday night the champions will leave for Boston, where they will open the championship season in a game with the Braves on Tuesday.

Jess Barnes, one of the Giants' veteran twirlers, is scheduled to start on the mound for the Giants today, and he will probably draw the famous Urban Faber as his opponent. Hugh McQuillan is likely to relieve Barnes in the fifth or sixth inning, while Stubby Mack will probably complete the game for the White Sox.

High-Priced Stars in Action.

Much interest attaches to to-day's contest at the Polo Grounds, as it will give the local fans their first opportunity to see the two most expensive recruits in action. The players referred to are, of course, Jimmy O'Connell of the Giants and Willie Kamm of the White Sox. O'Connell is scheduled to perform in centre field for the champions, unless Kid Gleason decides to use a left-hander in the box. If a southpaw opposes the Giants, Cunningham will assign Cunningham to centre field.

Kamm will be seen at third base for the Chicago club. The former Pacific Coast star has been playing fine ball during the games in the South, and is already being heralded as one of the best third basemen in the major leagues. Kamm has been playing a wonderful defensive game and has been batting the ball for a mark around .450. His acquisition has transformed the Chicago infield into one of the best in the big leagues.

The game between the Yankees and Robins at Ebbets Field will be the thirteenth of the series between the two local rivals. The Hugmen have won seven of the twelve games, but the Robins still have a chance to capture the series, as the teams are scheduled to meet again tomorrow and on Monday. The Yankees will enjoy a day of rest on Tuesday before opening the league season at their new stadium on the following afternoon. The Robins will start their regular season on Tuesday in a game with the Phillies at Ebbets Field.

Rain Prevents Giants' Game.

Special to The New York Times.

PORTSMOUTH, Va., April 13.—A driving rain storm prevented the Giants and White Sox from resuming their series here today. As soon as the game was officially declared off, the teams left for New York where they are scheduled to meet tomorrow. Jess Barnes and Hugh McQuillan were scheduled to pitch for the Giants today while Faber and Mack were due to perform for the Chicago club.

LANDIS TO OFFICIATE AT BASEBALL OPENINGS

Commissioner Will Be in Boston Tuesday and at Yanks' Stadium Wednesday.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, April 13.—Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis, head of organized baseball, will leave Chicago tomorrow morning to open the baseball season in Boston and New York. Because of his friendship and admiration for Christy Mathewson the Commissioner will go to Boston to assist the Braves in starting their season Tuesday, and will preside over the dedication of the Yankee Stadium Wednesday.

NATIONALS SIGN UMPIRE.

Derr Leaves Internationals to Officiate in Big League.

Dell Derr of Baltimore, International League umpire for the last three years, yesterday signed a National League contract for the coming season. He will replace Charles Rigler, veteran arbiter, who has retired to devote his time to business in Kentucky.

Derr, a World War veteran, has been umpiring for eight years. He was regarded as one of the most capable indicator men in the International League, receiving particular commendation for his work last Fall in the "little world's series," in which Baltimore defeated St. Paul.

John A. Heydler, President of the National League, announced that Derr was obtained through arrangement with John Conway Toole, head of the International circuit.

DARTMOUTH SQUAD CUT.

Coach Jeff Tesreau Retains Thirty Baseball Players.

Special to The New York Times.

HANOVER, N. H., April 13.—Thirty men were retained on the Dartmouth baseball squad today by Coach Jeff Tesreau, who chopped off eleven heads in the final cut of the year. The group includes two men for every position in the infield, five outfielders and seventeen battery candidates. Practice is now being held on the campus, pending the completion of the work of renovating the Memorial Field diamond after an unusually long Winter.

The Green squad is now going through hard daily workouts in preparation for what is expected to be one of the hardest games of the season against Holy Cross next Thursday at Worcester. It is probable that Steinhilber, who formerly pitched for Holy Cross, will be on the mound for Dartmouth against his old team mates.

Reds Release Pitcher Roberts.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, April 13.—Jim Roberts, pitcher, who was given a tryout with the Cincinnati Reds this Spring, was returned today to the San Antonio (Texas) club.

'Golden Rule' to Be Observed At Big Ten Baseball Games

CHICAGO, April 13 (Associated Press).—A "golden rule" in baseball will prevail during the Western Conference championship season this year. The games will be conducted under a code of "sportsmanship and courtesy instead of rowdyism." Calling a pitcher a "big tramp" or similar names in an attempt to rattle him will be regarded as unsportsmanlike and will not be tolerated either from the players or spectators, according to a code of sportsmanship for college baseball announced by Major John L. Griffith, Commissioner of Athletics in the Big Ten. The code provides that there shall be no remark or action by a player or spectator that reflects directly or indirectly upon the opponent, umpire or spectator. No freak delivery, such as the spitball or shineball, will be allowed this season.

HUGGINS SAYS SCOTT WILL MISS OPENER

Yankees' Manager Declares Injured Shortstop Won't Play for Two Weeks.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, April 13.—Speeding toward New York on a special train, the Yankees and Robins reached Pittsburgh at midnight tonight, waited only long enough to change engines and then sped away on the last leg of their journey. If the train is on time the teams will be in the Pennsylvania Station at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning, in plenty of time to play a game at Ebbets Field in the afternoon.

Everett Scott, who sprained his ankle in yesterday's game at Springfield, Mo., was up and walking around early this morning. Without telling Trainer "Doc" Woods, Scotty strolled into the diner for breakfast and showed only a slight limp. The ankle is not swollen and doesn't give Scott much pain. An X-ray examination made by doctors at Springfield showed no broken bones, and the surgeons described it as an ordinary sprain.

"Scott won't be able to play for two or three weeks, even though it is nothing worse than a bad sprain," said Huggins this afternoon. But the Deacon thought otherwise. "Play in the opening game? You bet I will," said Everett, and there you are. Take your choice.

One thing is certain—Huggins won't jeopardize Scott's chances just for the sake of keeping his consecutive-game record unbroken. If Scott isn't ready to play Wednesday, he won't play. Another sure thing is that Huggins will take immediate steps to get another experienced utility infielder. Such a trade is now brewing and may be consummated before next Wednesday.

The Yanks rode through rain all last night and today. They managed to get in their last game at Springfield. Luck was surely with the barnstormers. Only one game, that at Jackson, Miss., was called off, and the crowds were big and generally bigger even than they were last Spring. Tulsa, Okla., the land of oil wells and gushers, turned out the largest crowd, about 6,200.

The Yanks not only lead in the series, by seven games to five, but they are also away ahead of the Robins in hitting, the respective figures being .341 and .264. Joe Dugan, with a mark of .372, tops the Yankees' hitters.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., April 13.—Chauncey Eno of last year's Yale freshman pitching staff was selected to face the New Haven Eastern League champions in the opening game this afternoon at Yale Field. Eno held the pros to nine safeties in seven innings, and Tommy Hartnett, who replaced him, allowed them only one hit in the solitary inning in which he toiled. New Haven won, however, by 3 to 1.

The varsity collegians found the two Eastern League boxmen, Baumgartner and Joyce, for six hits, Captain Mallory of the Eli football team punching Joyce for a triple to the right field fence in the eighth. This hit led to the only Yale run, Captain O'Hearn of the baseball team following with a safety through shortstop, on which Mallory scored. In the field Yale played without an error.

HARVARD'S FENCERS WIN COLLEGE TITLE

Cadets Take Team and Individual Honors With Both Epee and Sabre.

Fencers representing Harvard University won the intercollegiate foils team championship at the Hotel Astor last night in the final round of the intercollegiate championship tournament. Harvard won 17 bouts and lost 10. The Crimson did not win without a struggle, however, for the Yale foilsmen pressed them closely throughout the competition. Yale scored 16 victories and was defeated in 11 bouts. In winning the championship, Harvard captured the Colonel Robert M. Thompson Cup emblematic of the intercollegiate team fencing championship.

It was the first victory of a Harvard team with the foils in the intercollegiates since 1899, when a team from Cambridge captained by George H. Breed, now a prominent member of the Fencers' Club, won the Thompson trophy. Everett Hale Lane captained last night's team and played a big part in the victory, winning eight of the seventeen bouts. His brother, E. L. Lane, won seven, and Roland Fleer, the third member of the team, accounted for the other two.

E. L. Lane defeated his brother in the competition for individual foils honors and tied with S. G. Huntington of Yale. Each won seven bouts and lost one. In the fence-off, which was one of the prettiest bouts ever seen in an intercollegiate championship, Huntington won by the close score of 7 to 5.

Large Crowd is Present.

The Grand Ballroom of the hotel was crowded throughout the evening with the relatives and friends of the swordsmen, who came to see the bouts and to enjoy the dancing which annually winds up the two days' tournament. The fencing program for the night was much too long to be crowded into the time allotted, and as a consequence, it was not until long after 2 o'clock this morning that those who had not lost heart and left heard the first strains of the orchestra. At that hour the bouts in the final round robin of the sabre championship were still going on.

John Mark Pesek of the United States Military Academy won the intercollegiate épée championship when he defeated C. H. Callaway of the United States Naval Academy, winner of the other épée title last year, in the fence-off between the two after they had tied in the final round in this competition.

West Point also took the team honors with a total of nine bouts won and five lost. Annapolis won eight and lost six, Harvard won four and lost four, and Harvard won three and lost eleven.

Army won the team sabre championship, capturing eleven bouts. Lawrence V. Castner, captain of the cadet team, captured individual honors. He won nine straight bouts and was the only man who went through the entire day's competition without losing a bout.

Army, by taking first in the sabres and épée events and fourth in the foils, won the new three weapon trophy offered this year by the Intercollegiate Fencing Association for all-around efficiency.

Reinhold F. Hertzberg of Dartmouth took second honors to Castner with the sabre, winning six bouts and losing one. He was the only fencer to qualify for the finals in both sabres and foils.

Pesek's victory in the fence-off was a reversal of the decision of the match between the two in the regular round-robin, which Callaway won. Three minutes were required to decide the tie between them. Callaway, who is much taller than Pesek, rushed in to make his thrust. His point reached its mark, but Pesek counted also, and the judges decided that the latter's touch was made first.

Nine Contenders for the Title.

There were nine contenders for the individual title, and four pairs competing for team honors. Harold Boulton of Yale was the extra man. He won five bouts and lost three. E. H. Price of the Military Academy won four and lost the same number and J. S. Keating of the Naval Academy won three and lost five. C. J. Shearn Jr., Harvard, Donald Thomson and D. F. Cavers of Pennsylvania each won two and lost six, and J. K. Watson, Harvard, won one out of eight. Boulton's matches counted only in the individual competition.

Pesek and Callaway each won six out of eight matches. The success of the service fencers was not unexpected as both are swordsmen of known ability and had shown the worth of their steel in the qualifying round. Boulton of Yale was a dangerous man throughout the final round and might have tied with the other two for first place had the victories he balanced the slightest bit more the other way in any one of his three matches lost, all of which were close. He won one of his matches from Callaway. The Eli, according to one of his opponents, as good as wins most of his matches, even when he takes his side position stand.

Mrs. Mallory Returns Home; Declines to Be Interviewed

Mrs. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory, national women's tennis champion, came home yesterday on the Cunarder Mauretania from France, where she was defeated by Suzanne Lenglen, French racquet star. Mrs. Mallory, who was accompanied by Franklin I. Mallory, her husband, was keenly bent on dodging newspaper men who sought to ask her about the match. Cold glances and unresponsiveness were features of the attempted interview.

"I don't want to say anything to the press," she said. "You heard enough from me the last time."

CUTLER GETS LEAD IN BILLIARD MATCH

Albert Cutler defeated Charles Peterson last night by a score of 400 to 240 in the first block of their 18.2 short-stop billiard championship match at the Strand Academy, Forty-seventh Street and Broadway. Cutler will resume play this evening with the balls in the same position as he left them when he completed the block with an unfinished run of 51. After Peterson's first inning, 11, which he collected his high run of 61, he had difficulty in making his shots and had several slim innings. Cutler got under way more slowly, making his high run of 100 in the eleventh inning. Cutler had an average of 28 8-14 and Peterson one of 17 1-7.

In the fourth inning Peterson shot with the black ball instead of the white and which was unnoticed by the referee until he had completed his shot, when a foul was called. In the twelfth inning Cutler was kissed out of a point when he seemed to be going in good stroke. He had an unproductive inning next, and then made his uncompleted run of 51, going out.

The score by innings follows:

ROUSH MAY STILL SIGN.

Rumor Says Reds' Holdout Outfielder Will Accept Terms Today.

CINCINNATI, April 13.—Hope has not been abandoned in local baseball circles that Ed Roush, holdout outfielder of the Cincinnati Reds, will be brought into the fold.

The Directors of the club at another meeting today refused to recede from their original offer to Roush of $15,000 a year minus a $50 fine imposed for every day he remained away from the training camp. Many fans have urged the Directors to remit this fine. It was reported that another proposition was made to Roush but neither party to the controversy would confirm it. There was a persistent rumor, however, that Roush would sign a contract tomorrow at what was called the "club's terms." No elucidation on this was obtainable.

RICHARDS REACHES FINAL IN TENNIS

Will Meet Voshell for North and South Title at Pinehurst—Rain Stops Doubles.

Special to The New York Times.

PINEHURST, N. C., April 13.—Vincent Richards, national indoor singles and national turf and indoor doubles champion, and S. Howard Voshell, former holder of the indoor singles title, will meet at Pinehurst tomorrow in the five-set final match for the North and South championship title. Richards defeated G. Carlton Shafer of Philadelphia in today's semi-final round, 6—0, 6—4, and Voshell came through to the final bracket by winning, 6—2, 6—3, over Dr. Philip B. Hawk of Philadelphia.

Miss Helen Gilleaudeau, No. 6 in national ranking and leading favorite for the women's title, and Mrs. Edward R. Raymond of New York, several times holder of the metropolitan title, will oppose each other in the final of the women's singles. Miss Gilleaudeau, playing against Miss Marian Chapman of Nyack in the semi-final round, defeated the New Jersey titleholder, 6—3, 6—3. Mrs. Raymond, after a spirited battle with Mrs. De Forest Candee of New York, finally won, 7—0, 6—2.

Rain Interferes With Play.

Showers which fell at frequent intervals during the day and which prevented the conclusion of the men's doubles final worked to the disadvantage of Shafer and of Dr. Hawk in their respective contests with Richards and Voshell on the slippery sand-clay courts. Richards and Voshell, however, clearly held the upper hand from the start to the finish of their semi-final matches, and while their opponents might have been able to make a better showing on drier courts, there remained no doubt at the finish that neither of them could have stood any chance of winning even under the best of conditions.

Richards rarely found it necessary to force the net position in order to make his points against Shafer, contenting himself with shooting fast drives to the sidelines and the rear with beautiful precision and keeping Shafer, especially during the opening set, chasing almost hopelessly after the ball.

Shafer failed to win a game in the opening set, but he put a much stronger defense in the second set and solving the difficult situation which was apparent soon after the start of the second set, brought the score to two games all after losing the first game and the second one. Richards forced the pace for while after, and soon brought the score to 5—2, and although he failed in his attempt to take the match with the next game, losing both that one and the following one, the Yonkers youth found Shafer tiring in the tenth game of the set and quickly brought the match to an end.

Voshell, realising the practical impossibility of outplaying Dr. Hawk at long range, forced his way to the net whenever the slightest opportunity presented and while sacrificing many a point and several games by his aggressive tactics he found such methods fully justified in the end. Like Richards, Voshell kept his opponent constantly on the move. He gradually wore down the Philadelphian, who, by way of preparation for today's hard match, had been engaged in 138 games in the course of the last two days.

Mrs. Raymond Victorious.

The most evenly contested match of the day was the contest in which Mrs. Raymond after a keen contest for the points with Mrs. Candee, finally won her way into the final bracket to oppose Miss Gilleaudeau.

Mrs. Candee was leading by 7—2 and lacked only one point of winning the first set. At critical points she made the mistake of playing safe and waiting for Mrs. Raymond to call for the needed point, the consequence being that Mrs. Raymond not only brought the game to deuce and won it, but also took the next two games and the set, 7 to 5. After that Mrs. Raymond was not to be halted in her progress, playing with unfaltering steadiness gathered in the second set at 6—3 and with it the match.

Miss Gilleaudeau and Miss Chapman both played a back court game in the other semi-final match, and although Miss Chapman made several advances into the forecourt to take an overhead or a volleying shot, she was not steady enough to make these tactics profitable against the remarkably accurate driving of Miss Gilleaudeau. The match was featured by several rallies of unusual length and with the honors about evenly divided, but Miss Gilleaudeau's superior control killed off many another promising rally in the bud and resulted in her taking the match at 6—3, 6—3 without her hold of the situation being at any time seriously endangered.

Beach Women's Doubles Final.

Mrs. Theodore Sosht of New York and Miss Cerse Baker of East Orange gained the right to contest for the women's doubles championship by defeating Mrs. George L. Chapman and Mrs. Raymond, 6—3, 6—3, in the semi-final match, which was interrupted by darkness last night and played to a finish, between showers, today.

The men's final round in doubles, with Richards and Voshell playing Raymond Bidwell and Josiah Wheelright of Boston, runners-up for the honors last year, was left unfinished, owing to a deluge of rain, after Richards and Voshell had taken the first set at 6—3 and the second set had reached a stage of three games all. Tht match is for best three out of five sets.

CORNELL LACROSSE TWELVE VICTORIOUS

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., April 13.—Cornell defeated St. John's College, 5 to 0, here today in the first lacrosse game of the season at home. The Red and White twelve had everything its own way from the start and the ball was in St. John's territory most of the time.

Cornell opened up strong and tallied shortly after the opening on a shot by Clark. Later in the first half the visitors put up a strong defense which for a time held the Cornellians in check, but the forwards proved to have the edge on the visiting defense and scores were registered in rapid succession by Clark, Rooney and Deal. Only the excellent work of Kirkpatrick, the visiting goalkeeper, kept the Cornell tally from being greater.

The line-up:

CORNELL (5).		ST. JOHN'S (0).
Mendelowitz	C. O.	Kelso

Seventy-Five Candidates for Cornell Eleven Report to Coach Dobie.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., April 13.—Spring football practice opened at Cornell today with the registration of seventy-five candidates, who appeared in uniform on upper Alumni Field and were given a light workout under the direction of Coach Dobie. Captain Pfann was the only member of last season's varsity present, the squad being composed largely of men from the scrub and freshman teams of last year and several new candidates.

The men engaged in blocking and passing drill, some of the squad taking turns at hitting the dummies in the sawdust pits while the others tossed the pigskin about. The workout was concluded with instruction in line shifting. Later on scrimmaging will be in order.

VAN URK WINS BOXING TITLE AT PRINCETON

Gets Decision Over Wiegand for Unlimited Weight Crown of the University.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., April 13.—Big Jack Van Urk of Kalamazoo, Mich., was crowned unlimited weight boxing champion of Princeton University this evening as a result of the boxing tournament staged in the Princeton gymnasium. Van Urk received the decision over "Bill" Wiegand.

Of the preliminary bouts the most exciting was the 160-pound event, in which Hunter Goodrich of Milwaukee received the decision over A. Murrey Fisher of Baltimore, last year's champion. This bout became an extra-round affair before the judges could pick the winner, Goodrich was named because of his superior aggressiveness.

PADDOCK CANNOT COMPETE ABROAD

If Charles W. Paddock of the University of Southern California has started East with the intention of going to Paris to compete this Spring, he has done so in the full knowledge that he would not receive permission from the Amateur Athletic Union and would therefore be ineligible to compete abroad. The situation in Paddock's case, following Secretary Rubien's official statement on Thursday that no amateur athletes would be given permission to compete abroad this year, was explained at A. A. U. headquarters in this city yesterday.

When the announcement was telegraphed East from Pasadena, Cal., last Tuesday that Paddock would start the next day for the East, preparatory to sailing for Paris, a telegram was immediately sent to President Robert S. Weaver of the Southern Pacific Association to notify Paddock that he would not be allowed to compete abroad. That this notice was delivered to the Pasadena star immediately was shown by the fact that a telegram was received at A. A. U. headquarters from the athlete himself, stating that he had been invited to compete at Paris and asking that he be granted permission to go.

Paddock was informed by wire that the whole question of American athletes competing abroad was then under consideration by the Committee on International Affairs of the Amateur Athletic Union, of which Joseph P. Mahaney of Boston is Chairman. As members of this committee were in widely separated parts of the country it was impossible to state at that time what the final decision of the committee would be.

Permission was not granted to Paddock at that time and the decision of the Committee on International Affairs was not made public until Thursday, being published yesterday morning. That decision was that no American athlete under the jurisdiction of the A. A. U. would be granted permission to compete abroad this year, it being the desire to conserve all energies in this country for the Olympic games next year. One single exception was made in favor of the members of the Harvard and Yale track teams, which already had made arrangements to compete against Oxford and Cambridge Universities.

Under the international rules no athlete may compete in a foreign country unless he has the sanction of the governing body in his own country. If Paddock went to France, therefore, he would be ineligible to compete under the latest ruling of the A. A. U. committee.

EAST-WEST TENNIS SERIES CANCELED

Officials Here Notified Coast Team Cannot Be Mustered for Contests There May 4-6.

The first series of the annual East-West tennis matches, slated to have been held at San Francisco on May 4, 5 and 6, was canceled yesterday after receipt of information from Dr. Sumner Hardy of the California Lawn Tennis Association that the Pacific Coast would be unable to muster a representative team in time for the contests.

The decision of California tennis authorities, contained in a telegram to the New York Tennis Association, came as a surprise to the East, where a team, composed of William T. Tilden of Philadelphia, Vincent Richards of Yonkers, N. Y., and Mrs. R. E. Cole of Boston, had been selected and arrangements made for their departure for the West in about a week. No efforts will be made, it was said, to arrange a later date for a Western series this year.

FRIDAY 13TH IS UNLUCKY AT BOWIE

ST. LAWRENCE IN FRONT

Special to The New York Times.

BOWIE, Md., April 13.—Friday 13th was unlucky for those who played a hunch in the first race at Prince George Park this afternoon. The Audley Farm's colt of that name attracted the bulk of the play in the four-furlong dash for maiden two-year-olds, although he had done nothing in his two starts here to warrant being made a favorite in the field of eight that went to the post. He was held at 12 to 5, but finished a poor sixth.

The race went to Vanity Bag, Paul Powers's Crimper filly. Saving ground all the way she outran her opposition to the turn, but had to be shaken up by Mein in the last sixteenth to maintain her advantage. Julia M., which lacked early speed, finished courageously to take the place money by a head from Gladys V., the latter also being only a head in front of Duelma to carry off the short end of the purse.

It was a day for mud runners, only one favorite coming through to reward form players. This was in the second race, a seven-furlong sprint for three-year-old maidens, in which J. H. Stotler's St. Lawrence beat six others all the way after a poor start, in which Warburton and West Pittston had no chance when the break came. St. Lawrence, at 5 to 4 in the betting, drew away from the others at his leisure, and Lang had him under restraint ten lengths in front at the end.

Miracle Man Shows Improvement.

There was no feature on the card, although the fifth race was designated as the Owners' Consolation Purse, at a mile and seventy yards. This was a surprising victory for D. L. Richards's Miracle Man, which had finished eighth in a field of nine yesterday at the same distance. The gelded son of Sweep, showing a sudden improvement, raced Ticacey into submission, but had to be hard urged by Abel to stall off Super, the 3 to 5 favorite. Super, G. W. Campbell's gelded son of Superman, was slow to gain his stride, but moved unmercifully rounding the far turn. He could not catch the winner, however. Maise closed a big gap to take the short end of the purse.

Abel put over a double by annexing the next race with St. Germain, which also showed improved form. St. Germain moved up with courage when Abel called on him, finishing with a rush that carried him home first, a neck in front of Jacques. The latter was poorly handled, McLane apparently being overconfident after bringing the son of St. James to the front in the stretch. Zouave was used up in racing with Hillhouse and Jacques in the early part of the race and had nothing left when the final test came, although he saved the show money by half a length from Blazonry.

Jockey J. Wallace also rode two winners, piloting Bessie Leighton home in the third race and winning with Bonfire in the closing number.

Easy Victory for Bonfire.

Wallace had smoother sailing with Bonfire, the Campfire colt going to the front under restraint and opening up a commanding lead. Wallace was looking back when the finish line was reached. Tingling came with a rush at the end to take the place money, while War Victor gained the short end of the purse by a head from Our Birthday, the pronounced favorite.

G. C. Winfrey's Camouflage, the seven-year-old son of Star Shoot, won his third victory in five starts here when he took the fourth race, a dash of six and a half furlongs. Smallwood had him in restraint until rounding the turn for home. Then he had to be shaken up to stall off Sagamore. The latter moved up with a rush on the outside rounding the far turn, but could not catch the winner. The Peruvian lasted just long enough to take the short end of the purse by a head from Minute Man.

HERD WINS GOLF CUP.

Captures Roehampton Challenge Trophy in England.

ROEHAMPTON, England, April 13.—Alex Herd, veteran golfer, won the Roehampton Challenge Cup today by defeating F. C. Jewell of North Middlesex in the final match by three up and two to play.

Herd will be remembered by golfers here as a result of his visit to this country last year, accompanied by J. H. Taylor. During their sojourn in this country, they played several matches with the leading professionals and proved that, although oldtimers so far as playing service goes, they are still able to play fine golf. Herd was the British open champion in 1902 and has a penchant for making holes-in-one. He has probably holed out single shots more than any other golfer in the world.

SWEETSER BEGINS GOLF PREPARATION

Jess W. Sweetser, national amateur golf champion, who was recently granted a leave of absence by the Faculty of the Sheffield Scientific School at Yale to permit him to go abroad with the American Walker Cup team, began his leave yesterday. Sweetser, armed with his bag of clubs, arrived here from New Haven and proceeded direct to Clementon, N. J., where for the next two days he will aim to pick up his golf game where he left off after winning the national title last Fall. He has picked out one of the most exacting practice grounds to be found anywhere—the famous Pine Valley Golf Club just outside of Philadelphia.

Sweetser sallied forth for this vale of golf tears accompanied by Julian Bishop, a former Yale golfer, and John T. Blossom, Graduate Manager of Athletics at New Haven. He will spend today and tomorrow renewing acquaintance with his clubs, particularly his "spademashie" which brough grief to Bobby Jones, Chick Evans and others at Brookline last Fall, and which he expects to use with satisfactory results in both the Walker Cup event and in the British amateur championship. He will return either tomorrow night or Monday to make final preparations for his departure with his team mates on board the Mauretania on Tuesday.

The first hole-in-one of the season has been recorded. Yesterday being Friday, the 13th, the veteran golf professional, George Low, who presides over the practice tee at the Baltusrol Golf Club, Baltusrol, N. J., reports that such a thing had happened during the day on the upper course of the New Jersey layout. The honors fell to the lot of Fred Westlake, who, paired with J. D. Coffin against W. L. Gearey and Captain Acker, scored an "ostrich" as the one-shotter is sometimes called, at the third hole, formerly the No. 9 on the old course.

Details of the third annual State open championship of the New Jersey State Golf Association to be played at the Englewood Golf Club on May 22-24 were announced by Secretary H. Y. Barrow yesterday. Prizes for the open event, which was won last year by Harry O'Loughlin of Plainfield, will amount to $600, apportioned as follows: First, $200 and championship medal; second, $100; third, $80; fourth, $70; fifth, $60; sixth, $50; seventh, $40; eighth, $30; ninth, $25; tenth, $20; eleventh, $15; twelfth, $10. This is two places more than was provided for last year. There will also be a $50 and $30 prize for the winner of first and second place in the professional-amateur match. The pro-amateur event will be best-ball foursome at 36 holes medal play, and the competition will be held on Wednesday, May 23. The State championship will be decided at 36 holes on Thursday. The course will be open for practice on May 22. Entries will be received by Secretary Barrow up until May 16.

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle visited the Westchester Biltmore Country Club yesterday and, in his first golf match for a considerable period of time, emerged on the victorious end of a foursome. Paired with Cuthbert Butchart, the club professional, Sir Arthur defeated M. Roy Jackson and J. C. Sunderford by the margin of 4 and 3. Butchart carried most of the responsibility, playing good golf throughout and reaching the turn with his card showing a 35.

Public links golfers received the cheerful tidings yesterday that the New York municipal courses at Van Cortlandt, Pelham and Moshlu Parks would probably be opened for play on Saturday, April 21. That the parks will be thickly populated again this season is proved by the fact that at the office of Park Commissioner Hennessy of the Bronx 2,000 persons have applied for playing permits at $10 for the season and 3,000 more are expected to make application next week. Applications for permits should be made to the Park Commissioner. The charge for single day's play to those who do not hold $10 yearly permits will be $1. Lockers in the clubhouses can be rented for $7.50 and $10 for the season.

PRINCETON CREWS ROW IN DOWNPOUR

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., April 13.—Jupiter Pluvius failed to stop the Princeton crews in their preparation for the Spring regattas here this afternoon. In spite of a continued downpour, which ruffled the surface of Lake Carnegie and thoroughly drenched the Tiger oarsmen, both varsity crews rowed the full length of the lake as far as the Kingston dam and back. The two varsities which Dr. J. Duncan Spaeth, director of rowing, is getting into shape, are called respectively the "Orange" and the "Black." They pulled the entire distance today, which is about six miles, side by side. Dr. Spaeth did not allow them to race.

Austin was back in his old place at No. 4 in the Orange boat today. He had been out for several days with an infected hand. Dyer, who had been filling his seat during his enforced absence, was back in his old berth at 4 in the Black shell.

The boatings of the two varsities as they rowed today follow:

CORNELL CREWS ON LAKE.

Transfer Rowing Activities to Cayuga—Heavy Varsity Wins.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., April 13.—The Cornell crews, after two weeks' rowing on Cayuga Inlet, today transferred their rowing activities to Cayuga Lake, weather conditions having moderated enough to allow the shells out beyond the lighthouse and regular practice on the course along the lake shore.

In the first test of the year the heavy varsity eight stroked by Fillus and containing six members of last year's eight, clearly showed its superiority to the light varsity crew, stroked by Wheeler, the freshman eight coming in third. The course was for two miles and, although no time was recorded, the crews showed smooth form and encouraging speed for this time of the year.

St. Paul Club is Victor.

WICHITA FALLS, Texas, April 13.—The St. Paul Club of the American Association defeated the local Texas League Club in an exhibition game here today. The score was 5 to 2. Wichita Falls made seventeen hits to twelve for St. Paul.

NO LACK OF MANAGERS.

Republican conferences at Washington reveal a plethora of talent in party management. Chairmen, ex-chairmen, prospective chairmen, fairly swarm. The only difficulty is to make a choice out of such an embarrassment of riches. The "party fit to rule" certainly is not short of would-be rulers. The "miserable interrogatory," Where are the voters coming from? seems scarcely to occur to any of the great managerial minds. Yet this is really the difficulty for both parties. Not long ago The Kansas City Star, after gravely referring to a list of Democrats who were said to be "eligible" for the Presidential nomination, said that the real party problem was to produce an adequate list of eligible voters.

For the Republicans, that will come later. At present their minds are concentrated on party management. Inevitably the name of Ambassador HARVEY looms up in all such discussions. He cannot prevent it, nor can he prevent the constantly recurring suggestion that he is going to displace somebody. Washington correspondents, even those close to the Administration, have an unkind way of hinting that Colonel HARVEY, wherever he is, will somehow be compelled to take charge. He may have to assume the chairmanship of the Republican National Committee. If foreign affairs get into a tangle, it may be necessary for Secretary HUGHES to resign and for the Ambassador to be placed at the head of the State Department. All these reports are doubtless highly distasteful to Colonel HARVEY himself, who would like nothing better than to mingle with the embattled Norfolk farmers, and from his position of extensive view in London survey the whole world and report on it in witty letters sent to the President. But management is management, and if the best must be had it is hard to see how he can be kept out of it. Besides, it is broadly intimated in Washington that if he is not called upon to manage the Republican Party, he may again undertake to be manager for the Democrats.

A NEAR EAST POLICY NEEDED.

One of the first Washington dispatches after the announcement that the Chester concession had been ratified in Angora suggested that the State Department had decided to support the concession so far as it referred to Anatolia, but to disinterest itself in the question of Mosul. That would imply a definite policy: contentment with the British Government's promise to give the Standard Oil part of the Mosul concessions, and advice to the Chester organization to be content with its Anatolian projects, which are more magnificent than anything ever previously given to one company in Turkey. In other words, we should stand with England, to keep France and all others out.

Whether this would be praiseworthy or not, at least it would be prudent, intelligent, and likely to succeed. But there is apparently no reason to believe that the State Department has so definite a policy in this affair. Other Washington dispatches report the direct opposite—that we are interested in Mosul. Certainly the Turks hoped, in granting the concession, that it would draw us into Mosul, and would align us on the Turkish side of that dispute. France is affected more directly than England. Legally and morally the French argument seems worthless. French concessions granted in 1914, in exchange for a loan, have been annulled by the Angora Government. Who put the Angora Government on the map, diplomatically speaking, and brought it back into the family of nations? The French, who hoped that by so doing they could get what had been given to others. The wails of Pertinax and other Paris journalists, who even talk of letting the British Navy and the Greek Army bring the Turks to their senses, are the laments of "come-ons" who have been trimmed.

Next month or next year the Chester concessionaires may be in the same position. The Turks who sold the French out will be quite as ready to sell the Americans out if it seems profitable. France turns to England now for diplomatic support. If the Chester concessionaires press their claims in Mosul, England will side with France. For the Chester concession, potentially more valuable than anything ever granted in Turkey, promising more wealth than the Bagdad Railroad ever did, is a pearl of great price. It has set the world against us. If the State Department found it prudent to win over the British by ignoring Mosul, other opposition could be disregarded. But the State Department's attitude on the matter is so non-committal that reporters who hear the official explanations go away and write contradictory stories. The latest news is that the State Department supposes that all these international conflicts will easily be settled, somehow, somewhere.

The Chester enterprise is a great and potentially useful undertaking. Its organizers are preparing to build golf courses, gymnasiums and health resorts; doubtless also Y. M. C. A.'s, football stadiums and civic centres. They are able and willing to build Jerusalem in Turkey's green and pleasant land. But they will need diplomatic support of a kind that knows where it is going. Whether our Government ought to embark in economic politics in the Near East on such a scale is open to argument. But whatever we do ought to be planned and executed with consistency and perseverance.

THE REPUBLICAN BUDGET BILL.

The Republicans in the Assembly have compromised with the Governor on a short-ballot and consolidation-of-the-departments amendment. They insist, most unreasonably, upon vitiating his four-year term for the Governor amendment by providing that the Governor should be elected in a Presidential year. To his Executive budget amendment they have replied by an adroit, however insincere, budget bill of their own. This measure would give the Governor power to make the annual budget from the estimates of the department heads under his supervision and direction. The Legislature, on the basis of this budget sent to it, would draft the appropriation bill by means of the Committees on Finance and Ways and Means. The Governor could scratch out items, but couldn't make them larger or smaller.

Alternatively, the Governor can make an appropriation bill of his own and send it to the Legislature, which can increase or lessen these items, but can't add any of its own. Thus the Governor makes his budget, or his appropriation bill founded on it. The Legislature keeps its "free hand"—often altogether too free—on the appropriation bills, subject to Executive signature or veto. "You" say that we Republicans exalt our "horns over the Executive budget at "Washington, but have no use for it "at Albany," the Republicans declare in effect. "Well, here is an Executive budget on the Federal plan. "Here it is. Take it or leave it. And "you can have it right off, whereas "your Executive budget amendment, "with the best possible luck, can't "be ready for business before 1926."

As a counter-move in the game, this does credit to Speaker MACHOLD's finesse. What will come of it? Presumably, the Governor and the Senate will stick to their proposal, the Assembly to its proposal; and nothing will be done.

MAKING HARVARD NATIONAL.

When the Board of Overseers of Harvard University decided this week that neither race nor religion should be a bar to admission, it also advocated taking measures to make Harvard more truly nationally representative than it has been. During the last half century it has grown from a small New England college into one of the great universities of the country, but the geographical origin of its student body has remained preponderantly what it was.

Ever since 1900 attention has been concentrated on the problem of reaching more men outside New England. The Associated Harvard Clubs, which have branches throughout the country, have done much to stimulate interest in Harvard in different sections, and have been responsible for getting many good men to go to Cambridge. The university itself, under the leadership of President LOWELL, has also done all in its power to attract men from the outside. In the graduate schools these efforts have been particularly successful. The Harvard Law School, for example, draws men from all over the country. The other schools also have large numbers from the States outside of New England. In the college proper, however, this growth has not been so fast. Since 1900, it is true, the number of New Englanders has remained about stationary, while those from the other regions have increased in large numbers. But the Far West and the South are still under-represented, and it is in these regions in particular that the college is still seeking men. With this object in view, the Board of Overseers has recommended that wider latitude be given in complying with the customs of the schools in those sections, so as to make it possible to accept men of high standing who have not necessarily taken the examinations which it has been customary to prescribe.

In 1920, for example, the students, both graduate and undergraduate, coming from the Southern States numbered only 6 per cent. of the entire student body, and those from the Far West only 5 per cent. The New Englanders in the same year amounted to 52 per cent., as compared with 62 per cent. in 1900 and 75 per cent. in 1880. This shows that the New England contingent is still very large, even though the general geographical distribution of Harvard students compares favorably with other universities which aim to have a national scope.

The problem of becoming a national instead of a sectional university is naturally difficult. Harvard's age and prestige have made it somewhat easier there than elsewhere. Even though so largely New England in origin and tradition, it has yet been national in spirit. But if it is to make the most of this opportunity, and if, at the same time, it is to render its fullest measure of service to the country, it must continue its campaign for a broader student representation.

A WET MIRAGE.

Travelers in African and Arabian deserts often see water where no water is. Travelers in the Dry desert are always seeing rum where no rum is. Some deep-revolving Democratic Wets are said to have some almost comic cogitations or visions of galvanizing the States' rights doctrine and tying a bottle to it. They dream of forcing into the next Democratic national platform a declaration that the several States shall have the right to determine, each for itself, what are "intoxicating liquors" under the Eighteenth Amendment. The Southern States, which showed their passionate devotion to States' rights by ratifying that amendment, are to leap as one man at the revival of the doctrine they have discarded. The cogitators of this delightful plan easily count up States won by this opportunity of State option.

There isn't much use in analyzing green-cucumber moonshine, but we love to see Massachusetts and Connecticut in the "Wet column," not to speak of Ohio and California, so uncomfortably Dry in 1922. Apparently, the State-option plan contemplates an amendment to the Constitution, though descriptions of it don't say so. Or is the idea just to make a "show-down" of States, while the Volstead act, unmodified, flourishes over them? The New York and New Jersey Wets don't dare to make any use of their triumph. They scarcely dare to approach, even on velvet paws, the perilous subject. The millions of convinced Democratic Drys, Mr. BRYAN, their remorseless chief, guard sleeplessly the Volstead cork. If there were ever a closed "silly season" among politicians, it would be right to assume that this States'-rights-and-rum project is a bit of intentional mystification, a joke, or else born of the forbidden juice.

RISKS OF ARMY FLYING.

If the report from Mitchel Field, Mineola, that eight out of every hundred army pilots have been killed "in the line of duty" each year from 1919 to 1922 is official, such a dangerous service should carry emergency pay for aviators and promotion ought to be on a scale proportionate to the risks incurred. In time of peace officers of other branches live as secure a life as civilians, unless called out for riot duty, a rare occurrence. The Army Air Service is one hazard after another for pilots. In the news fatal accidents have become a commonplace. Sometimes there are two or three in a week. It is seldom that civilian aviators are killed. Yet it is a fact that only the military air service is regulated. It has its fields and routine. Machines are inspected every day. There is a prescribed training for pilots. No one is allowed to enter upon it until he qualifies in an examination that goes into mental fitness, physical strength and the state of the nervous system. The tests are rigid. There is a school for mechanics. So much depends upon the ground men that no chances are taken with them. They must be of steady habits as well as competent.

Why, then, should there be greater risk in the Army Air Service than in unregulated civilian employment? "One firm, operating twenty-seven "airplanes, carried over 9,000 passengers 117,000 miles without a single "injury," it is stated. Any comparison made with an army air field East or West might seem to justify the belief that the military pilots are unskilful or reckless, or that the planes they use are fit only for the scrap-heap. An officer in charge of a field in California used to read in the local newspapers that he was a murderer every time a promising aviator was killed. His chief in Washington finally called upon him to look into the records of the British Air Service to determine whether the margin of safety was greater than in ours. He was able to report—the time was just before the World War—that the rate of British casualties was actually higher.

Danger inheres in routine army aviation. It must be incurred as part of the day's work. There is flying in formations called for in active service. The practice includes pursuit of an enemy and "combats" in the air. Dummy bombs are dropped in swift flight. There is experimenting with manoeuvres to gain an advantage, quick climbing, emergency landings, a veritable repertory of "stunts" to be gone through. And there is night flying. To a considerable extent war conditions are inseparable from the training. It must be kept up to prepare the aviators for the ordeal of war. That being the case, the army pilots are in a special class. They should be favored by legislation that takes note of the hazards they run. The term of their usefulness is one of ten years, or fifteen at the most. Flying is really a young man's job. So, in addition to emergency pay, there should be a special promotion list and provision made for earlier retirement or for suitable transfer to other branches for recognized efficiency.

CITY SAFEGUARDS.

Dr. JOHNSON said of a certain orator of his day: "He flounders well." Our City Government often seems a floundering affair. It tries various expedients, only to be brought up with a round turn by safeguards long since wisely established and which have not yet been got rid of. One of these is the courts. Mayor HYLAN has consistently had pretty bad luck with Judges. When Justice MULLAN enjoined the Board of Estimate from spending $400,000 of city funds to celebrate the jubilee, the Mayor made sarcastic inquiries as to who this particular Judge was, and intimated that the decision would be promptly reversed on appeal. Yesterday, however, it was unanimously affirmed by the Appellate Division. So that ends that.

Time after time the city wakes up to find that there are provisions in the State Constitution or in the Charter of Greater New York which prevent wasteful or improper administration of municipal affairs. It was not a mere personal taunt which Controller CRAIG uttered when he said that Mayor HYLAN and some of the unthinking advocates of complete "home rule" for the city really would bring back, if they could, the conditions under TWEED. What he meant was that the power of audit conferred upon the Controller was intended for the precise purpose of preventing the old-style looting of the city. It is a power also useful for scrutiny of the accounts of the various departments so as to expose and punish petty grafting. It was out of a painful experience that the men of a previous generation set up safeguards for the city of which we continue to enjoy the protection today.

QUESTIONING DR. FOSDICK.

The correction of a regrettable error in reporting as an action of the New York Presbytery what was only an overture from one of its constituent churches gives occasion to call attention to the exemplary manner in which all parties acted in this matter. The individual church making the overture, though constrained to express its conviction in regard to the preaching of certain doctrines by Dr. FOSDICK, was willing to refrain from presenting its petition to the Presbytery if the Moderators' Council so advised. But the council, feeling that the right of petition was precious and should be preserved in full vigor, recommended that the petition be "found in order." It was accordingly presented, but without "public reading," and was referred by unanimous vote to a committee consisting of five of the wisest counselors in the Church, both clerical and lay, for consideration, conference and report a month hence.

Despite the considerateness shown in all this, the inquisitorial attitude which was wrongly imputed to the Presbytery is unfortunately the persistent, unrelenting attitude of some who will not be satisfied till they have exhausted every ecclesiastical means to silence if possible a preacher whom any pulpit in the world should be eager to welcome. There is a new suggestion of this in the pledge of the Fundamentalist League, which is reported to have been taken by 300 people night before last in the denomination of which Dr. FOSDICK is a member. It is doubtful if any man in America is ministering directly and helpfully to more people than is Dr. FOSDICK through his preaching, his teaching and his books on religious subjects. He has, to be sure, accepted the established facts of science, but no one is further than he from "servile "subjection to a naturalistic philosophy."

Those who differ from him in doctrine would do well to read and reread this utterance of his in the very sermon which has invited their most virulent attacks: "There are many "opinions in the field of modern controversy concerning which I am not "sure whether they are right or "wrong, but there is one thing I am "sure of: courtesy and kindliness and "tolerance and humility and fairness "are right." It is encouraging that religious differences can today generally be considered with less of intolerance, ill-will and malignity than in the early days of the Church when one who, writing from his own experiences as a heresiarch, said: "Nulla "discordia major quam quae a re-"ligione fit." For the sake of pure religion it is to be hoped that the spirit shown by the New York Presbytery will pervade the higher court of the Presbyterian Church, which convenes next month.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Asking for Reform as Memorial.

Precisely the reaction that was to have been expected has followed the death of THOMAS F. SMITH, Secretary of Tammany Hall, in what the Commissioner of Public Welfare, BIRD S. COLER, describes as an "avoidable and inexcusable accident." In both official and unofficial circles there has arisen, more strongly than ever before, a demand for such regulation of automobile traffic as shall cut down to the irreducible minimum the now almost appalling list of daily slaughter.

The urgency of this demand is due to the unusual warmth and wide extent of the friendship felt for Mr. SMITH, rather than anything marking the circumstances of his taking off. Indeed, in this case the word "accident" is more correct than in most others, for the story told by the driver of the car by which Mr. SMITH was killed has not been impugned by any of the witnesses as yet examined, and he does not seem to have shown either recklessness or incompetence in any easily measurable degree.

On the other hand, it is not easily credible that the victim, a man thoroughly capable of taking care of himself in the city streets—who was quite at home in the region and long familiar with its highway perils—would have walked in broad daylight into the rear wheel of a car the passing of which he so easily could have seen. A momentary diversion of his attention, perhaps to another vehicle, is an explanation as plausible as any that now suggests itself.

Commissioner COLER's use of the word "inexcusable" hardly seems justified, or at least not so well justified as it is in many other instances, but about the accuracy of his "avoidable" there can be no doubt. The chauffeur of the car did not attempt to run away, and he was held in heavy bail, but Mr. SMITH's widow has asked that the man be not prosecuted, basing the request on the belief that her husband would have wanted him to go free. Probably he would.

Licensing Should Be Changed.

Merely because the death of Mr. SMITH was not a result of vicious recklessness is no reason why the emotion created by it should not prompt energetic action for better traffic regulation. It generally is admitted that the licensing system is a bad one in that it does not succeed in eliminating chauffeurs of such character that they have no right to be driving cars. Too many of them are drinking men—not one should be—and not a few, according to common report, are drug addicts, and therefore utterly untrustworthy.

Even less satisfactory than the granting of licenses as at present conducted is the revocation of them. Revocation should be prompt, and, what is still more important, permanent, whenever it is deserved, and deserved it certainly is whenever a chauffeur has been convicted of driving in a condition that deprived him of the exercise of all his faculties when at their highest.

The police have asked for more nearly complete control of the professional or hired drivers, and it should be given to them. The amateurs, the owners of private cars, also should come under more stringent and effective supervision, for they quite as often are careless, and probably more often incompetent than are the professionals.

He, Too, Can Make Little Slips.

General PERSHING's advice to army officers as to the writing of their reports is excellent, and all of it well might be heeded by them—and by everybody else, for that matter, in writing of all kinds.

He tells them to put their ideas down on paper clearly, in words carefully chosen, with due regard to the rules of grammar, and at no greater—or less—length than the full expression of their thought or purpose demands. He is not a follower of the new school that finds virtue in incoherence, profundity in obscurity, and entrusts to dashes, asterisks or sequences of periods the doing of hard work which the writer should perform himself.

So much in praise and sympathy, but a critic must expect to be criticised, and the General, when assuming the functions of a Board of Education and the authority of judge, jury and executioner, should have been particularly careful not to make any slightest slip himself, lest the objects of his exhortations should get back at him and do a little teaching of the teacher. Only because of just what he was doing would anybody find fault with the matter or the method of his lesson. Its faults are trivial and venial, but at least a few of them are real.

For instance, he uses "verbal" when he means "oral." To be sure, the dictionaries justify that, but it is a half-hearted recognition—a mere submission to prolonged custom—and really careful writers, such as the General urges all army officers to be, do not ignore a distinction so obvious and so useful. That's one.

Another would be a noting of the addition of "conciseness" to "brevity" when inculcating economy of space. The two words are not exactly synonymous, indeed, but, paired, they smell too strongly of tautology and pleonasm, and one or the other would not be missed if absent.

Other blemishes on this able document could be found by use of the microscope, but this is enough, especially as General PERSHING again and again has done writing in which only a microscope could discover faults, and nobody ever had any doubts of his meaning or of his ability to handle the large subjects which several times he has had to discuss.

Why Do Folks Get So Excited in New Orleans?

President VAUCLAIN of the Baldwin Locomotive Works evidently is envious of the laurels so well earned in other days by General DAWES, and in his speech to the business men assembled in New Orleans—a city curiously provocative for some time past of vehement language—he succeeded in "handing hot ones" to several large groups of whose animosity most other people are rather afraid.

"Labor" in and out of his "little foundry," he scorned and defied, at all preachers of keeping out of debt he snapped derisive and contemptuous fingers, and the proud company of golfers he denounced as men who chase a little ball around a lot all day—to what purpose? Why, to have at nightfall the little ball they had when they started out in the morning!

At that charge such golfers as can forget Mr. VAUCLAIN's telling them to get a wheelbarrow and a hoe and spread manure will sadly smile. They know, ah, alas, too well! how often they do not end their day's toil in possession of the ball they had at the dawn's early gleaming.

They could teach him a thing or two about golf balls, and also, perhaps, about the uses to which hoes are, and are not, put by their manipulators.

SCOFFS AT CHESTER GRANTS

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In view of the fact that the writer visited Constantinople in May, 1913, representing the American-Ottoman Development Company (Chester Group) and was counsel to the Turkish Embassy in Washington and the Turkish Consulate General in New York from 1909 to 1914, you may be interested in the following statements:

The ratification by the Angora Assembly of the Chester concessions is devoid of any legal or practical effect because the Turks have no valid title to them. The grants in question provide for the exploitation of the Mosul oil fields and of the mineral and oil resources of Turkish Armenia, and for the construction of railways in the last-named region.

Mosul is a part of the Kingdom of Irak, of which Great Britain is mandatary. The Turkish Petroleum Company, which is a British company, holds a good contract from the old Turkish Government for the exploitation of the oil fields of Mosul.

Turkish Armenia has two sources of considerable natural wealth, namely, oil deposits and the Arghana copper mines. Its oil deposits are situated in the provinces of Erzerum, Van and Bitlis. According to an article in a recent issue of The Manchester Guardian's Commercial Supplement, the Armenian oil fields are more valuable than those of Mosul. But these provinces have been allotted to Armenia by the Sèvres Treaty, and the Armenian delegates who signed that treaty for Armenia have not acquiesced in the abrogation of the parts of the Sèvres Treaty which relate to Armenia.

The Arghana copper mines are situated southeast of Harput and are embraced within the French zone of influence, recognized by the Sazanoff-Paleologue Convention of 1916, the annex to the Sèvres Treaty of Aug. 10, 1920, and the Franco-Turkish accord of October, 1921.

The proposed railways will begin at Yumurtalik, in Cilicia, on the Mediterranean, and extend to the Black Sea and the Russian frontier. Cilicia falls within the French zone of influence, as do the Arghana copper mines. Also, under the terms of the Russo-Turkish agreement of 1898, Turkey undertakes to grant no concessions to third parties for the construction of railways to run to the Black Sea and the Russian frontier. This agreement was abrogated by the Russo-Turkish Treaty of March, 1921, subject to Turkey refraining from making peace with the Allies without the approval of Russia.

The existing Turkish railways, which are built by foreign capital, except the Hedjas railway, have had a struggling existence. The Bagdad road is subsidized by the Government. In 1914, Turkey had an estimated population of 17,500,000; she now has no more than 5,000,000. The Turkish people are poverty stricken and the Government is bankrupt.

In 1913 American exports to Turkey amounted to $3,133,821. In 1913, the Turkish public debt amounted to $700,000,000, which has since grown to $2,123,000,000. The revenues of Turkey have never been sufficient to meet its expenses, and during its entire history it has not paid any part of its foreign or domestic public debts. In 1913 its tentative budget was $172,000,000, and its revenues were estimated at $127,000,000. According to Ikdam, a Turkish daily of Constantinople, the deficit of the Turkish Government in 1922 amounted to $72,000,000, and its estimated deficit for 1923 is $135,000,000. And what is even more important is that no economic or political arrangement in Turkey which is not acquiesced in by Russia can be permanent.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The recent decision of Justice Tierney (now overruled), declaring void the emergency rent laws, brings to the front a very interesting point of law.

Basically, Justice Tierney's decision was sound. Unfortunately, he failed to take into consideration the emergency attendant upon the making of this law. Justice Tierney maintained that any law that discriminated for class reasons or for any other reason was not valid. I fully agree with him. Now for the interesting point.

If homes belonging to people of limited means cannot enjoy the benefits of exemption of taxation, upon what right and upon what constitutional privilege can church property legally and lawfully enjoy such a benefit? Is not this "class" legislation? Is not this discriminatory? Does not church property receive public protection, for which others are taxed to maintain? Does it not enjoy and receive every social and community benefit without paying for it? And last, but not least, does it not enjoy an increased property valuation without in the least degree contributing toward the improvements that make for increased valuation? And, more flagrant than all, it barters and sells in the open market, making huge profits, only to be reinvested in additional property and to enjoy additional tax exemption. The church should pay its taxes, just as any other business enterprise.

How long will this class and discriminatory legislation continue? How long must we wait before we have a Judge with courage enough to declare it unconstitutional?

JOSEPH LEWIS.

TO APRIL.

Why weep, O April day?
Is not the sunshine warm?
Is there a hint of storm
Along the Springtime way?
Thou canst but answer, Nay.

Why weep? Is every tear
But proof of grief intense
For Winter's consequence—
A Winter cold and drear,
With death so boldly near?

I fain would see thee smile
While skies above are blue;
While human hearts are true
And love lives on the while
To cheer us and beguile.

Weep not for Winter's blight—
Smile, smile, O April day,
And let your heart be light!
So shall our griefs take flight!

From long-endured distress;
Smile—and our future bless!
Cheer our pain-saddened eyes
With joy of cloudless skies!

THE ART OF CITY PLANNING.

A Work Too Complicated to Be Undertaken by Any One Set of Experts.

By CHARLES DOWNING LAY.

The art of town planning, of which we have heard so much and are to hear more, is new in this country. Philadelphia was laid out by Penn in 1682, Washington by L'Enfant before 1800, and New York in 1807. The rebuilding of Paris was not started under Haussmann until 1850. Since our early days we in New York have done creditable work which has produced a city quite different from those of Europe, but no less admirable, for in any consideration of town planning one must take the whole city into account, not compare one feature with another but the whole with the whole. Our formal parks and squares are not so good as those of Paris, but the city as a physical organisation of water supply, streets, sewers, transit, housing, is far better, and, best of all, it is characteristically and wholly New York.

The town planning of recent years has been seriously injured by German influence, which tends to a carefully studied and dull romanticism. It is a style of twisty streets, accidental and picturesque placing of buildings, a deliberate seeking of medieval sources in plan and in architecture. It is justified on a curious basis of science and art; curved streets are good because they fit curved hills; because they fit natural conditions they are, therefore, beautiful (is not nature beautiful?). One reasons thus when buying a Spring suit. English town planners are tainted with the same culture, but even more stupidly. They say, as it were, a row of houses all exactly the same is dull, therefore let us break up the row and have the houses as different as possible. So we have in typical examples a restless change, like a crowd of people watching a parade, all different and all trying to break out of line. Some day a genius will do a whole district in the American style (the so-called Colonial) with blocks of similar houses having a quiet sky line, trees carefully arranged and the open spaces open, and studied as carefully in their shape and size in relation to buildings as the buildings themselves are studied.

If American town planners can do no better than current English and German work in residential districts they might as well quit. If they cannot plan better boulevards, squares and formal parks than we have seen in France or Italy they will have another reason for giving up the game. But it cannot be done by imitating Europe. The fountain of town planning wisdom is not England or Germany or France. It is just as likely to be here; one cannot judge perhaps today, for town planning is not to be judged by its theories but by its results in creating a great city. That seems more likely to be done here than anywhere in Europe. But we cannot tell until the trick is done, and in the doing we may rebuild New York two or three times more. It has been done at least once in my memory.

One great fault of the past which shows now so plainly is our neglect of obvious opportunities to do something agreeable and our contentment in so many cases with the plain necessities.

Town planning today is a matter for many experts, who must work in the greatest harmony, with no superior, no power in control. For if you are planning a city where will you start? With streets laid out by an engineer? Will they then suit the rapid transit engineer? Or the architect who is to do the buildings on these streets, or the landscape architect who is to make parks and squares, or the railway engineer, who must somehow get his freight yards in the best relation to the railway and the city? What, too, of the sewer engineer, the dock builder and the vehicular traffic engineer? Indeed the modern city is so much of an engineering problem that one is likely to forget that appearance counts for anything. As Werner Hegeman of Berlin said before the war, "The prevalence of esthetic ideas in the city planning of past ages and in the much less successful efforts of the last generation, can be explained by the fact that the city planning work was done by either architects or landscape architects, both of whom were mainly trained to see esthetic values. But during the nineteenth century these artists have often been supplanted by surveyors or civil engineers."

So our problem in planning the city is to work the many engineers in harmony and to have with them as an equal partner in the work of each an artist, whether he call himself town planner or landscape architect, as that whatever the undertaking the opportunity for a result pleasing to the eye and gratifying to the senses and perhaps the esthetic emotions be not missed. For it usually costs no more or only a little more to give our work this added value. We must learn that not only buildings but all works can be designed with regard for appearance and will add to the pleasure of our city life in the degree that they are well designed. This is not a plea for idle and superfluous decoration, which is more distasteful to the artist than to others, but for the application of trained taste, judgment and artistic skill to ordinary engineering problems. In any work for which the artist is consulted it may be that he will add nothing, take away nothing, but by changing the proportions, the spacing or the location give the work a new and permanent value. The value of such qualities of design and good taste we are fully aware of and willingly pay for in clothes, in furnishings and in our houses. We know that appreciation of such values has saved our City Hall, will probably save High Bridge, has prevented encroachment on Central Park as it has preserved many natural features. There are in New York many accidental beauties and many thrills caused by the simplest of engineering work, but there is not enough of the sensitively felt and carefully executed work of the artist.

Our parks, where they are not dependent upon natural feature, are shocking in design, in their poverty of ideas, in their faulty arrangements to adapt them to any purpose, in their silly ornamentation and their slovenly upkeep.

Is there a single formal square on which monumental buildings front which gives any hint of that sense of space, of just proportion, of agreeable decoration and of care in its details which is part of the charm of Paris? Yet such a thing is no more difficult for us than for the French. It costs no more than many of our stupidities and, as every one knows, such work adds in dollars and cents to the value of real estate and to the possibilities of trade in hotels, theatres and stores. When will we stop trusting the planning of our cities to engineers only and give the artist his equal share in the work?

I would not be thought indifferent to the great beauties of New York, to the wonderful thrills it has for its true lover, as in morning mists its skyscrapers pierce the clouds or as in evening in Summer the sun sets at the street ends and throws a rosy glow over all for a last calm moment.

Southern and Northern Mobs.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I read with not a little bewilderment the articles in today's TIMES, captioned "Mob Tries to Lynch Negro Pickpocket" and "Kidnappers Seize Two Girls in Street." The cause and effect confuses one. In the case of the pickpocket, there was no sense in the mob's expressions, "Get a rope!" and "String him up!" It was a pure instance of the peculiar bravado meaninglessly prevalent in New York City.

Divers city newspaper reports entitle one to conclude that here the negro is particularized against for meannesses which Southerners daily overlook. Doubtless this spirit against the black emanates from the South, but I refuse to believe the South ever "strung up" a pickpocket; and I know New York citizens would not attempt it—not even in a case where one of the two causes for lynching might be involved. Those persons comprising the mob that "tried" to "lynch" the negro pickpocket no doubt are as perplexed over their action as the rest of us.

In the case of the kidnappers seizing the girls, it seems that a spontaneous show of mob spirit should have been made. True, revolvers were pointed toward persons near by, but those revolvers were meaningless to the officer who came up. In the South this is a lynchable crime—lynchable because the law can not, or will not, prevent it. To the normal father or brother the crime of abduction of a daughter or a sister has in it horrible consequences. I have found both the Northerner and Southerner possessed of very normal minds. But it appears that where passion in Northerners should be aroused, it is sometimes latent or misdirected. The Southerner, to me, appears to have the keener discrimination.

Veterans Back Investigation.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It may interest the readers of THE TIMES to know the attitude of the disabled ex-service men of this country toward the investigation of the United Veterans' Bureau now being conducted by a committee of the Senate.

The Come Back Club of Columbia University is composed entirely of Veterans' Bureau trainees of sufficient intelligence and maturity to qualify as undergraduates of the largest university in New York City.

The Board of Directors of that club has just forwarded to the Senate committee investigating the Veterans' Bureau a resolution, unanimously adopted at the last full meeting of the club, endorsing the purpose of the committee and offering full and energetic co-operation in suggesting constructive criticism.

"To you with failing hands we throw the torch. Be yours to hold it high." Congress has done its part to reform the Veterans' Bureau; the disabled men in training will help in every possible way; they ask the press of the country to do its powerful bit.

No Revolution in Rumania.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Of late a number of cables from Europe have appeared in the press of the United States asserting that Rumania is on the eve of a revolution, that the troops have been mobilized, &c. I am in a position to deny these inventions and to state that order has not ceased to reign in Rumania. These telegrams all emanate from hostile sources, where wishes are taken for realities, and simply constitute an attempt to make the political campaigns between rival parliamentary parties which exist in Rumania, as in every other modern State, appear as civil war.

Hoover, Force and the League.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

"Wisdom," says Secretary Hoover, "does not so much consist in knowledge of the ultimate; it consists in knowing what to do next."

For example: A man traveling through a wilderness of which he knows nothing arrives at the bank of a great river where he finds a canoe. The river is running swiftly in the direction toward which he wishes to travel. He embarks in the canoe and is ultimately hurled over a Niagara.

Mr. Hoover says that the International Court is already in existence and is largely the work of American thought and American hands. This is true also of the League of Nations.

He says that the enforcement of its decrees rests wholly upon public opinion and not upon force. Can enforcement rest securely upon anything but force? And, if public opinion is a force, can it be of any effect unless there are means for its exercise—such, for example, as are provided through government?

He points with pride to our accomplishments in the last two years toward eliminating the causes of war.

For example: We have held aloof from the League of Nations, leaving it so weak that it has been unable to prevent the Turks from coming back, of the Germans from repudiating their obligations, or the Bolsheviki from playing the devil.

He indicates, as the greatest "accomplishment" toward the elimination of the causes of war, the agreements at the Washington Arms Conference for the reduction of naval armaments.

But people with little or no experience have often engaged in war, and lack of armament has as often invited attack as excess of armament has encouraged aggression. The true causes of war lie deeper, and, pending their "elimination" from human nature in the far dawn of the Millennium we can only hope to check and control, not to eliminate them. We do this within our union of States, by the authority of our national Government, enforced as may be necessary, and it is not to be done throughout the world to the authority of a League of Nations similarly enforced and as jealously guarded against interference with home rule or unwarranted entanglements?

To answer in the negative is to question the success of our Union; but if, in the light of the fourth year after the close of localized barbarity untouched by national authority, the perfect success of our Union in maintaining peace and safety may be questioned, such exhibits may be also cited as examples of undisturbed home rule and the avoidance of national entanglement. Each State and section must do its own housecleaning and the Union concerns itself only with what gravely affects or menaces the nation. Each nation in the league does the same, and the league concerns itself only in the same way. By the analogy to it of the Union of States it would be greatly strengthened and could be thoroughly reconstructed. If ultimately, why not now?

RAINBOW BALL AIDS CRIPPLED CHILDREN

RAINBOW ARCHES BALLROOM

Young People Predominate at One of the Most Successful of Post-Lenten Gayeties.

The Rainbow Ball stood out last night in the program of post-Lenten gayeties as one of the successful functions of the Spring. It was held at the Ritz-Carlton for the benefit of the Association for the Aid of Crippled Children, of which Mrs. Edgar S. Auchincloss Jr., is President. The slogan of the association is "When a Feller Needs a Friend," and thousands of the city's crippled children will be benefited by the proceeds of the ball.

The attendance was larger than at last season's ball, and as the tickets were sold largely by the Junior Committee to their friends, it was like an invitation dance, with many of the subdebutantes in evidence. There were tables for bridge for the older folks who did not care to dance.

Many dinners were given preceding the ball, among the dinner hostesses being Mrs. Otto J. Ahlstrom, Mrs. Edwin Bradley Currier, Mrs. George S. Huntington, Mrs. Frederick H. Meserve, Mrs. Walter S. Sullivan, and Mrs. Julius F. Workum.

A rainbow arched the ballroom, colorful against the Adam period background, and the prismatic colors formed the motif of all the decorations and favors, including the many toy balloons. There was an exhibition dance at midnight by Esther Lord and Mr. Elliot from the Biltmore.

Mrs. Auchincloss, President of the association, was among the boxholders. The facts and figures about the association are that in 1900 there was one nurse to fourteen children in one small district in Manhattan Borough, and in 1923, fifteen nurses to 2,927 children, in the entire Borough of Manhattan and the Bronx.

ELECTRON MINIATURE RADIO

Sir Joseph Thomson Says It Excels the Vest-Pocket Outfit.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, April 13.—Every electron is a miniature sending station with every vest-pocket radio outfit completely outdistanced for speed and compactness, and the principles that underlie the electronic theory are essentially the same as make possible the sending and receiving of radio messages, it was revealed by Sir Joseph John Thomson, the discoverer of the electron, before the Franklin Institute today and in the fifth and last of his lectures on "The Place of the Electron in Chemistry."

According to Sir Joseph, who is Master of Trinity College, Cambridge, the electrons set up vibrations in the same way as do the sending apparatus of radios, and the wave lengths of the vibrations have been measured. The only thing the electrons lack is variable condensers, but these they hardly need.

His lectures before the Institute will be published in monthly instalments in the Institute Journal, and will be available for physicists, chemists and engineers who were unable to attend when they were delivered.

The relationship between the electrons have been observed and are known as photoelectric effects, according to Sir Joseph. The fact that mathematical calculations for their wave length practically checks the recorded observation for several of the elements, gives definite proof of the truth of the electronic theory and vindicates the discovery of Sir Joseph.

Electrons are tiny negative charge points circling a positive nucleus in the atom. The degree of force exerted by the positive nucleus of the atom on the nearest electron determines the extent of the electron's orbit or repulsion. The nucleus attracts the electron, but other negative electrons repel it, and thus a vibration is started.

PRINCETON CLUB TO BE HOST

FRANCIS B. HARRISON BACK.

Arrives on Spanish Liner—Traveler Brings German Porcelain Money.

Francis Burton Harrison, Governor General of the Philippines under the Wilson administration, returned from a business trip to Europe yesterday on the Antonio Lopez of the Spanish line. He spent several weeks in Spain. The vessel brought 300 cases of sacramental wine, 1,800 cases of onions and a large consignment of castile soap.

Allan Dawson, member of the United States Trade Commission, who has been studying business conditions abroad, was a passenger yesterday on the incoming President Roosevelt of the United States line. He said he would leave immediately for Washington to make his report. Mr. Dawson said he was surprised to find comparative harmony in the Ruhr. The main difficulty confronting the French, he said, was inadequate transportation facilities for removing fuel to France.

Slayer of Actress Gets From 20 Years to Life.

A sentence of from twenty years to life imprisonment was imposed yesterday in General Sessions on Harold Van Alstyne, 24 years old, an acrobat, who gave the address 102 West Forty-eighth Street, when he pleaded guilty to murder in the second degree for shooting and killing Miss Marion MacLaren, a member of the vaudeville musical troup, the "Five MacLarens," in an Eighth Avenue restaurant on the night of Jan. 12 last. The girl's brother, Hugh, was shot in the arm in trying to save his sister's life. When a policeman disarmed Van Alstyne he said that he killed the young woman because she had broken their marriage engagement, and he learned she was going to marry another.

In acquiescing to the acceptance of the plea of guilty Assistant District Attorney Brothers informed Judge Mulqueen that he did not believe a jury would convict Van Alstyne, the first degree murder charge, which carries the imposition of the death sentence.

HILLMAN BLOCKS HEARING.

Amalgamated Clothing Workers' President Won't Answer Questions.

The first move to enforce an order issued by the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court for taking testimony before trial of the suit brought by Marks Arnheim, Inc., against the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, asking for damages of $250,000 for conspiracy and alleging that the union is attempting to Sovietize this branch of an American industry, was blocked yesterday by the refusal of the union's president, Sidney Hillman, to answer questions.

The hearing began before Clarence M. Lewis, a referee, at 43 Cedar Street. When Maurice Deiches, attorney for Arnheim, asked Hillman if he was a member of the union, Robert Szold, attorney for the defense, advised his client not to answer.

Hillman declined to answer this and similar questions. Referee Lewis, who announced that he would certify the questions and answers for a ruling by Supreme Court Justice Newburger in the County Term, adjourned the hearing to April 18.

HELD AS JEWEL SWINDLER.

Man Jailed in Cleveland Is Said to Have Obtained $200,000.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, April 13.—Swindling of jewelers in leading cities throughout the country of amounts in jewelry said to total approximately $200,000 during the last four years, may be cleared with the imprisonment here today of a man giving the name of Walter Kratz, which, the authorities say, is fictitious.

The man was brought here from Baltimore to answer an indictment charging him with obtaining jewelry worth $1,025 nearly three years ago from a local firmby forgery. He is said to have operated also in New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Boston and Cincinnati.

Posing as a professional man, according to the circulars, the man would forge cards of introduction from well known men in the city in which he was operating, buy expensive jewelry and present a forged check for payment. He was convicted in Pittsburgh a year ago on a charge of forgery. On his release this week he was sent to Baltimore, but was returned to Cleveland, as the forgery here, it is said, was a greater offense than thatcharged in Baltimore.

HELD IN CHLOROFORM DEATH

New Jersey Woman Is Accused of Killing Defective Son.

CALDWELL, N. J., April 13.—Charged with having administered an overdose of chloroform to her 15-year-old son, Herbert, who was said to have been mentally deficient, Mrs. Clarice Millard, mother of the boy, was arrested this afternoon on a charge of manslaughter. She was taken to the Essex County jail in default of bail to await the action of the Grand Jury, which is in session now.

Mrs. Millard is alleged to have told the authorities, following the death of the boy Tuesday night, that she had administered chloroform to the lad during a paroxysm. She also is said to have admitted to the authorities that the lad had frequent fits and, being a trained nurse, she had given him the chloroform on several occasions.

ROB AND KILL TAXI DRIVER.

Camden Man Victim of Four Passengers—Companion Wounded.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMDEN, N. J., April 13.—William H. Bishop Jr., 23, of 24 North Twenty-fifth Street, Camden, was fatally shot in the head tonight on the Burlington Pike, near what is known as "Sorrel Horse." Harry Miller, 38, of the same address, was shot in the jaw, but is expected to recover.

Bishop, a taxi operator, was taking four passengers, supposed to be young Italians, to Riverton. On leaving the ferry he became suspicious and stopped at his home where he got Miller to accompany him.

When the taxicab came within half a mile of the Burlington County line Miller says he heard a commotion among the Italians, and as he turned to investigate he was shot in the jaw. In the excitement Bishop steered down an embankment. Another shot entered Bishop's head. The four passengers escaped. The wounded men were picked up by passing autoists and taken to Cooper Hospital, Camden, where Bishop died. Bishop's father, who is also a taxi owner, says his son was robbed of several hundred dollars.

MALONE OPPOSES LEAGUE.

Calls It a Place of Machinery Controlled by England.

Dudley Field Malone expressed disapproval of the League of Nations as at present constituted in a talk given late yesterday afternoon before the Forum and Vocal Press, at 279 Madison Avenue. Separate the League from the Foreign Offices of the countries of Europe, he said, and then America would be glad to discuss the question. Like Senator Borah, Mr. Malone would have a League that would outlaw and make it a crime, and a League which, he said, would have the power to act in questions affecting the nations and not merely in matters that do not affect Foreign Offices and interfere with the plans of politicians.

Mr. Malone called Foreign Offices the breeding places of war, and likened the present League of Nations to a piece of machinery controlled by England to hold the British Empire together.

BRYANT CEMETERY TO BECOME A PARK

Plot at Roslyn to Be Enlarged to Thirty Acres and Landscaped.

The William Cullen Bryant Cemetery, at Roslyn, L. I., where the poet is buried, is to be enlarged and made a park under the provisions of a bill introduced into the Assembly by Trubee Davison, son of the late Henry P. Davison. The bill has passed the Senate.

The cemetery, one of the oldest on Long Island, is now owned by the Roslyn Methodist Episcopal Church. Several prominent persons on Long Island, including Mrs. Henry Lyle, William Weeks of Glen Cove, and Dr. Joseph H. Bogart, president of the Roslyn Bank, have formed a company to buy the cemetery and enlarge and beautify it. The present tract consists of about twenty acres, and ten acres will be added to it.

It lies between the estates of Clarence H. Mackay and the late Henry C. Frick, and occupies a hill that is one of the highest spots on the island, overlooking Long Island Sound. On it is the only native grove of hemlocks on the island and many beautiful dogwood trees. It will be landscaped by Lewis & Valentine, and in the new section there will be nothing to indicate that it is a cemetery.

CAR KILLS OLD MERCHANT.

Struck in Broadway and Pinned Against Railing.

Emil Mayer, 66 years old, a retired merchant living at the Hotel Monterey, Broadway and Ninety-fifth Street, was killed by a southbound Broadway surface car at 112th Street shortly after 10 o'clock last night when crossing from the east to the west side of the thoroughfare.

Cormack Gilligan, motorman of the car, who was taken to the 100th Street station on a technical charge of homicide, told the police that the aged man had stepped off the safety island crosswalk in the middle of Broadway just as the car reached that point. Mayer was pinned against the iron railing and then thrown beneath the forward trucks of the car. Traffic was halted for about three-quarters of an hour.

APPELLATE COURT BARS JUBILEE FUND

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court sustained yesterday the injunction issued by Justice George V. Mullan restraining the Board of Estimate from issuing $400,000 in special revenue bonds to help defray the expenses of the city's silver jubilee. An appropriation of $100,000 for the celebration is carried in the city budget, and the use of this money, although not restrained by the injunction, was said to be unlikely because of Controller Charles L. Craig's opposition.

The injunction was obtained by William J. Schieffelin, Chairman of the Citizens' Union, and Justice Mullan held that the expenditure proposed would not be for a city purpose and would therefore be illegal. Justice Mullan declared that the expenditure of the $100,000 appropriated in the budget would be equally illegal, but did not issue any injunction against its expenditure because none was requested. Since the injunction action was started, Mayor Hylan and his friends have arranged to finance the celebration by subscriptions.

"The decision of the Appellate Division will doubtless move our peevish Mayor to more stupid tirades against the courts," said Leonard M. Wallstein, counsel for the Citizens Union. "The Corporation Counsel, already overworked in attempting to sustain the illegal performances of the Hylan administration will doubtless be peremptorily ordered forthwith to attempt another futile appeal.

"The decision, however, puts a final quietus on the brazen attempts of the Hylan administration to waste the taxpayers' money on trashy self-glorification. Those who enjoy and others who hope to obtain official indulgence and favor may finance the Hylan jamboree, if they wish, but public money is now definitely withdrawn from such misuse.

"The Mayor's friends, satellites and millionaire deputies are now free alone to enjoy the pleasure of paying for reproductions of the Mayor's physiognomy and canned speeches, for the rent of the finest dancing floor in New York for a whole month, for jewel fountains, silver medals, handsomely gotten-up frames for the Aldermen, elaborate feasts, illuminated menus and all the rest of the trumpery and ballyhoo."

According to a statement issued by the Mayor's Celebration Committee, the many subscriptions being received indicate widespread interest in the celebration. Among the subscribers yesterday was Richard G. Glery of 1,254 Second Avenue, who said he was the father of thirteen children. Mr. Glery subscribed $25.

WILL TRY LONDON CHURCHES

Bishop Will Name "Grand Jury" to Say If Any Shall Be Torn Down.

LONDON, April 13.—The Bishop of London is attempting to solve the problem of the city churches, which are so sparsely attended, by establishing a "grand jury" to try them. In The London Diocesan Magazine, the Bishop says this grand jury will represent every possible interest and that its consent will be necessary before any church is pulled down.

The chief purpose of his proposal is to consolidate some of the forty-seven churches, economizing in both money and man power.

COURT TAKES OVER WARD CABLEGRAMS

APPEAL SURE TO BE TAKEN

Ward Attorneys or Sherman Will Carry Fight for Messages to Supreme Court.

STATE TO KEEP UP INQUIRY

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 13.—Counsel for Walter S. Ward, were elated today when Supreme Court Justice Staley impounded in the custody of the Clerk of Albany County all of the cable messages exchanged by George S. Ward and his sons, Walter and Ralph, relating to the slaying of Clarence Peters by Walter. Justice Staley directed that the papers be sealed in his presence and remain so until he gives his decision on the injunction proceedings brought by Ward's lawyers seeking permanently to restrain the State from reading the messages. Due to the fact that former Judge D-Cady Herrick indicated that Ward would appeal if the injunction was not granted, the much sought cablegrams will remain inviolate. The mantle of secrecy about them, in fact, will remain while Ward carries his appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States, if he takes that course.

Attorney General Sherman will do likewise if the State is enjoined, so the messages appear destined to remain undisclosed for months.

Deputy Attorney General Chambers and Deputy Attorney General Cohen appeared before Justice Staley in Chambers this afternoon when Joseph L. Egan, assistant counsel to the Western Union Telegraph Company, asked the Court to rule on the eligibility of a subpoena which the State had served on the company directing that the messages be turned over to the Attorney General. Mr. Egan said the corporation wished to be assured that in delivering the messages it was within the law.

Appearing for the Wards were Allan R. Campbell, Mr. Herrick and former Justice Isaac N. Nills. Before Mr. Egan or Deputy Attorney General Chambers could state their views, Justice Staley suggested the impounding of the messages as a course fair to all parties.

"In this injunction proceeding," he said, "we have the proposition to determine what property rights the Wards have in the messages. The next proposition is whether, assuming they have no property rights, they have rights because some of the messages may lack materiality.

"The wire company is here because counsel for Ward has notified them that if the messages are surrendered the company will face penalties. The Western Union is facing two dilemmas—disobedience of the Attorney General's subpoena or facing action by the Wards for damages, either real or fanciful—which is women's attorney's term here. I was my suggestion that, with the consent of counsel, the papers be delivered over to the custody of the Court and the the messages be sealed and impounded and placed in the custody of the County Clerk of Albany. This fits in with the understanding of the Court that the messages, even if turned over to the Attorney General in advance, were not to be used as evidence in any way publicity pending the decision of the injunction."

Mr. Chambers wanted to be certain that the messages would not be destroyed. He understood there was a ruling of the Interstate Commerce Commission permitting telegraph companies to destroy messages after a year had elapsed from the date of their sending. He understood that Ward messages sent in March, 1922, had already been destroyed.

Mr. Egan stated that none of the messages sought would be destroyed. When Mr. Chambers indicated that he would file no objections to the Court's suggestion, Mr. Egan sealed up all the messages. Mr. Campbell supervised the sealing and insisted that a good job be made of it. Mr. Campbell directed that red sealing wax be plastered around three edges of the envelope and then daubed on the big patch on the flap himself.

Both Campbell and Egan refused to tell how many messages were placed in the envelope.

Hearings in the State's investigation into the circumstances surrounding the slaying of Peters will be resumed here at 10 o'clock Monday morning.

As a result of the impounding of the messages, Mr. Chambers withdrew his mandamus proceeding which was scheduled to come up tomorrow for argument before Justice Staley and which sought to compel the telegraph company to explain why it had failed to deliver the cablegrams to the State.

BANDITS SLAY BUILDER, MISS A BIG PAYROLL

PHILADELPHIA, April 13.—John C. Emgable, contractor, builder and General Superintendent of the E. A. Hastens Lumber Company, was fatally shot in the back this morning by one of four bandits who attempted to steal the weekly payroll, which he was carrying to the company's yard at Nineteenth and Poplar Streets. He died soon after his admission to the Lankenau Hospital.

All but $200 of the money which he was carrying was saved. Two women who were less than thirty feet away screamed after the shooting. Mr. Emgable had dropped to the sidewalk unconscious and, rather than risk the delay of searching his pockets thoroughly for the money, two of the bandits who had left their big red touring car jumped back to the running board and the machine sped away.

Two policemen who were riding on a street car saw the climax of the hold-up and got off too late to help.

Mr. Emgable left the Northwestern National Bank at Broad Street and Fairmount Avenue with $2,588.67 which he had drawn and placed in the inside pocket of his coat. In his hip pocket he carried a pistol. He started to walk to the office.

Clifford Allen, a grocer, saw him and noticed the bandits' touring car trailing along slowly. He watched Mr. Emgable turn from Poplar Street into Nineteenth Street. When the contractor reached Nineteenth and Perkiomen Streets, the big car drove up to the curb and two of the occupants jumped out. They covered Mr. Emgable with pistols.

Mr. Emgable put his left hand to his inside pocket and reached to his hip pocket to draw his pistol when one of the bandits placed the muzzle of a gun against his back and pulled the trigger. The contractor dropped.

One of the bandits who had been attempting to get the money from Mr. Emgable's pockets loosened his grip. A few bills came out in his hand and these he stuck in his pocket as he jumped aboard the car. The police have no trace of them.

Gay Colors and Signs on Cars To Advertise the Elevated

A color scheme of orange, with panels marked off in stripings of black, has been adopted by the Interborough Rapid Transit Company for its elevated cars in its attempt to popularize that method of travel and relieve congestion in its subways. Letters of royal blue on each side of each car will advertise the elevated as "The Open Air Route."

Besides painting the outside of its cars, the Interborough will redecorate the interior with white enameled ceilings and mahogany-colored panels. The transformation will begin on April 20. The improved elevated express service will be inaugurated next Monday.

LAWMAKERS VIEW WHIPPING STRAP

TABERT INQUIRY STARTED

Committee Holds Short Hearing on Death of Convict After Heavy Flogging.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., April 13 (Associated Press).—The lowly convict, the subject of investigation because of alleged brutal treatment administered in private convict camps of the State, had his day in the lower house of the Legislature today during discussion of the death of Martin Tabert, a native of Munich, N. D., who is alleged to have died under the lash of a convict camp boss in Dixie County.

Threadbare clothing, splashed with swamp muck, distorted and mismated shoes, and other apparel belonging to the convict's garb were cast upon the floor of the lower house, with a whip used for flogging prisoners, and members examined them piece by piece.

There was a stirring scene when the House moved to make a special order of business for next Wednesday the consideration of measures looking to the abolition of the convict lease system and the prohibiting of corporal punishment.

In the meantime, the joint committee named to investigate the conviction, leasing and death of Tabert, as requested by a resolution adopted by the North Dakota Legislature, recessed in the middle of an examination of Sheriff J. R. Jones of Leon County, after a session of less than one hour. It was announced that the committee would get down to business Tuesday morning.

"Fireworks" were looked for in the Senate today over the House concurrent resolution seeking to broaden the scope of the investigating committee so as to make it a Statewide inquiry into county camps. The resolution went into the unfinished-business hopper when Senator B. H. Lindsey of Bonifay sought to amend it so that the committee would be empowered to investigate alleged cruelties at convict camps controlled by the State, and not be confined to county camps.

The Senate recessed over the week-end before Senator Lindsey's amendment could be drawn up.

Sheriff Jones admitted having seen Tabert in the county jail and remembered the sentence imposed upon him by the court. He said that two deputy sheriffs made the arrest, that the prisoner was held in the jail forty-eight hours after he was sentenced, as is required by law, and then was taken to Taylor County and turned over to that Sheriff and a receipt obtained for the prisoner.

Eight days after Tabert was sent to Taylor County, Jones said, he received a registered letter, addressed in care of the Sheriff, from Tabert's parents in Munich, N. D. The Sheriff said he informed the Post Office officials that the party had gone to Clara.

The convict whipping strap shown in the House today was 4 feet long and 2¼ inches wide, and weighed one pound. Chairman Mayo said he understood Tabert had been whipped with a strap weighing 7½ pounds. It was leaded at the handling end.

Mr. Mayo said he did not believe a strap of that size could cause serious injury, but he had been informed that it was frequently the practice to treat the strap with syrup and oil and then rake it in sand to give it more "effectiveness."

Representative Davis of Leon offered an amendment prohibiting whipping.

"Let's go at it right while we are moving," he exclaimed, adding that "Texas, the other Southern States, and even Georgia," had discontinued corporal punishment.

HITS ST. LAWRENCE PROJECT

Saskatchewan Premier Urges More Railroads Instead.

SASKATOON, Sask., April 13.—Vigorous opposition to the St. Lawrence waterways project was expressed by Premier John Oliver in an address here last night, in which he said it would merely add further water competition at a tremendous cost. The chief present need, he said, was more rail traffic to make possible further reductions in railroad rates and a greater net profit to the roads.

He criticised those who sought to create further waterways, while the Pacific was unused.

"The Almighty God gave the Pacific Ocean for man to use," he said, "and the Almighty is stronger than the Canadian Parliament.

"The Pacific Ocean shall be used for transportation. The reduction of six cents per hundred pounds which we won last year has started a movement of trade westward which the Parliament of Canada is powerless to stop."

WIDOW WINS MOTOR CAR.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., April 13.—Surrogate George A. Slater of Westchester County was called upon today to decide whether an automobile, given by a husband to his wife before his death as a birthday gift, but leaving the license recorded in his own name, belonged to the estate or the widow. A brother of the late Judge Charles W. Oldfield of Peekskill contended that the car belonged to the residuary estate. Among the witnesses who said that Judge Oldfield bought the car for his wife as a birthday gift was the agent who sold the car and who drove it from Moline, Ill., in order to get it to Peekskill on the day of Mrs. Oldfield's birthday.

Talk of a Woman "Immortal."

PARIS, April 13.—For the first time since the Académie Française was founded by Cardinal Richelieu in 1634, a woman is receiving official consideration as a candidate for a seat among "The Immortals." She is Mme. Alfred Mortier, an author who writes under the pseudonym "Aurel."

UNTERMYER CALLS PLASTERERS CZARS

FINDS NETWORK OF CONTROL

In his opening address yesterday before Justice Brown and a jury in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court at the trial of thirty-six officials of Plasterers' Union Local 60, Samuel Untermyer, as Special Deputy Attorney General, declared that organized labor was not on trial, but that the case was founded on an attempt to vindicate the majesty of the law.

He explained that the Lockwood committee's investigation last Summer into housing conditions in this city had developed evidence which indicated that the plasterers conspired to hamper building operations in this city by various means, principally through strikes, when their demands were not complied with by the employers.

He declared that the plasterers had abused powers possessed by organized labor and that evidence he would present at the trial would show that there was a network of union control and domination in building operations throughout the country which made it impossible to proceed with any construction work unless union labor solely was employed. Mr. Untermyer also asserted that the plasterers' union exercised Czaristic powers in its dealings with builders and that nobody could go into the plastering or contracting business without the consent of the unions. He also proposed to show, he said, that committees of the plasterers' union established rules on which builders were called before a court of the executives of the union, fined for alleged infractions and there was no tribunal to which they could appeal.

Before Mr. Untermyer began his address, Jonah J. Goldstein, counsel for the thirty-six union officials, demanded the dismissal of the indictment, on the ground that no crime had been committed; that no overt act was charged in the indictment, and that if the act charged were in fact committed it did not constitute a crime of criminal intent, an essential of such a charge. He stated that the defendants were not engaged in trade or commerce within the meaning of the business law nor the penal law, under which the indictment against the men was returned.

His motion was denied, and then Mr. Goldstein endeavored to challenge one of the jurors, Abraham Friedman, Deputy Attorney General, who is aiding in the prosecution, opposed his motion and said that it should have been made before the jury was sworn. Justice Brown concurred in this view.

Jurors are John J. Carty, foreman, Vice President of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company; Shirley E. Spence, manager, 119 West Fortieth Street; Clarke G. Daily, real estate, 400 Convent Avenue; Robert A. Parke, transportation expert, 29 East Seventy-seventh Street; Sidney Kent Singer, secretary, 1,062 Madison Avenue; William McB. Espie, Treasurer, 2 East 120th Street; Samuel J. Hutchinson, secretary, 51 East Ninety-fifth Street; Charles H. Dorr, writer, 7 Bank Street; John B. Hulse, stenographer, Russell Sage Foundation, 613 West 144th Street; John Hecker, manager, 350 West 119th Street; Edward M. Crotty, selling agent, 64 West 104th Street, and Maurice Alsen, chemical engineer, 59 Morton Street.

Advance Effective May 1 Announced by Union President.

After a meeting of the Building Trades Council last night at 130 East Fifty-ninth Street, M. J. Colleran, President of Plasterers' Union 66, announced that the employers had granted the plasterers an increase in wages, and that after May 1 they would receive $12 a day.

He said the plumbers' union had reported progress.

EQUITABLE CONTROL NOT IN HYDE ESTATE

Stock Was Transferred Before Founder's Death to His Son and Equitable Now Has It.

Special to The New York Times.

RIVERHEAD, L. I., April 13.—The famous 502 shares of stock which once gave control of the great Equitable Life Assurance Society and which were the subject of the great insurance battle in 1905 were not included in the estate distributed by the will of Henry B. Hyde, founder of the Equitable, when he died in 1899, and therefore were not included in the comparatively small valuation of $1,771,762 put on his estate at that time, according to the final accounting filed here yesterday by the Hyde executors.

Only ten shares of Equitable stock are mentioned in any of the accountings which have been filed from time to time since Mr. Hyde's death in 1899. These shares, par value $180, were appraised at $250 each in every accounting down to this final one, which shows that on Feb. 16, 1918, they were sold for $15,000, or $1,500 each.

Mr. Hyde's will, which was executed on Sept. 18, 1895, set forth that he had executed a trust agreement on the previous day which disposed of "certain stock" to his son, James Hazen Hyde, and that he had conveyed and transferred much real and personal property to his wife and son before making out his will. It is believed that the stock conveyed to James Hazen Hyde, previous to the execution of the will, included the stock control of the Equitable. In 1905 James Hazen Hyde sold 502 shares of this sotck to Thomas Fortune Ryan for $2,510,000. Ryan later sold it to the late J. P. Morgan at a profit, and Morgan sold it to General T. Coleman du Pont, again at a profit, in 1915. It has since passed into possession of the Equitable itself.

The accounting filed here yesterday showed that the estate distributed by Mr. Hyde's will has shrunk from $1,771,762.20 at the time of his death to $1,304,423.30, because of the payment of certain bequests and losses on securities, chiefly Western railroad stocks.

Allan McCulloh of 40 East Seventy-fifth Street, one of the executors of the Hyde estate, verified last night the belief that the controlling interest in the Equitable was not included in the property disposed of by Mr. Hyde's will, but was the "certain stock" referred to as having ben put in trust for James Hazen Hyde before the will was executed. Mr. McCulloh said that much other property was distributed to Mr. Hyde's wife and his son, James Hazen Hyde, in the same way and was not covered by the will.

Sympathizers Provide a Real Pigeon Fund For Boy Who 'Never Had Nothin' of His Own'

Seven-year-old Louis Peterson of 182 West Jackson Street, Corona, who pleaded his own case last week before Judge Morgan J. Ryan in the Children's Court, Jamaica, and who said he "never had nathin' of his own" when charged with stealing pigeons, will get a pleasant surprise today.

Judge Ryan received a letter yesterday from a resident of Oklahoma City, Okla., enclosing $2 to be spent on pigeons for Louis. Another letter, also containing $2, was received from a mother of Plainfield, N. J., who said that her young boy, just the age of Louis, after his father had read him the story, asked permission to send Louis $1 from a fund he had been saving for next Christmas. The mother also chipped in $1 to the pigeon "kitty."

Judge Ryan gave the money to Probation Officer Joseph Dowling, with orders to acquire the birds at once and deliver them to Louis, who already has been presented with a baseball and glove.

DENOUNCE GOMPERS FOR ATTACK ON FUND

TELL OF AIDING UNIONS

A. F. of L. Head Disappointed by Refusal to Help Enterprise He Favored, They Assert.

The American Fund for Public Service, Inc., yesterday accused Samuel Gompers of having launched his attack against the fund "after one of his enterprises failed to receive $10,000" for which it asked. counter-attack is made in a statement given out by Norman M. Thomas, President, and Roger N. Baldwin, Secretary, at the headquarters of the Fund, 2 West Thirteenth Street.

On behalf of the fund, established with a gift of $800,000 by Charles E. Garland, who for a long time refused to accept a one-million-dollar inheritance, Mr. Thomas and Mr. Baldwin say that the biggest loan advanced went to the United Mine Workers, District 2, Cresson, Pa., a subsidiary of the American Federation of Labor. They list other affiliated organizations of the A. F. of L. as beneficiaries of the fund which Mr. Gompers charged was intended for revolutionary purposes.

In their statement they say:

"The attack of Mr. Gompers on the American Fund for Public Service, Inc., is clearly the result of his disappointment at not receiving money for an enterprise in which he is interested. The personnel and activities of this fud were given wide publicity in the public press eight months ago. If Mr. Gompers thought we were a revolutionary organization, with which it was improper for the labor movement to deal, he should have then warned his adherents.

"It comes with poor grace from him now to object to the character of the fund's trustees after one of his enterprises has failed to receive the $10,000 it asked for. But it may soften Mr. Gompers's indignation somewhat to know that many A. F. of L. enterprises have been the beneficiaries of this fund.

"Many others have applied and we have been regretfully obliged to turn them down for lack of resources or because their work should, in our judgment, be supported otherwise. Our refusal to aid the Workers' Education Bureau as a national organization is entirely consistent with the deep interest and belief in the general work of workers' education in the United States.

"Among the organizations directly or indirectly connected with the A. F. of L. which have received money from this fund are the United Mine Workers, District 2, Cresson, Pa., to whom our biggest loan was made, $25,000; Brookwood Labor College, Katonah, N. Y., whose Labor Co-operating Committee is composed entirely of representatives of unions affiliated with the A. F. of L., the National Women's Trade Union League, Chicago, Ill., officially affiliated with the A. F. of L., and the Textile Workers' Union, New York City."

"We see that Mr. Gompers is still fighting the war. His chief charges against us are that we are pacifist and revolutionary. We thought the war was over. We see that Mr. Gompers welcomes the support of Senator Robert M. La Follette, who certainly was opposed to the war, yet he was the A. F. of L.'s honored guest at their Cincinnati convention.

"It also happens that the executive secretary of Mr. Gompers's organization, to which we were unable to contribute, was a pacifist during the war and so far as we know still is.

"These facts make us suspect that Mr. Gompers is merely using a characterization which he hopes will prejudice public opinion against us. As a matter of fact Mr. Gompers is quite inaccurate in many of his characterizations. A number of Trustees of the fund were by no means pacifists during the war and those who were are content to be in the company above mentioned.

"Mr. Gompers's excitement about the financing of the revolutionary movement in America fails to consider that the total amount the fund has, $850,000, is insignificant compared with the resources of organized labor. Any one of the strong international unions has bigger resources in its own treasury.

"It is plain nonsense to think that any such fund could achieve a 'revolutionary' purpose or subvert Mr. Gompers's labor movement. He has lumped together in his attack practically every forward-looking movement in the country and labeled them all 'revolutionary.' Any sane reader knows that it is bunk."

FORGED ROOSEVELT CHECKS

WASHINGTON, April 13.—Receipt by a Washington bank of two checks bearing the forged signature of Theodore Roosevelt, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, drawn in payment for articles purchased from Atlantic City merchants and duly received by Mr. Roosevelt in the mail, has about convinced him that some one has assumed his identity in the coast resort.

The first check, for $250, covered an elaborate toilet set, with gold-back comb and brushes, later received from the store. The next article received followed a check for $85 in payment. As the checks just covered the purchase, the motive of the forgeries apparently was not to profit by change on the checks but merely to support the impostor's role.

UNITE AGAINST 'MODERNISTS'

Nebraskans Form Christian Fundamental Association.

OMAHA, Neb., April 13.—Seventy-five ministers, laymen and women representing Methodist, Presbyterian, Baptist and Congregational Churches of Nebraska yesterday organized the Nebraska Christian Fundamental Association designed to combat the "modernists," who deny the literal authenticity of the Bible.

Those who make such denial were characterized as the "sworn enemies of God" by the Rev. H. Ellis Lininger, a Congregational minister of Wisner, Neb., who was elected President.

GOMPERS SAYS FUND PROVES ITSELF RED

LIKENS VAUCLAIN TO LENIN

Poses as an Autocrat, He Asserts, but Predicts That Unions and Freedom Will Enter His Shops.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, paid his respects again today to the American Fund for Public Service, Inc., of New York, which he denounced yesterday as being used to further pacifist, radical and revolutionary sentiments among American workers. In his statement today Mr. Gompers replied to the defense offered last night for the trustees of the fund, who control $800,000 of the fortune Charles Garland refused to accept, declaring that it proved what he contended.

After Mr. Gompers had made his answer to the response of the trustees information was received in Washington that President Norman Thomas and Secretary Roger Baldwin of the fund for Public Service, Inc., had declared in New York today that the attack of Mr. Gompers was "clearly the result of his disappointment at not receiving money for an enterprise in which he is interested." Mr. Gompers could not be reached after extracts from this statement were received in Washington by telegraph.

According to what Mr. Gompers said today, he found satisfaction in last night's reply of the trustees.

"I am thoroughly satisfied with the case as it stands," said Mr. Gompers. "The trustees of that fund, in their statement of their uses of money already expended, amply sustain everything that I had to say about the character of the work with which it was improper for the labor movement to deal, he should have then warned his adherents.

"It comes with poor grace from him now to object to the character of the fund's trustees after one of his enterprises has failed to receive the $10,000 it asked for. But it may soften Mr. Gompers's indignation somewhat to know that many A. F. of L. enterprises have been the beneficiaries of this fund.

"Many others have applied and we have been regretfully obliged to turn them down for lack of resources or because their work should, in our judgment, be supported otherwise. Our refusal to aid the Workers' Education Bureau as a national organization is entirely consistent with the deep interest and belief in the general work of workers' education in the United States.

"Among the organizations directly or indirectly connected with the A. Y., whose Labor Co-operating Committee is composed entirely of representatives of unions affiliated with the A. F. of L., the National Women's Trade Union League, Chicago, Ill., officially affiliated with the A. F. of L., and the Textile Workers' Union, New York City."

"We see that Mr. Gompers is still fighting the war. His chief charges against us are that we are pacifist and revolutionary. We thought the war was over. We see that Mr. Gompers welcomes the support of Senator Robert M. La Follette, who certainly was opposed to the war, yet he was the A. F. of L.'s honored guest at their Cincinnati convention.

"It also happens that the executive secretary of Mr. Gompers's organization, to which we were unable to contribute, was a pacifist during the war and so far as we know still is.

"These facts make us suspect that Mr. Gompers is merely using a characterization which he hopes will prejudice public opinion against us. As a matter of fact Mr. Gompers is quite inaccurate in many of his characterizations. A number of Trustees of the fund were by no means pacifists during the war and those who were are content to be in the company above mentioned.

"Mr. Gompers's excitement about the financing of the revolutionary movement in America fails to consider that the total amount the fund has, $850,000, is insignificant compared with the resources of organized labor. Any one of the strong international unions has bigger resources in its own treasury.

"It is plain nonsense to think that any such fund could achieve a 'revolutionary' purpose or subvert Mr. Gompers's labor movement. He has lumped together in his attack practically every forward-looking movement in the country and labeled them all 'revolutionary.' Any sane reader knows that it is bunk."

"He took labor leaders 'and put every damned one of them in jail.' Progress seems to act with inscrutable wisdom in putting the germ of madness in the breasts of its enemies.

"Trade unionism and freedom will come to Mr. Vauclain's shops. We shall not make threats. We leave that to him. But freedom will come, even into the last fastnesses of reaction. Neither Mr. Vauclain, Mr. Gary nor any other autocrat can forever drive slaves on a tyrant's terms in the Republic of the United States. He does poorly to fling his brutal taunt into the faces of American manhood."

WASHINGTON, April 13 (Associated Press).—A statement made public today by the United Mine Workers of America declared that those in control of the Garland fund are "making a desperate but vain attempt to control and dictate the policies of the coal miners' union."

"This is the same aggregation," the statement said, "that formulated and prepared the so-called plan for nationalization of coal mines which was made public at a recent meeting of radicals in New York. It will be remembered that that plan for nationalization was given to the public at that time with a false impression that it was the plan of the United Mine Workers of America. The plan was repudiated by the union when it was made public."

JUDGE SENTENCES SON OF FRIEND TO PRISON

PHILADELPHIA, April 13. — Sentenced by a Judge who is an intimate friend of his family and who held him upon his knee as a child, Cadmus Z. Gordon Jr., a member of a prominent Pennsylvania family and a senior in the University of Pennsylvania Law School, today began serving a thirty days' term in jail for contempt of court.

HYLAN YELLS DROWN OPPONENT'S SPEECH

MAYOR RUNS WHOLE SHOW

There was a handful of Republicans in the audience, but the Hylan supporters easily outyelled them. Kaufman pleaded for fair play and said that as the guest of the Board of Estimate, having been invited to meet the Mayor of the city, he deserved courteous treatment. The Mayor made several futile attempts to keep the crowd in order, but most of the time smiled and nodded his head in approval when some one heckled his opponent. Cries of "Shame, shame, Mr. Mayor; give him a chance" from a woman in the audience had no effect. The uproar reached its height at the close of the meeting when the Mayor criticised the courts for granting injunctions against the running of buses. Kaufman, shaking a finger in the Mayor's face, exclaimed:

Would "Yank Judges Off Bench."

"Do you mean to infer, Mr. Mayor, that you can't trust the courts of this State?"

There was considerable cheering at this and when it died down the Mayor said:

"I'll answer that, young man. If I had my way I'd yank some Judges off the bench."

Then the crowd cheered the Mayor several minutes.

When the Mayor, flanked by a number of city officials, called the meeting to order he asked:

"Where's the Assemblyman?"

"Right here," answered the boyish-looking Kaufman.

"Well, I hope you will have better success than did Assemblyman Steinberg and Ullman," said the Mayor, beaming on the audience. The Mayor then explained what the meeting was about. Kaufman began his speech, but he was interrupted several times by applause as he scored the "traction ring," but the audience gave him a respectful hearing. When Assemblyman Kaufman began his speech he was interrupted by jeers and cheers, with which it was improper for the labor movement to deal, he should have then warned his adherents.

"It comes with poor grace from him now to object to the character of the fund's trustees after one of his enterprises has failed to receive the $10,000 it asked for. But it may soften Mr. Gompers's indignation somewhat to know that many A. F. of L. enterprises have been the beneficiaries of this fund.

"Many others have applied and we have been regretfully obliged to turn them down for lack of resources or because their work should, in our judgment, be supported otherwise. Our refusal to aid the Workers' Education Bureau as a national organization is entirely consistent with the deep interest and belief in the general work of workers' education in the United States.

"Among the organizations directly or indirectly connected with the A. F. of L. which have received money from this fund are the United Mine Workers, District 2, Cresson, Pa., to whom our biggest loan was made, $25,000; Brookwood Labor College, Katonah, N. Y., whose Labor Co-operating Committee is composed entirely of representatives of unions affiliated with the A. F. of L., the National Women's Trade Union League, Chicago, Ill., officially affiliated with the A. F. of L., and the Textile Workers' Union, New York City."

"We see that Mr. Gompers is still fighting the war. His chief charges against us are that we are pacifist and revolutionary. We thought the war was over. We see that Mr. Gompers welcomes the support of Senator Robert M. La Follette, who certainly was opposed to the war, yet he was the A. F. of L.'s honored guest at their Cincinnati convention.

"It also happens that the executive secretary of Mr. Gompers's organization, to which we were unable to contribute, was a pacifist during the war and so far as we know still is.

"These facts make us suspect that Mr. Gompers is merely using a characterization which he hopes will prejudice public opinion against us. As a matter of fact Mr. Gompers is quite inaccurate in many of his characterizations. A number of Trustees of the fund were by no means pacifists during the war and those who were are content to be in the company above mentioned.

"Mr. Gompers's excitement about the financing of the revolutionary movement in America fails to consider that the total amount the fund has, $850,000, is insignificant compared with the resources of organized labor. Any one of the strong international unions has bigger resources in its own treasury.

"It is plain nonsense to think that any such fund could achieve a 'revolutionary' purpose or subvert Mr. Gompers's labor movement. He has lumped together in his attack practically every forward-looking movement in the country and labeled them all 'revolutionary.' Any sane reader knows that it is bunk."

"He took labor leaders 'and put every damned one of them in jail.' Progress seems to act with inscrutable wisdom in putting the germ of madness in the breasts of its enemies.

"Trade unionism and freedom will come to Mr. Vauclain's shops. We shall not make threats. We leave that to him. But freedom will come, even into the last fastnesses of reaction. Neither Mr. Vauclain, Mr. Gary nor any other autocrat can forever drive slaves on a tyrant's terms in the Republic of the United States. He does poorly to fling his brutal taunt into the faces of American manhood."

WASHINGTON, April 13 (Associated Press).—A statement made public today by the United Mine Workers of America declared that those in control of the Garland fund are "making a desperate but vain attempt to control and dictate the policies of the coal miners' union."

"This is the same aggregation," the statement said, "that formulated and prepared the so-called plan for nationalization of coal mines which was made public at a recent meeting of radicals in New York. It will be remembered that that plan for nationalization was given to the public at that time with a false impression that it was the plan of the United Mine Workers of America. The plan was repudiated by the union when it was made public."

JUDGE SENTENCES SON OF FRIEND TO PRISON

PHILADELPHIA, April 13. — Sentenced by a Judge who is an intimate friend of his family and who held him upon his knee as a child, Cadmus Z. Gordon Jr., a member of a prominent Pennsylvania family and a senior in the University of Pennsylvania Law School, today began serving a thirty days' term in jail for contempt of court.

Oklahoman Champion Saver Of Postal Service Twine

WASHINGTON, April 13. — The Postmaster of Blackwell, Okla., was awarded the palm today as champion twine saver among the thousands of postal workers who have been cautioned to cut down requisitions by using over again the pieces of string with which incoming mail is wrapped.

The Tower City (Pa.) Post Office reported that it had requisitioned no twine in seven years. Then Jourdanton, Texas, raised the record to eight years. Roseland, Va., pushed it up to twenty-three, and Marshallville, Ga., carried it to thirty.

Then came the Blackwell Postmaster today with a report that twine in his office was "piling up on him." Clerks, carriers and charwomen, he said, had become experts at winding up retied twine, so that now "we are the twine-tyingist bunch in Oklahoma."

MAYOR AND CRAIG AT PEACE FOR A DAY

Although the spirit of peace brooded over yesterday's meeting of the Board of Estimate, with neither Mayor Hylan nor Controller Craig making any attempt to renew hostilities, the fight between the two officials, it was said later, has not been called off, but is ready to break out again at any moment. President Murray Hulbert of the Board of Aldermen showed his willingness several times to make an attack on the Controller, but the Mayor, who sat between them, smoothed matters over.

Peter J. McGuinness, an Alderman from Greenpoint, furnished the only excitement. For the second time in a few weeks he put the Mayor in the 1924 Presidential race. The matter came up during a discussion of a request for $6,400 for the upkeep of farm gardens in his district. During an eloquent plea for the money the Alderman remarked that Mr. Hylan was the greatest man since Abraham Lincoln and should be the President of the United States. The Mayor blushed and asked Mr. McGuinness to withdraw the nomination or he wouldn't be able to vote for the appropriation. The Alderman refused and later the Mayor voted for the farm gardens.

"Assemblyman Steinberg said last night, although the papers didn't print it," said the Mayor, "that Aldermen are bootleggers."

"I wish I had been a bootlegger forty years ago," said McGuinness. "I'd have some money today."

President Hulbert suggested that some one should tell Steinberg that more flies could be caught with molasses than with vinegar.

"A fly would not light on that guy," put in McGuinness. "He'd be bruised if he did."

McGuinness got the appropriation. Controller Craig then announced that he was ready to introduce a bill at Albany for the abolition of coal pockets along Riverside Drive, especially on Washington Heights.

After the meeting the Mayor announced that he would send a special message to the Board of Aldermen requesting passage at next Tuesday's meeting of an ordinance extending the time for exempting taxes on dwellings for another year. The message was asked for by President Hulbert so as to obviate any delay that might be caused by objection on the part of one member to immediate consideration.

CURRAN CALLS HYLAN PROJECT BUNCOMBE

Henry H. Curran, discussing the features of the Republican and Democratic transit bills, by invitation of the Women's Transit Committee, at the Tenth Assembly District Republican Club, 8 West Twenty-eighth Street, last night declared the assertion by Mayor Hylan that he would be able to remedy conditions within sixty days in the event of the passage of the Walker-Donohue bill was nothing more than "political buncombe."

"So far as I have been able to learn," he said, "the Mayor proposes to accomplish his proposed miracle within sixty days by compelling all workers to rise twenty minutes earlier and return from work twenty minutes later each day and thus reduce crowding in the subways."

Describing the three main features of the Jesse bill, modeled on the report of a special committee on transit submitted to the Republican County Committee, Curran said it answered the political cry of Mayor Hylan for home rule, with the exception of excluding the municipal operation of subways.

"Municipal operation of the transit lines," he commented, "would be a delicate and dangerous thing to the life and limb of those compelled to travel in subways; certainly municipal operation would be shot throughout with political patronage. The only successful operation of anything by the City Government is that of the water system, and that operates by gravity, running down hill from the watersheds of the Catskills. The city is operating ferries, all at a loss, because they were taken over after their private owners could no longer continue operation without bankruptcy. The Mayor claims the city is operating the docks. What is the operation of a dock? The city doesn't operate the ships that use them. As to the buses; there were plenty of private owners who were ready to operate them, but none could get a franchise from the city.

"The main thing is that we want to get subways built, not to play politics. There is no partisanship in this effort to bring about a means whereby the City Government and the Transit Commission may co-operate in better transit facilities. The people are not going to tolerate much longer the conditions confronting us today, and if something is not done they are going to place responsibility for it on the City Government."

To Resume Panama Canal Service.

The International Mercantile Marine announced yesterday that in October it would resume the operation of its Panama-Pacific line from New York to Los Angeles and San Francisco by way of the Panama Canal. The service was interrupted in 1915 by the World War. The passenger and freight steamers Finland and Kroonland, now in the Atlantic service, will be commissioned in the route, carrying first, intermediate and third class passengers. The voyage from this port to San Francisco requires sixteen days.

PRODUCERS PROHIBIT BROADCASTING PLAYS

Association Gives Notice That Composers Cannot Give Their Music to Radio Without Consent.

"I note in the newspapers that the American Telephone and Telegraph Company has entered into a contractual relationship with the American Society of Authors and Composers, whereby the music of the authors and composers is to be broadcast throughout the country.

"On behalf of the Producing Managers' Association I wish it to be understood that no music of any opera, musical comedy or musical play produced by these managers will be permitted to be broadcast by radio or otherwise without the consent of the Producing Managers' Association. The musical plays now being produced, as well as other plays of the Producing Managers' Association, are the individual property of the individual producer and cannot be bartered away by the author or composer or any organization in behalf of the authors and composers.

"We give notice now that we shall hold to strict accountability any one who shall attempt to produce or broadcast any of our music or any of our works, and will attempt by injunction or otherwise to restrain anybody from making use of our property, for which we have expended hundreds of thousands of dollars. In addition to which we shall attempt to hold, if it is possible, any violators of our rights under the copyright laws of this country."

CHICAGO, Ill., April 13.—War between the radio broadcasting stations and music writers and publishers whose songs the former have been sending out broke today when the American Society of Authors, Composers and Publishers demanded a license fee from every commercial station broadcasting copyrighted songs.

As a result some three million radio fans will probably have to tune in on programs devoted exclusively to classical music and old stand-bys and forego their usual evening entertainment heretofore largely given over to jazz and popular song hits.

The Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, which operates four stations, including KYW in Chicago, today issued a statement to the effect that they would not submit to the demands and would eliminate copyrighted music.

The same stand is being taken by other broadcastting stations in Chicago.

$5,000 FOR SCHOOL MOVIE.

Will H. Hays, in behalf of the Motion Picture Producers' Association, gave the National Education Association $5,000 yesterday with which to make its first film for "classroom movies." The gift was made at a conference of motion picture makers with a committee of the Education Association appointed at Boston last July to discuss "plans for the production and use of pictures suited to the work of the schools and to the wholesome entertainment of young people of school age."

Charles H. Judd, Chairman of the committee, accepted the gift and announced plans for co-operating with the donors in producing the experimental picture. The fund is to be spent in additional research in the few months intervening before the educators expect to start filming. All facilities, including equipment, materials and workshops will be provided by the producers. Classroom movies are not intended to supplant text books, but to supplement them. A system of distribution will be worked out to serve the 200,000 schools of the nation.

Earle Laros in Piano Recital.

Earle Laros gave a piano recital yesterday afternoon in Aeolian Hall before a small audience. The program included compositions by Schumann, Chabrier, Tschaikowsky, Debussy, Chopin, Beethoven, Scarlotti, and arrangements of two of Bach's preludes by Busoni, as well as two of the pianist's own works. There was a lack of technical ease in Chopin's Etude in A Minor, but there was warmth of tone in the playing with the exception of occasional groups of notes struck too violently.

Max Reinhardt to Arrive Tuesday.

Morris Gest announced yesterday that Max Reinhardt, the celebrated German director, whom he has invited to stage productions here next season, will arrive in New York Tuesday on the Majestic. Reinhardt will spend two weeks here studying conditions in the American theatre before definitely deciding whether to accept Mr. Gest's offer. He will also inspect Madison Square Garden with a view to producing "The Miracle" there, if he decides to return here in the Fall.

Suzanne Zimmerman, Soprano, Sings

Susanne Zimmerman, soprano, gave a recital in the Astor Gallery of the Waldorf-Asteria last night, assisted by Conrad Forsberg in piano solos and by Bruno Huhn as accompanist. In Miss Zimmerman's program were an air from Debussy's "L'Enfant Prodigue," Dr. Frank E. Miller's "The Soul's Abode" and songs by Cyril Scott, Roger Quilter, Victor Harris and MacDowell.

DRESSMAKERS' STRIKE MENACES PARIS TRADE

Shop Owners Fear Delay in Deliveries Will Spoil Their Sales to American Tourists.

PARIS, April 13 (Associated Press).—The dressmakers' strike here has reached such proportions that three policemen were assigned today to guard the front doors of each fashionable shop in the centre of the city, while numerous other policemen were assigned to the work of keeping the young women and girl strikers moving. So far only two arrests have been made.

Clients of the shops are becoming impatient at the delay in the deliveries of Spring dresses ordered weeks ago, and this fact has led to several attempts by the shop owners to persuade the workers to return, with the threat of a lockout if they failed to resume work. The workers are meeting this threat with a declaration that they are prepared to stay on strike long enough to wreck the American and other tourist trade upon which the shopkeepers have been counting.

The dressmakers and shop owners issued an ultimatum today to the striking "midinettes" that unless they return to work Monday they will be locked out for an indefinite period."

Independents Start Making Films.

Six of the independent producing organizations, who, it is said, will contribute to the $7,000,000 program for production, are now engaged in the United Studios, Los Angeles, in the initial pictures involved in this undertaking. Among the independents who have already started on the producing schedule are Joseph Schenck, Maurice Tourneur, Richard Walton Tully, Sol Lesser, Louis Mayer, Edwin Carewe and Arthur Jacobs. Associated First National Pictures will soon start a number of productions as will other organizations, including the Buster Keaton Company.

"L'Africana" Sung Again.

"L'Africana" was sung for the third time at the Metropolitan last evening to another sold-out house, on the eve of an already nearly sold-out closing week of New York's crowded season. In the cast of Meyerbeer's opera were Mmes. Ponselle, Mario and Telva, Messrs. Gigli, Danise, Rothier, Didur, Bada, Ananian and others as before, and Mr. Bodansky conducted.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Generally Firm in Uncertain Market—French Exchange Higher.

In yesterday's markets the lack of any uniformity of movement was again noteworthy. Prices on the Stock Exchange advanced in the early hours, both industrial and railway shares participating; but in the majority of stocks the advance was nearly or entirely lost before the close. At the end there were something over a dozen net gains of a point or more and a slightly smaller list of similar declines; the rest of the day's changes being fractional. The cotton market lost all the ground which it had gained the day before; the wheat market also reversed its action from that of Thursday afternoon, rising to a new high figure for the year, $1.28¼ per bushel, and closing at a substantial advance for the day.

The single point of interest in yesterday's foreign exchange market was again the strength of the franc; it nearly reached the high rate of Monday, which was the highest except for two days last month since the French entered the Ruhr. In the bond market also, French Republic 8 per cents sold again at the year's best figure, and the 7½ per cents, reaching the highest since the downward turn of January, came within a small fraction of the year's high price. This happened again without any tangible evidence that a proposal of compromise was in contemplation by Germany; a turn of events, however, which seems to be predicted with much persistency in foreign financial circles.

Yesterday's report on merchandise exports from the United States in March gave the largest total of any month since last November and, except for that month and October, the largest since August, 1921. It is more than usually difficult to trace the actual cause of this somewhat surprising movement. Prices account for something; the March exports are 14 per cent. above 1922, whereas average prices in the month were nearly 7 per cent. above last year's. Detailed figures of January, for instance, showed cotton exports in that month to have accounted for $20,000,000 out of the $57,000,000 increase in value of the total exports; this although quantity exported decreased. Probably cotton cut even more of a figure in March, when the price of cotton was 10 per cent. higher than in January and the increase in total exports over 1922 only $20,000,000. Copper undoubtedly accounts for part of the increase in exports, both because of quantity and because of price; but, on the other hand, we have the consideration of a decreasing export trade in steel, of which the monthly average since September has been less than in 1913.

It would be even more interesting if we had simultaneously before us, as we always used to have before the Fordney tariff, both the export and import trade for the past month. The striking of the balance between the two is the matter of largest interest in an economic situation such as now exists. But the import figures for a month continue, as they have done since last September, to reach publication nearly two months after the export figures—something which has never happened under any other newly enacted tariff law and which is wearing a little heavily on the patience of merchants and financial students. One other interesting part of yesterday's trade return was its showing of gold exports and imports. There was still a surplus of imports during March; but it was only $5,559,000, the smallest with one exception of any month since the Summer of 1920.

The week-end mercantile trade reviews are on the whole noncommittal as to the immediate course of business. That something of a pause has occurred in the recent rapid movement of expansion seems to be agreed; comments are made this week on the "unmistakable trend toward caution in different branches of business" and, in particular, on "a distinct note of conservatism, with hesitation in different quarters, in the dry goods market." This may be merely a passing incident or it may be the forerunner of distinct slackening in the pace; the Spring months will possibly settle the question.

MONEY.

FRIDAY, APRIL 13, 1923.

Stock Exchange call money was maintained at 4½ per cent. throughout the session, a fractional advance from the final on Thursday. A small lot of new money, to run thirty days, was loaned at 5¼ per cent., though bankers continue offerings for longer periods at 5½ per cent. Commercial paper market was a little better than early week, some especially good-name bills being discounted at 5 per cent., while less well known were moved at 5¼ per cent.

WOOL MARKET STEADY.

Foreign Prices Rising, but Home Demand Moderate.

BOSTON, April 13.—The Commercial Bulletin tomorrow will say of the wool market:

"The demand for wool is moderate, but fine wools have a decided preference and at the moment woolen types are still dull. The new clip season is developing slowly in the West, but there is a broadening tendency in the new clip and the tendency of prices is, if anything, a bit stronger.

"Foreign markets, also, show a rising tendency. Fine wools in the Australian auctions being 5 to 7½ per cent. dearer this week. An equal rise is predicted in London commencing April 24. Bradford is very strong with combers advancing prices on merinos.

"The manufacturers are in a well sold up position and the outlook is for decidedly good business, during the heavyweight season at least.

Time Extended on Bonds.

A notice was issued yesterday to holders of the United Railways Investment Company twenty-five year 5 per cent. bonds by Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co. announcing an extension to May 1 next of the time for making deposits of bonds and an extension of the time within which the conditional offer to pay par for bonds may be declared operative until May 15, 1923.

FOREIGN STOCK MARKETS.

Quiet and Irregular Movement at Paris and London.

LONDON, April 13.—Prices moved irregularly on the Stock Exchange today. Old 2½ per cent. consols, ⅛ higher at 58⅝; British 5 per cent. war loan, ¼ higher at 103¼; 4½ per cent. war loan, unchanged at 99⅝.

PARIS, April 13.—Trading was quiet on the Bourse today. Three per cent. rentes, 20 centimes lower at 97 francs 40 centimes; 5 per cent war loan, 30 centimes lower at 74 francs 20 centimes.

Exchange on London, 38 centimes lower at 69 francs 47 centimes per sovereign; American dollars were quoted at 14 francs 93 centimes, against 15 francs ½ centime yesterday.

Boston Edison Company Earnings.

The Edison Electric Illuminating Company of Boston reports for the first two months of this year gross income of $3,365,900, against $3,088,918 in the corresponding period of the previous year. Net after taxes was $1,307,004, against $1,501,169.

Associated Gas & Electric Revenue.

The Associated Gas and Electric Company reports for February gross revenues of $244,446, an increase of $63,614 over the previous February, and balance after charges $31,654, an increase of $5,056.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Stocks Show Resistance to Selling.

If the professional interest operating on the short side came downtown yesterday with the belief that the stock market would react because it was Friday the 13th, they were disappointed. The market did little yesterday, but the majority of the net changes at the close showed advances. The gains in most instances were confined to fractions, however, with the industrials recording a slight advantage over the railroads. Trading was again on a comparatively small scale, with most activity in a few oil and motor stocks, including General Motors, Studebaker and Stewart Warner in the latter group, and Mariand, Sinclair, Producers and Refiners and Phillips Petroleum most active in the oil group. The steel stocks also attracted attention for a time, especially Crucible, which gained 2 points, on expectations of a favorable earnings statement next week.

Predicting More Favorable News Development.

Based upon the belief that the recent reaction in the stock market, which extended over a period of several weeks and which is believed to have corrected the unwieldy position of the more speculative stocks, that element in Wall Street which still sticks to the side of rising prices professed yesterday to be looking ahead for favorable news developments. There have been numerous developments of the kind within the last few weeks, but these had little effect because of technical conditions. It is now argued that "constructive" news will be more favorably received. For one thing, Wall Street appeared yesterday to believe that within the week news from abroad will be more favorable. Also numerous favorable statements of corporation earnings are expected. These include the reports to be issued by Republic Iron and Steel, Crucible Steel and Western Union. In regard to future dividend announcements, Stewart Warner is expected by Wall Street to announce a stock dividend and Martin-Parry to increase the quarterly rate.

Foreign Bonds.

It was pointed out by bankers yesterday that a rather peculiar situation has developed in the market for foreign bonds, and that it is more or less psychological. The point was made that foreign bonds of all sorts are more popular with investors than with the bankers themselves. There has been a very steady inquiry for securities of this description even during the present period of dullness in the bond market; very possibly because of the attractive yields some of the issues return at present prices. On the other hand, it is disclosing no secret to say that foreign issues are unpopular at the moment with international bankers, and that the recent Japanese issue will possibly be the last foreign loan sold in the New York market for many months. No less than a half dozen foreign loans have been turned down by international bankers during the past six weeks. It is the policy of most of the big banks to keep their representatives actively digging away at loans for foreign countries, but the negotiations which some of these representatives in foreign fields have carried on have been abruptly ended when the Boards of Directors took a look at the figures.

Seeking "Tips."

Ordinarily Wall Street is fairly flooded with tips on the stock market, and not very long ago one had only to travel from brokerage office to brokerage office, with side excursions into banks, to get enough market advice to satisfy the most fastidious. But just at the present time Wall Street is seeking rather than giving tips. Some people interpret this as a reflection of the fact that most of the professional element is at sea about the market's immediate future. One broker, asked yesterday by some of his customers if he knew anything about the probable future market action of a certain speculative oil stock, gave this answer: "No, if I knew anything about it I would be in there doing something for myself and friends, in the order named." That, on the whole, explains the speculative attitude in Wall Street at the present moment.

The Case of Pan-American.

Despite the official statements issued by the officers of the Pan-American Petroleum and Transport Company covering the company's production in Mexico and its earnings over monthly periods, statements were again circulated in the financial district to the effect that production has fallen off and that earnings are not sufficient to cover common dividends. In regard to these reports J. M. Dansiger, Vice President of Pan-American, yesterday said that these reports were "deliberately planned to influence the stock market. The figures given in these public statements are based on incorrect production figures. They are no doubt based upon terminal receipts, which are much different from the actual production figures, as such statements are almost identical with the terminal reports."

Anthracite Shipments in March.

Although a gradual decline in aggregate shipments of coal has set in since the rush of shipments which characterized January and February, it became evident yesterday that the decrease in tonnage as reported by the railroads was due entirely to the falling off of loadings in the bituminous fields. Shipments from the anthracite regions show an increase for March, the monthly total having been 7,183,513 gross tons, an increase of 404,351 tons over March of last year and a gain of 1,231,806 tons over the total for February. The March total, which marked the seventh time that anthracite shipments have exceeded 7,000,000 gross tons, was taken to indicate that while bituminous production has caught up with demand, there is still some slack to be taken in before the demand for anthracite production has been satisfied.

Miscellaneous Freight Shipments.

Although railroad statisticians are singularly reticent about predicting what the future may hold in store, it was learned yesterday that some of the pencil experts of the Car Service Division of the American Railway Association are ready to set down what promises now to be a new record in merchandise and miscellaneous car loadings for the week ended April 7. This report probably will be issued next Wednesday, and it is accepted as likely that the total will surpass all previous figures for this description of freight in American railroad history.

Astronomical Figures.

Official statements cabled from Berlin, to the effect that the German Government's outstanding floating debt is now 6,000,000,000,000 marks, illustrate what has long been said in the London foreign exchange market, that nowadays one must use "astronomical denominations," such as are employed in measuring the distance between the earth and the moon, to feet up total values in Germany's present paper currency. The comment was further made on this public debt return that it would create a curious and novel problem in case of a conceivable appreciation of the mark. More than two-thirds of this floating debt has been incurred during 1923; the total was 1,500,000,000,000 at the end of December. The question was asked, how could the debt possibly be paid with the mark worth, say, two times its present gold value. Considerations of this sort have led many people to believe that Germany will "devalue" the mark itself permanently to something around the present exchange quotation, thus virtually authorizing 20¼ per cent. repudiation of prewar German debts.

EASTERN ENGINEERING

"Mr. Andre Attendu has accomplished in actual practice what no other engineer in the world has been able to do, notwithstanding that for years the best technical brains for England, France, Germany and the United States have concentrated upon the same objective, without success."

This advertisement is published for the sole purpose of publicly announcing that Phoenix Securities Corporation was the engineering enterprise of the late Mr. Attendu. We have no stock for sale.

Public Utility Securities Put Out Aggregate $14,600,000—Market Continues to Improve.

In a market that continued to improve and absorb new issues more rapidly, a total of $60,281,000 in new bonds were offered this week, comparing with $60,902,000 last week and $111,912,500 in the corresponding week of last year.

The largest issues of the week was the $14,000,000 offering of the Public Service Electric Power Company. In the industrial group the largest offering, that of the Certain-teed Products Corporation, of $8,000,000, was made by a firm not in the Wall Street district and devoting the greater part of its attention to the financing of real estate.

The greatest activity was in the State and municipal offerings, where twenty-one new issues were floated, varying in size from the City of Baltimore issue of $6,394,000 to an issue of Ulster County totaling $65,000, and including two issues of $3,000,000 each from Canadian provinces.

During the middle and the latter part of the week most of the issues offered were quickly absorbed. This led some bankers to believe that the lull in large offerings had been a good thing for the market. Liberty bonds were steady, moving up and down irregularly, but in a very narrow margin.

Plans are about completed, it is understood, for the issuance of the bonds to refund the $55,000,000 of Federal Land Bank bonds called last week. While it is generally understood that the new issue will be between $55,000,000 and $75,000,000, no definite figures have been given out as yet. The loan will be floated as soon as the syndicate considers the market is favorable.

Despite the reports of railroad executives that the purchases of new equipment for 1922 and 1923 would total a $1,500,000,000, this condition was not reflected in new railroad issues. During the week there was only one such issue. The opinion of bankers is that the amount of bonds to be issued in the New York market for the year will fall much below the $1,500,000,000 figure. They base this on the fact that more than $400,000,000 of the new equipment talked of was purchased last year, and that a large part of that to be purchased this year will be paid for from the railroad treasuries and from loans that have already been floated or by loans that will not be offered in the market until 1924.

The offerings this week and last, divided into groups, were as follows:

	This week.	Last week.
State and municipals	$20,981,000	$13,371,000
Industrials	19,500,000	246,000
Public utility	14,600,000	31,500,000
Railroads	2,700,000	7,575,000

Metropolitan Edison Buys Plants.

Control of the Hanover Power Company and the Gettysburg Electric Company has been acquired by the Metropolitan Edison, a subsidiary of the General Gas and Electric Company. These companies, when connected with the Pennsylvania-New Jersey power system of the General Gas and Electric Corporation's subsidiaries, will in themselves form a complete power system from the battlefield of Gettysburg through Pennsylvania and New Jersey to within a few miles of the New York State line.

Surplus of Zinc Stocks Reduced.

The American Zinc Institute reports another reduction in surplus zinc stocks for March. Despite increased production, it is said, shipments exceeded output by 845 tons. Stocks at the end of March were 10,021 tons, equal to less than a week's supply at the present consumption.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE

Following the direction of the foreign markets, dealings in the European exchanges here yesterday were dull, with consequent fluctuations confined to small fractions. The possibility of an early change in the Ruhr and reparations difficulties has imparted a caution on the part of the speculative element, and, with the absence of pressure of selling from this source, the market pursued a tranquil course.

London checks alternated between $4.65⅜ and $4.65⅝, finishing up from the low for a slight loss, while Paris bills moved between 6.71 and 6.68 cents, unchanged from Thursday's closing. Italian, Holland, German and the Scandinavians barely moved. In the South Americans the Brazilian milreis moved up to 11 cents, from 10.90 on Thursday. Far Easterns were maintained without change.

Beginning March 22, the Stock Exchange officially quotes Liberty bonds in units and fractions, the fractions being 32ds of a unit, and the quotations after the decimal point representing one or more 32ds. In the above table, therefore, the figure of highest and lowest prices during 1923 and since date of issue are reduced to the form now used in the Stock Exchange quotations.

BUYING SLACKENS AFTER EARLY RUSH

MANY ORDERS ON BOOKS

Capacity Operations for Several Months Are Assured, According to Reviews.

The last week has shown a distinct pause in new buying, according to the weekly trade reports. This change, it is pointed out, has not been unexpected, in view of the magnitude of recent commitments and the fact that many requirements already have been covered well into the future. Production and distribution of merchandise in general, however, continues at a high level, and most industries are giving their attention to filling orders on their books rather than going after new business. Orders now on the books assure many industries of virtually capacity operations for several months.

"After the pronounced expansion of the first quarter, a slowing down process in some instances does not seem surprising," says Dun's Review. There is, however, an unmistakable trend toward caution in different branches of business and a tendency to guard against speculative excesses. This is a reassuring phase, and it also is a favorable sign that the advance in prices has slackened. Despite the sharp upward movement in some commodities the general wholesale price basis has risen less than 5 per cent. this year and Dun's list this week again shows an actual decline.

Evidence is not lacking that the unwholesome features of too-rapid price increases are plainly recognized, and there is a disposition, among prudent interests at least, to hold the market in check. The slight set-backs granted to iron and steel workers, following similar action in some other lines, obviously will further enhance the public purchasing power, but the possibilities of a restriction of consumption, should retail prices rise appreciably, are entering into calculations. Complaint is still heard that the best results in Spring trade have been prevented by unseasonable weather, while low temperatures also have retarded crop development in some sections of the country."

"There is still a good deal of irregularity in the various lines of trade and industry, with the latter including building and collections, at opposite ends of the scale, the former being more active than was ever known, whereas collections are dragging in a notable way. For this latter condition, cold weather, which has been and is retarding retail sales and to some extent jobbing business, is held mainly responsible. Cold or stormy weather continued until well toward the end of the week to hold back country retail buying and practically all farm work, which is now unquestionably late, both North and South.

"City retail trade, favored by bright though cool weather, shapes up better than does country trade, but mail-order trade is growing rapidly. Soil conditions, except in the extreme western part of the winter wheat belt, are generally such that a few days of warm, dry weather will enable farm work to be prosecuted actively. Winter wheat growth generally—and at the South, where rains have been heavy—cotton planting has been held back, and oats seeding delayed, although some ground has been regained this week. Jobbing trade is fairly good, but the quiet noted in some wholesale lines has been rather increased by the less extent to buying in iron and steel, in which price advances seem practically at an end, at least for the time being."

FRISCO EXPLAINS ASSETS.

Replies to I. C. C. Refusal to Pass Recent Financing Application.

Officers of the St. Louis-San Francisco Railway Company have taken issue with the Interstate Commerce Commission, which recently declined to pass upon the railroad company's application to issue $1,047,900 of adjustment mortgage bonds on the ground that the margin of "capitalizable assets over capitalization" of the railroad was too small. This surplus, according to the commission's accountants, amounted to only $3,655,816, but the company contends that the surplus should be carried at $15,274,900, and has written to Chairman E. K. Brown of the Interstate Commerce Commission to this effect.

The letter states that "there are included in current assets in the form of cash a certain amount specifically being $5,060,152 representing cash specifically set aside for the purchase of equipment under contract," and which the company should be treated as a capitalizable asset. The letter also says that bonds issued or assumed pledged amounting to $4,000,000, were pledged as collateral for the United States Government loan of $3,000,000, and that "inasmuch as cash expenditures of only $2,400,000 have been made, represented by the above loan, this amount only should be taken up as a fixed liability."

TEARS DOWN BILLBOARDS.

LYNN, Mass., April 15.—Ralph S. Bauer, President of the Chamber of Commerce, an ardent opponent of billboards, took the law into his own hands today when he discovered that the town's "White Way" had been placarded with posters advertising "The Third Alarm."

Bauer armed himself with the proper weapons and sallied forth. As fast as he came to one of the posters he tore it down and cast it into the street. No one, not even the police, attempted to interfere. When he came to the final poster Bauer, after tearing it down, carried it into the Mayor's office and inquired by what authority the posters had been put up.

Permission had been granted by the commission which has authority over billboards, it developed, but Bauer maintained that the commission was exceeding its authority when it granted permission that resulted in obstructions along the sidewalks.

The City Solicitor holds that the law was violated by putting up the posters and that Bauer also violated the law when he threw them into the streets. New Lynn is waiting to see what the next move will be.

STEEL PRODUCTS VALUE HALVED BY 1921 SLUMP

WASHINGTON, April 13.—Value of the products of steel works and rolling mills was cut nearly in half, while bread and other bakery products had only a slight decline in the two years from 1919 to 1921. Statistics for 1921, announced today by the Census Bureau showed the value of products of steel works and rolling mills to have been $3,-461,869,000, a decline of $1,347,243,000, or 46 per cent. as compared with 1919. Bread and other bakery products were valued at $1,089,759,000, a decline of $62,-127,000, or 5 per cent. from 1919.

Manufactures of lumber and timber products in 1921 showed a value of $902,-801,000, a decline of $484,976,000, or 34 per cent.

Compared with the value of products in 1914, each of these industries showed a gain. Bread and other bakery products increased 122 per cent. in value in the seven years; products of steel works and rolling mills, 61 per cent; manufacture of lumber and timber products, 36 per cent.; and manufactures of hardware, 60 per cent.

Only in the manufacturing of bread and other bakery products did wages show an increase between 1921 and 1919, although in each of the industries there was a large increase as compared with 1914. Bakeries paid $232,936,000 in wages in 1921, compared with $207,057,000 in 1919; steel cos., $412,861,500 compared with $707,017,858; lumber, $260,-924,000 compared with $545,547,000; and hardware, $47,494,000 compared with $67,469,000.

The number of persons engaged in each industry, however, declined. The number in the steel industry from 431,-861, in 1919, to 262,515 in 1921.

CHECKED ECONOMIC CONDITIONS IN EUROPE

Department of Commerce Reports Both Favorable and Unfavorable Developments.

According to its cables from European correspondence published yesterday by the Department of Commerce in France the metallurgical industries are hampered by lack of coal, forty blast furnaces having closed down since the Ruhr occupation, but supplies for the Ruhr are now increasing. It is believed that the fuel crisis is past. The textile situation is calm. Total imports and total exports of France are both increasing. Industrial stagnation continues in Austria, with some labor troubles, but progress of the rehabilitation plan and subscriptions to the preliminary loan, with improved commercial relations with neighboring States, causes encouragement.

The adoption of a new constitution in Rumania is expected to have a steadying influence on the business situation, which is at present still greatly depressed. The constitution nationalizes undeveloped underground resources. Food is scarce and the export of cattle has been prohibited. In Jugoslavia financial and business improvement is seen as the result of the present economic policy. Imports and exports are slowly approaching equality. Economic negotiations with Austria have been satisfactorily completed.

EASTERN STEAMSHIP PLAN.

Recapitalization Proposed, Partly to Acquire New Lines.

BOSTON, April 13.—Stockholders of the Eastern Steamship Lines, Inc., were notified by President Calvin Austin today of a plan for recapitalization. An additional issue of 55,000 shares of 7 per cent. cumulative first preferred stock, par value $100, is proposed for acquiring additional property and lines and for betterments, and an issue of 90,000 shares non-par preferred cumulative at $3.50 a share, is proposed for distribution as a stock dividend, share for share, with the common stock outstanding. This latter was explained as in lieu of a distribution of earnings of what is described as very satisfactory, to be applied to development.

The statement said that "it plans with reference to the acquirement of additional lines are sufficiently developed at the date of the annual meeting (April 16, at Eliot, Maine), they will be submitted to stockholders at that time." The statement did not make clear whether the references to additional lines was intended to apply to acquisitions other than of the Old Dominion Steamship Company and the Kennebec Steamship Company, already announced, but not yet approved by stockholders.

The Transit Commission opened bids yesterday for the construction of the permanent inspection shed for the use of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company in the Jerome Avenue yards on the city reservoir property near Jerome Avenue and Mosholu Parkway. Arnold, Constable Sales Larger.

Arnold, Constable & Co.'s sales are running at the rate of $5,000,000 annually, according to an official statement issued yesterday. This compares with a gross turnover of $4,250,198 in 1922. These sales, it is pointed out, are being reported despite the fact that the store's selling capacity has been reduced 50 per cent. due to alterations of three floors. These store changes are being made under the direction of the new management, which became active last November.

3,068 BANK SHARES SOLD TO EMPLOYES

PAY $100; VALUE IS $238

Scheme Was Started Three Years Ago Before Consolidation of Institutions.

Delivery was made yesterday by the Irving Bank-Columbia Trust Company of 3,068 shares of the company's stock purchased by approximately 900 employes ranging from office boys to vice presidents. The stock which was delivered at $100 a share, was quoted on the market yesterday at $238, making the total distribution of almost three-quarters of a million dollars, with several hundred shares not fully paid for to be delivered later.

In a letter accompanying the delivery of the stock to the members of the staff, Harry E. Ward, President, said, "It is a distinct pleasure to congratulate you upon the qualities of enterprise and thrift, which have brought you into the ranks of the Irving-Columbia stockholders. As owners of stock in our company, we share jointly in its successes and in its responsibilities. It is my earnest hope that, through the spirit of practical co-operation, we may be able to advance still further its interests in usefulness and prosperity."

The plans for participation by employes in stockholdings were developed three years ago by the Irving National Bank, which in February of this year, consolidated with the Columbia Trust Company. When, in June, 1920, the Irving's capital was increased from $5,-000,000 to $10,500,000 the stockholders, at the request of the Board of Directors, waived their subscription rights to approximately five thousand shares of stock to enable the members of the bank's staff to acquire stock.

Payments were made monthly at the rate of $5 for each share, 6 per cent. interest being charged for the use of the money advanced. In the meanwhile, dividends of 12 per cent a year during the purchase period, were applied to the reduction of principal. As the result, the stock paid for itself in part, through its own earnings, the balance actually paid by the purchaser being only $77.50 a share.

Copyright, 1923, by The Chicago Tribune Co.

PARIS, April 13.—A big oil strike in Albania has suddenly started a battle there among rival petroleum interests. Both the British and Dutch Governments are now putting pressure on Albania to accept financial advisers from their respective nations. The English candidate is actually put forward by the Anglo-Persian Company, and the Dutch by the Royal Dutch Company.

The Sinclair Company is not being supported by the American Government in the same aggressive way, but it is offering the best terms for the concession.

The battle indirectly will be decided at the Assembly of the League of Nations, probably at a meeting to be held in Geneva on April 21. Albania's boundaries have not yet been fixed by the League, and the big Powers have the Tirana Government at their mercy through their authority to give Greece a slice of Albanian territory.

One proposal is for the League itself to force Albania to accept a foreign adviser who would completely control the financial policy of the Government.

The Albanian deposits are especially valuable because they are near the Adriatic, and little hauling is necessary.

COTTON CONTRACTS PRESS ON MARKET

Prices Decline 22 to 32 Points in Moderate Selling of All Months.

There was another downward move in cotton yesterday similar to that of Wednesday. For the third successive session, operations proved unusually heavy, coming from such varied and concentrated sources that they resulted in perplexing the average trader. Out of the confusion, two definite facts emerged, namely that the market acted heavy and weather continued unfavorable. An opening advance failed to hold up selling pressure prevailed throughout the greater part of the day. After establishing a loss of half a cent, prices steadied the last hour as many expected large figures on domestic consumption from Washington this morning. Prices lost 22 to 32 points.

Early steadiness in Liverpool with further heavy rains in the cotton belt started prices somewhat higher but the improvement was short-lived. Liquidation began almost immediately and increased in volume as the day advanced. Predictions of clearing weather conditions in the West belt and progressive liquidation in old crop positions exerted a depressing influence on prices. During the sharp advance of Thursday extensive covering operations occurred which deprived the market of the buying power necessary to absorb cotton offered. With first notice day on May contracts less than two weeks distant and continued apathy in spot quarters, commission house liquidation took place on a declining scale of prices. After starting at 28.75 July worked off 28¼ cents before encountering any substantial buying orders. At the even figure a line of about 15,000 bales was taken from the market but this failed to do more than produce a temporary halt in the downward movement. A steady stream of contracts flowed into the ring, both in new and old crop months. Sentiment seemed more definitely against the market than for some time, unrelieved by less encouraging reports from dry goods circles and a disposition of many who have held cotton for some months to terminate their interests.

While only seven stations in Texas reported .01 inch of rain, showers fell over a considerable portion of the State. Rains shifted to other sections, however, every station in Tennessee reporting over an inch and with two to five inches falling at certain points of the region East of the river. At this time of the middle of April, conditions are not such as to permit rapid progress of farm work, which is now getting behind. The first requisite for a good crop this year is a satisfactory start and dry, not wet, weather is needed in order to get planting done and seed germinating. Weather will therefore become increasingly important with each succeeding day. Weekly figures showed another large decrease in visible supplies, though spinners' takings fell below last season. Spinners took 176,000 bales against 182,000 last year, making 10,-044,000 for the season, compared with 9,950,000 last year. As the amount in sight was only 68,000 against 140,000 a year ago, the visible decreased 108,000, compared with a loss of 42,000 a year ago. This left the supply of American 2,997,000, compared with 3,570,000 at this time a year ago.

Neither figures nor weather appeared to influence operations and afternoon selling carried May and July off half a cent from opening figures. The sale of a line of October ran that month below 25 cents, a break of about 70 points from high levels of the week. Increased demand for May the last hour halted the decline.

BIG FOREIGN ORDERS CARRY WHEAT HIGH

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, April 13.—Buying of 8,000,000 to 10,000,000 bushels of May and July wheat, the orders being distributed by Pynchon & Co., a house with extensive Eastern and foreign connections, was largely responsible for an advance in the new crop deliveries to a new high for the season, and May at the outside figure was within ¾ cent of the previous high.

The buying was generally attributed to short covering for a local professional and, to foreign and Eastern shorts. The foreigners, it is said, had become frightened over the prospect of a settlement of the French and German difficulties and were stampeded into covering.

But for the fact that many local longs thought the advance was sufficient for the time being and sold immense quantities of wheat for profits, the bulge might have gone further than it did.

Toward the last the buying let up and prices receded around 10 cents from the outside and closed with net gains of ⅛@1¼ cent, the latter on May. Reports of rains in parts of western Kansas where they were most needed were factors.

July wheat was up 7½ cent from the low of last week and the short interest was greatly reduced. Removal of hedges against 1,250,000 bushels of wheat sold for export, including 900,000 bushels of durum and 125,000 of hard Winter helped the bulge along.

There was also an estimate made that Nebraska would not raise over 30,000,000 bushels of Winter wheat this year, or about half of last year's yield, and pessimistic returns were received from that State throughout the day. Delay in Spring wheat seeding is regarded as becoming very serious and a leading Canadian house expressed the belief that the acreage in the Canadian Northwest would be cut 3,500,000 acres, although the general estimate is for 2,000,000 to 2,500,000 acres, or around 10 per cent.

Corn closed ⅛@¼ cent lower, heavy selling in the last few minutes attributed to a local professional being a factor in making the heavy finish in the face of aggressive buying by a local bull. The May-July corn spread narrowed to 1½ cent at the last, against 1⅞ at the finish yesterday and 3 cents recently.

Export sales in the seaboard were 250,000 to 300,000 bushels. No business was done here.

Oats were unchanged to ⅛ cent higher, the latter on September after a range of around ⅝ cent for the day. Seeding is making rapid progress in some parts of the central West and is delayed in others by further rains.

Primary arrivals of wheat today were 547,000 bushels; week ago 757,000; last year holiday. Shipments were 467,000 bushels; a week ago, 486,000.

Corn receipts were 599,000 bushels; week ago, 759,000, and shipments 381,-000 bushels; week ago, 617,000.

HINT PROSECUTIONS OVER RISE IN SUGAR

Justice Department Is Said to Have Evidence of Illegal Methods to Raise Price.

REPORTED TO PRESIDENT

Latter Awaits Tariff Board's Report —Still Holds That Duties Are Not Responsible.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—Developments in the near future in the Department of Justice investigation into the sugar price situation were indicated after today's Cabinet meeting, at which acting Attorney General Seymour presented a report.

The situation was discussed by President Harding and his advisers almost entirely from the legal standpoint at the meeting, which lasted an hour and a half, inasmuch as the Tariff Commission has found itself unable to complete its preliminary report dealing with the effect of the tariff on sugar prices. Information from the commission was that the report might be completed tomorrow, and at the White House it was said that the President expected to confer with the full commission next Tuesday or Wednesday.

With respect to the tariff phase of the situation, however, the President was represented as absolutely convinced that the duties on sugar were in no wise responsible for the almost steady advances in the price of the commodity since early in February.

Acting Attorney General Seymour laid before Mr. Harding and the Cabinet a complete summary of the results to date of his department's inquiry, as ascertained from department reports and from conferences yesterday in New York with United States District Attorney Hayward. The nature of the department's findings was withheld, but it was indicated by a high Administration official that developments might be expected within a comparatively short time.

Although all Department of Justice officials have been hesitant in disclosing the lines being followed in the inquiry, it has been the general assumption that the investigatoin has been directed toward ascertaining whether the price increases resulted from collusion or conspiracy in violation of law. The early part of the department's study is known to have been devovted to search of the statute books for acts which might be used as the basis of criminal prosecutions, and it has been intimated by some officials that the basis having been found, the activities of the department now were turned to the collection of evidence of possible law violations.

The President, in arriving at the conclusion that the tariff cannot be blamed for the increased prices, is understood to have made a study of the situation as based on information received from several sources. The information was said at the White House to have shown that sugar now is selling at a higher price in Canada than in the United States, although the Canadian duties range from a preferential rate of less than a cent a pound to a maximum rate of 1.6 cents a pound, as compared with the preferential rate of 1.76 on Cuban raw and 2.20 on other sugars in the Fordney-McCumber tariff law.

The Tariff Commission has been tied up nearly a week, unable to reach an agreement on certain phases of the preliminary statement it is preparing to make to Mr. Harding in response to his request for information as to the effect of the tariff duties on the sugar situation. Some members believed tonight that the possibility of an agreement tomorrow was good, but it was added that progress was slow.

Experts of the commision have been completely over the field of statistics in all Government offices and have gathered what is regarded by the commission members as a comprehensive survey of the price and import rate comparisons over a period of a dozen years. But there seemed to be a variance of opinion as to the exact construction to be place on the mass of facts and figures and that, it was asserted, was the main reason why the report has not reached the White House.

In some quarters it was said that two factions had developed in the commission again, one contending that the tariff duties could not be entirely eliminated from at least partial responsibility for the recent price increases, while the other group was said to maintain as insistently that there was no proof showing that the customs duties had been passed on in the price to the ultimate consumer. The two groups, it was indicated, did not necessarily divide along high or low tariff lines, but rather the differences were traceable to the question whether the duties ever actually were discernible in the prices paid by the ultimate consumer of any commodity.

MINIATURE BREWERY RAIDED

The first miniature brewery utilized extensively for commercial purposes to come to the notice of the Federal prohibition authorities in this section was seized yesterday afternoon at 407 Jackson Street, Hoboken, by Federal Prohibition Agents Michael J. C. Phillips and J. King. The "brewery" was complete in every respect, the agents said, and four fifty-gallon capacity kettles were in operation when they arrived.

The agents went walking down River Street when they noticed a one-horse truck back up against a rear door of the saloon at 128 River Street. On the truck, the agents said, were fourteen barrels of beer containing more than the legal percentage of alcohol. Martin Brunnerstadt, driver of the truck, was arrested and taken before Commissioner Stanton, where he agreed to tell where he got the beer, which was a two-story building at 407 Jackson Street. Peering through cracks in the building the agents saw a complete small brewery. They then got a search warrant and entered the place.

Agents Gosnell and McAndrews were at the Lackawanna Ferry in Hoboken when a truck started to drive on with thirty barrels of beer for New York City. The agents seized the beer and arrested the driver.

NEW ORLEANS, April 13.—Thirty-one bills of information, charging more than a dozen citizens of Morehouse Parish with various crimes as a result of activities of masked bands in the parish last year, were drawn today by Attorney General Coco and delivered to District Attorney Garrett to be filed at Bastrop, according to The New Orleans Times-Picayune.

Persons named in the bills, the newspaper states, include Captain J. K. Skipwith, Exalted Cyclops of the Morehouse Ku Klux Klan; his son, Oliver; Dr. B. M. McKoin, former Mayor of Mer Rouge; E. N. "Newt" Gray and T. Jeff Burnett, former Morehouse Deputy Sheriff.

Burnett, Oliver Skipwith and Gray were named by witnesses at the open hearing in Bastrop in January as having been recognized as members of the hooded band which on Aug. 24 kidnapped Watt Daniel and T. F. Richard, who were tortured and slain on the same day.

The bills will charge conspiracy to commit murder, kidnapping, assault with deadly weapons on the public highway, assault with intent to commit murder and damaging or destroying telephone lines.

BAPTIST WOMEN CELEBRATE

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, Baptist Southern New York Association, yesterday celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of its founding at the Park Avenue Baptist Church, 64th Street and Park Avenue. The function was a memorial to Mrs. James B. Colgate, who formed the society fifty years ago, in company with Mrs. Stephen Smith and a few other pioneers.

Luncheon was served, which was attended by 400 women from all parts of the district.

In the church there were reminiscent talks by James C. Colgate, son of the founder; Mrs. Helen B. Montgomery, President of the Northern Baptist Association and the first woman to hold that office, and Mrs. Helen W. Peabody of Boston, a former missionary to India. Mrs. H. Stanley Taylor, President of the Missionary Society, presided.

An offering of $3,000 was received as a memorial gift in honor of Mrs. Colgate of the society and organizations connected with it. The money, it was said, will be applied to the erection of a dormitory for the use of the missionaries at Rangoon, Burmah.

BOY CONVICTED OF MURDER.

MONTROSE, Pa., April 13.—Elmer Washburn, 14 years old, confessed slayer of Silas Payne, an aged recluse, was found guilty of murder in the second degree today. He will be sentenced later.

Young Washburn, it was testified, had seen Payne counting $2,000 in gold on numerous occasions in his shack near Montrose. The lure of the gold, the lad said, was too strong for him, and he confessed that he had sneaked up behind the recluse and clubbed him to death.

The gold was recovered where Washburn told authorities he had hid it. The youth's defense was mental incapacity.

Night Treatment for Veterans.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—Director Frank T. Hines of the United States Veterans' Bureau today issued orders to all dispensaries operated by the bureau throughout the country to remain open one night a week for the treatment of veterans whose hours of work render it impossible for them to appear during the dispensaries' regular hours.

SUPER-POWER PLANT FOR JERSEY'S NEEDS

Public Service Corporation to Add 200,000 Horsepower at Cost of $20,000,000.

KEARNY MEADOWS THE SITE

President McCarter Says Demand for Power Has Outstripped Company's Capacity.

The Public Service Corporation of New Jersey will begin construction soon of a super-power station which will add 200,000 horsepower to the capacity of the system and which will cost at least $20,000,000. The new project, which Thomas N. McCarter, President of the company, describes as one of the largest undertakings of the kind in the country, will take until 1925 for completion. The plant will be built on the Kearny Meadows.

The power furnished by the addition, which will bring the Public Service Corporation's total electric capacity to 720,000 horsepower, will be used for industrial and domestic needs of Northern New Jersey and, according to Mr. McCarter, will provide enough current to take care of hundreds of manufacturing plants. In some quarters the announcement of Mr. McCarter was linked with a recent report that the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad contemplated the electrification of its roadway in Northern New Jersey, but this report has been denied by officials of both the railroad and the Service Corporation.

Arrangements for financing the enterprise have been completed, Mr. McCarter said. Cost of the site and plant will be met by securities of the new company, which will have the construction of the plant in its direct control.

Preliminary work is now nearly completed, Mr. McCarter said, and it is hoped to have the new unit far enough advanced so that it can supply some power next year.

"The plant will be built by a new company called the Public Service Electric Power Company," Mr. McCarter explained, "and will be leased for 999 years to the Public Service Electric Company, which will operate it and distribute the energy it generates.

"For some time the demand for electric power has been growing more rapidly than the company could build stations and install generators to provide it. As evidence of this, let me say that the kilowatt hours of electricity produced by Public Service increased from 236,740,000 in 1910 to 939,413,000 in 1922; the meters in use increased from 88,186 to 344,506 in the same period, and the gross business of the company multiplied from $5,800,000 twelve years ago to upward of $27,000,000 last year."

HOUSE OF DAVID TURNS ON ENEMIES

LANSING, Mich., April 13.—The Israelite House of David launched three attacks today in as many cities of the State against the forces seeking to drive it out of Michigan. The organization struck blows in Federal and State courts and, through H. T. Dewhirst, its legal representative at Benton Harbor, denounced those who have been leading the fight against it.

In Circuit Court here the colony asked that the State's quo warranto proceedings, filed recently to compel the cult to show cause why it should not be forced to discontinue operations in Michigan, be dismissed.

At Grand Rapids the colony filed in the United States District Court a motion asking that the suit brought against the colony by John Hansel and heard recently be reopened, setting up the claim that additional testimony favorable to the defendant had been uncovered. Decision in this suit has not yet been announced.

At Benton Harbor H. T. Dewhirst, member of the colony and the cult's chief counsel, in a formal statement said: "If the public believes we are rubes, just born yesterday." The statement was prompted by efforts of State legislators to bring about a receivership for the House of David.

The colony asked that the State's quo warranto proceedings be quashed on the grounds that the Ingham Circuit Court is without jurisdiction, that such an action does not embrace the subject of individual morality of members or stockholders of a corporation and that the charges of immorality are not set forth in the State's bill. April 21 was set as the date for hearing arguments on the motion.

In Grand Rapids the colony filed an affidavit signed by Cecil Loehr of Benton Harbor, alleging that Hansel had tried to interest him in a plot to bomb the safe at the House of David headquarters and obtain the $300,000 to $400,000 believed to have been contained therein.

In his statement, Attorney Dewhirst declared talk of a receivership for the colony was "silly," and that the organization "has no creditors, pays its bills and minds its own business."

FEARS A POISON PLOT.

Mrs. Elizabeth G. Wyeth, widow of George Wyeth, who died a year and a half ago, was committed to Bellevue for ten days for observation yesterday by Magistrate Charles A. Oberwager in West Side Court. Mrs. Wyeth gave her age as 35, and her address as 255 West Eighty-fourth Street, where, it was said in court, she had been living with a sister.

Among those who testified were former Supreme Court Justice Robert MoC. Marsh, Dr. T. W. Davis and Clarence J. Converse, a private investigator. Mr. Marsh said that he had been engaged by Leonard J. Wyeth, nephew of Mr. Wyeth, to investigate the woman's condition and in turn had employed Converse.

According to the testimony, Mrs. Wyeth, the second wife of Mr. Wyeth, has been suffering from hallucinations that there is a conspiracy to poison her. Converse said that Mrs. Wyeth had believed tradesmen were trying to poison her.

Dr. Davis testified that in his opinion Mrs. Wyeth was a paranoiac. Mrs. Wyeth continually interrupted the witnesses and complained that she had not received a chance to obtain legal aid.

BABY BATHED IN PERFUME.

The prize-winning baby of the Northwest, Joseph Ruffner III., aged 2½ years, was the feature at the National Perfumery, Toilet Articles and Soap Exposition at the Seventy-first Regiment Armory yesterday. He received a perfume bath at the 4711 Booth.

The highest grade made in the odor identification contest is thirty, which means that of the hundreds who tried at the Leigh booth, only one woman succeeded in identifying three scents out of the ten submitted. The winner will be announced tonight.

Search for the most shapely hand in New York continues. Hundreds of contestants are daily submitting measurements by which they hope to win the award offered by Northam Warren.

HOOVER WON'T ISSUE CALL.

Rejects St. Louis Builders' Plea for Conference on Costs.

ST. LOUIS, April 13.—Secretary of Commerce Hoover has refused to call a conference of construction industry interests to discuss increasing building material and labor costs, according to a letter received from the Secretary today by E. J. McMahon, Secretary of the Master Builders' Association of St. Louis.

"I would deplore official action which might have unexpected results," Mr. Hoover wrote.

The Associated General Contractors had asked a national conference in Washington, and the Secretary's letter was in reply to one asserting the fear of a "buyers' strike," unless a general lessening of building costs was accomplished.

STATE GIVES FINAL INCOME TAX ADVICE

MONDAY IS THE LAST DAY

Law Recognizes Exemptions if Taxpayer Is Entitled to Them for Any Part of Year.

Final advice on the New York State income tax returns and payments on which are due before midnight Monday at the offices of the State Tax Commission is given in a set of questions and answers made public yesterday by the commission. The questions, which concern individual cases of general interest, and the answers, which are the official rulings of the department, follow:

Uncertain—My wife has income. If she files a separate return does she get $1,000 exemption in addition to my $2,200 exemption as head of a family with one dependent?

Answer—No. The $2,000 exemption is the highest amount permitted husband and wife living together. If joint return is filed $2,200 is used against combined income. If separate returns are filed each must take $1,000 exemption, and either may claim exemption for $200 dependent.

A. C. W.—An estate pays $2,000 annuity from bond interest to a resident of California. Is the trustee required to file this information?

Answer—No.

Answer—Yes. That decision expressly stated that validity of this tax "may be considered when it is assailed" in a separate proceeding.

J. M. B. S.—Until Sept. 1 I was head of a family with two dependents. Then one died. Home was abandoned and I supported surviving child in furnished rooms. I report on calendar year. Do I receive $-12 of $200 for the child who died?

Answer—No. Your exemption is $2,400. The State law recognizes exemptions if taxpayer was entitled to them at any time during his taxable year.

Answer—Yes. Such amount was paid as compensation for services previously rendered, or expected future services.

Teacher—I earned $1,855. My expenses were $500 for an operation, $400 for hospital care and physicians' services. Must I file a return?

Answer—Yes. These payments were personal expenses and not deductible under the State law.

Startled—Do I correctly understand your recent ruling that $5,000 payment by a trustee to a charitable institution is deductible in return of the trust?

Answer—Yes, if provisions in the will or deed of trust directed trustee to pay such amount from income and not from corpus.

Fifty-Seventh Street—Due to a good market I sold several pieces of real estate, taking small cash payments and large mortgages. What is my income?

Answer—Entire profit is income in the year of sale. Mortgages are considered the same as cash payments. If in a later year you suffer losses by reason of default in their payment such amounts are deductible in that year.

Physician—One of my patients, a mechanic, overhauled my car. Instead of paying him I closed out a bill which he owed me. What is this transaction on our two returns?

Answer—Payment deductible as business expense in your return and mechanic reports such amount as additional income in his return.

Morristown—I am a married non-resident. I received $3,300 dividend distribution check from the New York trust and also $1,600 salary from Columbia Pharmacy College. Should I file a non-resident return?

Answer—No, as only your salary is taxable.

BANKER PREDICTS SLUMP IN BUILDING

Another nation-wide slump in building construction was predicted for the end of 1923 yesterday by Walter J. Greenbaum of Greenbaum Sons Bank and Trust Company of Chicago at his New York office. He has just arrived after making a survey into building conditions in the large cities of the Middle West and East.

Mr. Greenbaum based his prediction upon the soaring costs of building materials and the demands of labor. Until the restriction of immigration is removed, Mr. Greenbaum asserted there could be little hope for a reduction in labor costs.

He charged that labor unions in this country had brought such pressure to bear upon the immigration authorities that the 3 per cent. quota law would remain. He pointed out that there are 1,000,000 unemployed in England, of whom a large number could be brought to this country to build houses.

"From my personal visits to a large number of cities," Mr. Greenbaum said, "I believe that, with the increased costs of building materials during the last few months, we are rapidly reaching a situation similar to that which existed three years ago. According to figures I have examined, the peak of building material prices, which was reached in June and July, 1922, will again be reached in the early Summer of this year."

Mr. Greenbaum placed the peak price at about 200 per cent. above pre-war prices. Beginning in July, 1920, there was a gradual decrease to 30 per cent. below the high mark. Prices have been on the increase, he said, for the last four or five months.

The construction slump, he said, would affect especially large apartment houses and office buildings and would have little or no effect upon bungalows and small dwellings. Mr. Greenbaum hoped that the slump might be but temporary and believed that the Presidential year would probably open actively from the construction point of view. Material prices will have to be decreased, however, before this activity commences.

In New York City Mr. Greenbaum found much more speculative building than in other cities. Speculation is being encouraged upon the theory that existing high rents will continue.

HIS ARREST REAL NOW.

Actor of Police Travesty Held on Wife's Charge That He Beat Her.

NEWARK, N. J., April 13.—Garry Owen, O'Flannigan, a vaudeville performer at a local theatre whose act involves his arrest by a stage cop, was in jail here today in default of $500 bail following his arrest by a real deputy sheriff.

Mrs. Regina Alexander O'Flannigan, wife of the actor, and herself an actress, obtained a writ for the arrest of her husband, whom she is suing for separate maintenance. Mrs. O'Flannigan in her complaint said that although they had been married only six months, her husband had beaten and abused her, had failed to suport her and finally abandoned her. Her husband earns $250 a week, she said.

FURS SHOW FEW CHANGES.

None of Those Sold Yesterday Exceeded the Winter Averages.

Beaver featured the fifth day of the annual Spring sale of raw furs in the Masonic Hall here. Bidding for these skins was quite active when the best ones were on the block, and it was the consensus of opinion that the general run of beaver brought full market prices. Buying of the small and medium-sized skins was more active than that of the large and extra large ones. A number of women's coat and suit houses were among the buyers of beaver, which they use for trimming purposes, and partly as a result of their bidding prices on the best skins touched $26.50.

The morning session opened with the disposal of the mink left over from the previous day. There was no snap to the bidding for it, however, and the previous day's high price of $15 was not exceeded. Marmot followed, and did not do extra well. A good part of the collection, it was said on the floor, was bid in by the shippers. The next offering was ermine. It brought fairly good prices, but fell off 5 per cent. in comparison with those paid here at the Winter sale in January.

Beaver followed ermine, and then came nutria and mole. Neither did as well as shippers had hoped, and from all accounts, there was considerable bidding in of both. Nutria was the weakest offering of the day.

More than 900 silver fox pelts that had been scheduled for yesterday had to be put over until Monday. At the close of the afternoon session it was estimated that the total realized for the day was about $310,000, bringing the grand total for the first half of the sale to $2,895,000.

In the appended table will be found the highest prices paid for the skins sold yesterday, together with the changes shown when the average prices received were compared with the January averages:

	Highest Price.	Change. (Per cent.)
Mink	$15.00	Unchanged
Marmot	1.12	Unchanged
Ermine	1.50	*5
Beaver	26.50	Unchanged
Nutria	2.85	*20

*Decline.

For the first time in a large sale in this city there will be no selling on a Saturday, the skins that ordinarily would have been sold today will be offered on Monday, following the silver fox left over from yesterday. Australian, sundry and gray foxes, as well as skunk, are scheduled for sale at that time.

THE WEEK'S PRICE TREND.

For the first time in several weeks Dun's current list of wholesale commodities prices shows an excess of advances over the declines, but it is very small. Of the week's sixty-nine changes thirty-five are upward, against the same number of advances in seventy-five revisions last week. Excepting for the numerical strength of the grains list and the almost equal division of the changes in the foodstuffs, features were lacking.

The following list gives the minimum wholesale prices quoted on selected standard commodities this week. They are corrected to yesterday, and with them are given comparative prices for last week and the corresponding week a year ago:

*Nominal.

Of the nineteen revisions in the foodstuffs this week ten were advances. In the local market for provisions there was a rise of 10 cents a barrel in Spring patent flour, but Winter soft straights did not change. Middle Western lard was higher here, but bacon declined and hams did not change. At Chicago short ribs were quoted higher, but there was no revision of prices on live beef and mess pork. Live hogs and live sheep were both lower.

Changes in the local dairy list were few and small. The best butter declined fractionally, with the other grades unchanged. Cheese also was unchanged. Nearby fancy eggs moved up half a cent a dozen, but are cheaper than they were a year ago at this time. A rise of 1½ cents a dozen was seen in fresh gathered firsts. A further decline in California prunes was the only change in the listed fresh or dried fruits. In the vegetables the only decline took place in choice white kidney beans. Choice medium and choice pea beans were higher, as were cabbage and potatoes. Cabbage showed a jump of 75 cents a barrel, while potatoes advanced 25 cents.

A drop in No. 4 Santos coffee was the only revision seen in the beverages. The spice changes, all of which were declines, took place in mace and in black and white Singapore peppers. Both 96-test raw and fine granulated sugars were higher.

In the grains list all of the revisions were upward. They took place in wheat, corn, oats, rye and malting barley. The listed leathers again showed no changes either way, but in the hide list declines in No. 1 native packer and heavy native cow stock contrasted with advances in branded cows, No. 1 country steers, No. 1 buffs, No. 1 extremes, No. 1 calfskins and Chicago city calfskins.

The metals again showed more declines than advances, the only rise, in fact, taking place in pig aluminum in ton lots. All of the changes were confined to the minor forms, and the declines were seen in copper and spelter. Both furnace and foundry cokes were lower. In the revisions in the combined lists for drugs, chemicals, dyestuffs and oils there were very few features. The declines outnumbered the advances by just short of two to one.

The miscellaneous changes included declines in hops, turpentine and both Brazilian and plantation crude rubber. Japanese raw silk also was lower, but Shanghai silk moved up a little. Not for a long time has there been less feature to the textiles. Practically nothing of importance transpired in the cotton goods during the week. Lower prices for burlaps resulted from the continued inactivity of buyers and reports of very large shipments from Calcutta to American ports last month.

Offers Real Egyptian Perfumes.

One of the leading importers here is offering a line of Egyptian perfumes that is said to have special interest because of the current vogue of things of such inspiration. They are described as truly Egyptian in origin, both as to the authenticity of the odors and their manufacture, as they are compounded in Egypt. The firm is featuring three numbers of a comprehensive line. Each of these has a distinctive crystal container, made by one of the famous glassmakers of Paris, which is enclosed in a fancy silk box. One is designed in the form of an Egyptian mummy, with hieroglyphics carved on the front and the head forming the stopper. Another has a cut crystal Sphinx head surmounted by a clear glass ball. The third takes the form of an Egyptian curio or token of the principal goddess Isis. The quantity of perfume contained in each is about two ounces. Prices of these numbers range from $11 up at wholesale.

BUSINESS WORLD

Commercial Paper.

Yesterday—5 to 5¼ per cent. for the best names.

Thursday—5 to 5¼ per cent. for the best names.

Gray Goods Very Dull.

The slump in buying of gray goods in this market continued yesterday, with the result that sales of importance were few and far between. In the print-cloths some late April deliveries of 387-inch 60-48s, were reported sold at 6⅝ cents, and some odd lots of 39-inch 68-72s, were said to have moved at 12¾ cents. Sheetings were again quiet and featureless. In the specialties some "quick" 72-80 pajama checks were disposed of at 12 cents. In the fine-yarn cloths some business was reported in 40-inch 72-08, six-yard lawns, at 12¾ cents.

Outlook for Veilings Improves.

While the demand for veilings is showing slow improvement, wholesalers here say there is a fairly steady call that gives promise of a much better season directly ahead. For one thing, they point out, the style trend abroad is very favorable to the use of the veil. Drape veils are described as the best selling items at the moment, either in the solid colors or with combination colored borders. These are embroidered and are of the "square" type. Yard veilings are moving better than the made veils, particularly the fancy meshes. Considerable interest is being shown in Chantilly lace numbers.

Buyers "Bearing" the Market?

Reports that have come from several sources lately lead to the belief in certain quarters that important buyers are now engaged in a campaign to "bear" prices by spreading talk of poor current business and of a doubtful outlook for the future. In the knit goods field, for instance, this talk is to the effect that prices have reached a peak and that declines will be in order when the new season opens. In the silk trade buyers have been quick to seize upon anything that would lend to make the situation out worse than it is, so they have found a talking point in the recent failure of a prominent concern. Buyers of cotton goods are hammering on the lack of export business and a large production of the merchandise to force prices down, despite the wage increases that either have already gone into effect or will go at the end of the month.

Ostrich Feathers in Vogue.

Favor for ostrich feathers as dress accessories is reported to be growing abroad. In a letter received from Paris yesterday by one of the leading importers of these feathers the statement is made that "ostrich collarettes and cape effects have been shown here rather notably recently. Five of the foremost couturiers in Paris put them in their showings, namely, Lanvin, Worth, Doucet, Philippe & Gaston and Poiret." It is added that many of the fashionable women at the races at Longchamps and Auteuil are wearing ostrich feather adornments. The prediction is made that the style sponsorship given them abroad will not be without its influence here.

Are Watching Labor Legislations.

Knit goods manufacturers are advised by the bulletin of the National Association of Hosiery and Underwear Manufacturers to keep a close eye on labor measures that are now before various State Legislatures. The bulletin calls attention to the forthcoming second action in the Pennsylvania Legislature on the bill to reduce the working hours of women in that State from 54 to 48 weekly and eight hours daily instead of nine. It also calls to the attention of the Judiciary Committee of the Wisconsin Senate in reporting a bill for passage that provides for unemployment insurance for workers in that State, as a law. It would require all employers of more than six persons to pay their workers $1 a day for thirteen weeks if they are "laid off" as a result of industrial conditions.

Retail Credit Men to Meet.

The annual meeting of the Associated Retail Credit Men of New York City, Inc., will be held at the Aldine Club on Wednesday next at 6:30 P. M. Among the business to come up will be the election of officers and directors for the coming year. The speaker of the evening will be Commissioner Alvan T. Griffin of this city. Under the auspices of the Educational Committee of the association, three demonstrations of how to handle applicants for charge accounts will be given at the meeting, at which will also be given a program worked up by the Entertainment Committee. The entertainers will hold forth during the dinner that will precede the business session.

Ribbon Situation Favorable.

Things affecting the ribbon market continue favorable. While there is said to have been a slight falling off in buying on the part of the cutting-up trades during the past week or ten days, it is considered of a temporary nature. It is pointed out that the present season is distinctly one for ribbons, as far as dress, coat and suit decorations go. The general use of a wide ribbon for the side-tie effect in coats and suits has caused a notable demand for merchandise suitable for this purpose. Wide ribbons generally are finding a much better demand than was the case only recently, but stocks on hand are still comparatively large. Recent price advances on staple numbers, occasioned by the increase in the cost of raw silk, have as yet caused no serious complaint on the part of buyers.

Hard Coal More Active.

Demand for independent anthracite in the domestic sizes has become more active in the last week. Saward's Journal will say today, with the result that prices show advances of from 50 cents to $1 over those prevailing earlier in the month. The loss of tonnage incidental to the Easter holiday and the eight-hour day probably helped strengthen the market, but this was only a minor cause. A more potent influence is the unprecedented amount of business being thrust on retailers by people who have taken the lesson of last Winter to heart. The great majority of bituminous users are unwilling to buy in excess of current needs and, in fact, seem adverse to doing that if it can be avoided by drawing on reserve supplies.

PROFIT FROM NEW STAMPS.

Government Made $41,000 in Three Months, Mostly on Latest Issue.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—Postage stamp collectors poured $41,000 into the Treasury of the United States through the Post Office Department's philatelic agency during the first three months of this year for unused postage stamps to add to their collections, principally stamps of the new issue.

The money received not only is virtually clear profit for the Government, but would pay several times over the entire cost of preparing the new issue of stamps, which was about $8,500. No estimate can be made of stamps sold to collectors for their collections through the regular post offices, but the amount is thought to be considerable.

Since the Government decided to encourage the collecting of postage stamps here in December, 1921, approximately $100,000 has been taken in through its sales.

NEW SKYSCRAPER FOR GREELEY SQUARE

RENTALS TOTAL $7,500,000

As a site for an eighteen-story commercial structure the former site of the old Union Dime Savings Bank, fronting on Broadway, Sixth Avenue and Thirty-second Street, has been leased to a prominent New York builder for a long term of years at a rental that will aggregate about $7,500,000.

The present building, which faces Greeley Square and is a landmark in the section, occupies the southerly frontage on Thirty-second Street, from Broadway to Sixth Avenue, comprising the southerly end of Greeley Square, with frontages of 42.8 feet on Sixth Avenue, with a southerly line of 107.11 feet.

The lessee, upon obtaining possession May 1, 1924, will raze the present six-story structure, for many years occupied by the bank, and improve the site with an eighteen-story store and office building.

The bank moved several years ago to quarters at Sixth Avenue and Fortieth Street.

The Schulte Cigar Stores Company has arranged with the new interests controlling the site to lease for a term of years the ground floor, basement, first and second floors in the proposed building and will occupy the corner store at Broadway and Thirty-second Street.

Negotiations are also reported well under way for the subletting of the remainder of the space it is leasing to John David, who now occupies the store, basement and second floors of the present building. L. J. Phillips & Co. will act as agents for the proposed building.

BRONX BOROUGH DEALS.

Many Valuable Holdings Sold in Apartment Trading.

Desider Schoen and Robert Altman, as brokers, sold for the Absar Realty Company the triangle plot, improved with three five-story apartment houses, known as 1,115 Hoe Avenue, 1,121 West Farms Road and 1,131 West Farms Road.

The houses were built by the seller and have small units and a rent roll of $60,000. The property was held at $585,000. Negotiations are pending to resell individually.

George Kean and Louis Zucker sold the five-story apartment on the southeast corner of Sherman Avenue and 168th Street to an investor. This building contains twenty apartments yielding a rental of $14,000, and was held at $80,000.

Schwab & Co. sold for Morris Maran to the I. Langer Realty Corporation the six-story new-law apartment house known as 2,112 Harrison Avenue, 55 by 100, showing an annual rental of about $17,000.

Sol J. Cohen sold for Herman Knepper 1,035 Tiffany Street, an apartment house containing twenty-five families.

Harry Cahn, operator, resold to the Julian Realty Company the premises at 858 Tremont Avenue, a five-story new-law apartment on lot 50 by 115, arranged for twenty-three families and three stores. Nathan Herbst was the broker who negotiated the sale.

William F. Kurz and L. J. Greenberger sold for John Davis 891, 895, 899 and 703 East 137th Street, four five-story new-law apartments. The property was held at $200,000.

The Benenson Realty Company bought from Niewenhous Brothers, builders, the two five-story apartment houses, on plot 116 by 87, at 943 to 947 Teller Avenue, southwest corner of 163d Street, containing thirty-five suites and renting for about $25,000; also the adjoining house at 812 to 820 East 163d Street, a five-story structure accommodating twenty-seven families, on plot 100 by 115, also renting for about $25,000. The structures were erected a few years ago by the sellers, who held them at $375,000 easy.

Van Vliet & Place have sold for David Laemmle the northwest corner of Vyse and Jennings Avenues, a flat with 100 rooms and stores on the first floor, on a plot 50 by 75.

Norman Denzer sold to the Cloister Realty Company, Inc., for Samuel Shapiro the taxpayer now being finished at the southwest corner of 166th Street and Findley Avenue, built on a plot 51 by 100 and containing nine stores and basements.

Eugene J. Busher Company, Inc., in conjunction with Frank De Lorenzo, sold 223 East 155th Street to a client, who will occupy.

Jules Nehring sold for Katherine Kraus et al the southeast corner of Shakespeare Avenue and Featherbed Lane, a plot 105 feet by 110 feet. There is a private residence on the property, which was held at $40,000. The buyer is Peter Radicchi.

Desider Schoon and Robert Altman sold 447 to 459 Willis Avenue, between 145th and 146th Streets. This is the only building plot (75 by 106) unrestricted in that vicinity, now occupied as two two-story brick buildings for business purposes.

Mortgage Loans Placed.

Louis Becker Company procured a loan of $40,250 on bond and third mortgage at 6 per cent. from the Great Northern Apartments Corporation for Samuel Senate, owner of the five-and-one-half-story apartment house located on the northeast corner of Audubon Avenue and West 180th Street, on a plot 72 by 100, renting for the annual sum of $31,260. This corner was recently sold by the same broker for about $200,000.

Jules Nehring placed first mortgages of $9,000 on premises at 590 West 178th Street and $5,500 on premises at 508 West 150th Street.

William A. White & Sons have arranged for the Hallenbeck-Hungerford Realty Corporation an increase of $200,000 in the mortgage held by the Dry Dock Savings Institution on the corporation property at 74 to 80 Lafayette Street. The rate of interest on the new loan of $800,000 is 5½ per cent.

This firm negotiated the original loan of $600,000 for the Hallenbeck-Hungerford Realty Corporation, the realty holding company for U. T. Hungerford Company, one of the largest copper and brass concerns in the country. The property, which is an eighteen-story office and showroom building, extends from White Street through to Franklin Street.

Estate Sells Garage.

William D. Kilpatrick purchased through James Dowd as broker from the Florence V. C. Parsons estate the three-story private garage at 166 East Sixty-eighth Street, between Third and Lexington Avenues, on plot 25 by 100.

RUSSIAN GRAIN EXPORT 1,800,000 TONS IN 1922

Thrice That Amount Estimated for This Year—A. R. A. Official Finds No Starvation.

MOSCOW, April 13.—One hundred million poods of Russian grain were exported from the 1922 crop, according to a report issued by the Soviet Department of Statistics and published in the Laber Gazette. (A pood is equivalent to about 36 pounds avoirdupois.)

It is estimated that during the coming year grain exports will reach 300,000,000 poods, from which it is hoped to derive between 200,000,000 and 250,000,000 gold rubles.

Major Philip Matthews, returning to Moscow after a three weeks' inspection trip in the Bashkir territory for the American Relief Administration, said he found no starvation in any of the districts visited. In two or three isolated spots he said he saw evidence of acute hunger, but that in general the hospitals and children's refugees established by the administration throughout the region were adequate and not crowded.

U. P. TO SPEND $40,000,000.

Special to The New York Times.

OMAHA, Neb., April 13.—Judge Robert S. Lovett of New York, Chairman of the Board of the Union Pacific Railroad, announced today that the road will spend $40,000,000 this year on improvements, double tracking, equipment, &c.

When the double tracking is completed the Union Pacific will be double tracked all the way from Omaha to Ogden, Utah, with the exception of twenty-seven miles between Echo and Gateway, Utah. Construction is to begin immediately.

"This $40,000,000, which is in addition to our regular operating and maintenance expense," said Judge Lovett, "is the largest sum we have spent in any one year for a number of years, but we feel that the future is so bright that the expenditure is warranted."

Among the items included in the appropriation are $8,500,000 for new equipment, $5,000,000 for new lines and $16,000,000 for refrigerator cars.

"Business prospects in the West are unusually good," said Judge Lovett. "This is true of railroads as well as other lines of business. I am not downcast at the future of railroads. We have our problems, of course, but the great bulk of the people look on railroads with favor and will give them a square deal.

"Generally speaking, crop conditions are good everywhere, except locally in some places where rain has failed."

'SAND-HOGS' OFFER TERMS.

Tunnel Strikers Willing to Yield on Air-Pressure Demand.

Representatives of 150 "sand-hogs" who caused a halt in the boring of the Hudson River vehicular tunnel by going on strike last Saturday approached the employing contractors, Booth & Flinn, Inc., yesterday, with a counter-proposition. According to an official of the contracting firm, the workmen offered to waive their demand for lower air pressure in the tunnel, provided their other demands, including increased wages, shorter working hours and recognition of the Compressed Air Workers' Union of America, were granted.

"The offer of the men to waive their demand for lower air pressure in the tunnel does not change the situation," asserted S. M. Rutledge, Assistant Purchasing Agent of Booth & Flinn, Inc. "We cannot lower the pressure beyond the point fixed by law."

Mr. Rutledge explained that the river caissons on the Jersey side were sunk successfully yesterday by workmen not involved in the strike.

NEWBURGH, N. Y., April 13.—A motion to inspect the minutes of the Rockland County Grand Jury which indicted Evan Burrowes Fontaine, dancer, and her mother, Mrs. Florence E. Fontaine, for perjury in connection with the dancer's suit against Cornelius Vanderbilt "Sonny" Whitney for breach of promise, was made in Supreme Court here today by counsel for the Fontaines.

Edward J. Collins, Miss Fontaine's attorney, declared that the proceedings in the case by which Miss Fontaine's marriage to Herbert Adair, a sailor, had been annulled and which formed the basis of the indictment, had been improperly presented, the Presiding Judge and the stenographer not having been sworn.

Two Youths Arrested, Indicted and Jailed Within 12 Hours.

Less than twelve hours after their arrest on a charge of attempting to rob a clothing store at 2,125 Second Avenue, Robert Stevens, 19, living at a Bowery lodging house, and Archie Gallo, 20, of 85 Park Avenue, Brooklyn, were indicted and arraigned for burglary before Judge Talley in General Sessions. They were remanded to the Tombs without bail for trial, when they pleaded not guilty.

Policeman Roedel of the East 104th Street Station noticed Stevens loitering near the clothing shop shortly before dawn. He questioned him and discovered that he had several boxes of handkerchiefs hidden under his shirt. Policeman Prendergast came along just then and found that a hole had been cut through the floor from the cellar and that $2,500 worth of suits and cloaks had been piled up ready for removal.

The policemen pushed Stevens into a hallway, and soon Gallo appeared. He was seized and while the policemen were searching him an automobile containing three youths drove up to the door, but speeded away when the policemen were seen. The policemen fired a dozen shots at the car, but it quickly disappeared. Stevens and Gallo, the police say, admitted that the men in the car were their confederates in the robbery. When District Attorney Banton learned of the arrests, he ordered the case presented to the Grand Jury immediately and in less than half an hour the indictment had been handed up to Judge Talley.

GIVEN TO HIM TO APPRAISE

James R. Cooper, a jewelry broker of Glen Cove, L. I., was indicted yesterday for the theft of $20,000 worth of gems from Mrs. R. Irving Huntington, wife of a broker, whose home is The Meadowcrest at Hewlett's, L. I. Cooper was arrested two weeks ago at his home on the complaint of Mrs. Irene Castle Treman, the dancer, who alleged that he stole a pearl necklace, worth $9,000, from her in November last. He had been released in $1,000 bail and was awaiting examination in the West Side Court on the dancer's charge when the complaint of Mrs. Huntington was placed before the Grand Jury. Cooper, it was understood, will be surrendered in General Sessions this morning.

Mrs. Huntington's complaint to the District Attorney's office was similar in all respects to that on which Mrs. Treman had caused his arrest. Mrs. Huntington, formerly an actress, said that she became acquainted with the broker three years ago at the home of her mother, Mrs. Margaret Riley, at 47 East Fifty-eighth Street. Cooper, she added, was well known as a jewelry broker among members of the theatrical profession and she bought several articles of jewelry from him in the last two years.

She said that in January, 1922, she asked Cooper to have the following gems appraised: A diamond chain, a diamond lavaliere, a string of pearls and diamonds, a 5½-carat diamond ring, a diamond brooch, a pair of earrings, each containing a three-carat diamond, and a diamond bracelet. Cooper took the jewelry and shortly afterward Mrs. Huntington left for Palm Beach.

On her return several months later she tried on several occasions to get her gems, but was put off on one excuse or another.

Finally, when Cooper learned that her husband had reported the matter to the police, he telephoned to her that he had pawned the gems, she said. Later he sent her what she described as a "confession," which she turned over to the District Attorney, and pawn tickets for all but $3,000 worth of the jewelry.

Cooper had promised to redeem the jewelry, but when the Huntingtons returned from Palm Beach last week and learned of the charge Mrs. Treman had lodged against the jewelry broker, they made a formal complaint to District Attorney Banton.

IGNORE MURDER CONFESSION

Judge Directs Acquittal Where the State Has No Other Evidence.

When Judge Mulqueen yesterday, in General Sessions, ordered a jury to acquit William Filardi of 226 East Twenty-ninth Street on a first degree murder indictment because the prosecution depended solely on an alleged confession made by the man four days after the killing, the Court made this comment: "America does not use the rack, the pillory and the thumb-screw, but the system of taking defendants' statements to be used against them still survives."

Filardi was indicted for shooting and killing Patsy Buono on the floor of Buono's home, at 222 East Twenty-ninth Street, on the night of Dec. 14 last. Filardi walked into the East Thirty-fifth Street Station four days after the mirder, and is alleged to have confessed that he killed Buono because of the attentions of the slain man to Filardi's wife.

Assistant District Attorney Dineen explained that the State had no evidence against Filardi except his own statement. Judge Mulqueen then ordered the acquittal.

As Filardi left the Criminal Courts Building he again was arrested on a charge of having a pistol in his possession when he surrendered on the murder charge. Magistrate Earl E. Smith, in the Yorkville Court, held him in $1,500 bail for the action of the Grand Jury.

USES ALUMINUM SCENERY.

Chemnitz Opera House Director Finds It Cheaper Than Wood.

CHEMNITZ, Saxony, April 13.—Aluminum is now being used here for stage scenery, instead of wood. Hans Eberhard, managing director of the Chemnitz Opera House, has introduced the innovation largely because wood has become so expensive in Germany. He also believes the use of the metal to be more practicable because it is lighter to handle and does not offer a fire menace.

Other advantages are that such scenery can be used on both sides, and that any paint decorations put on it can easily be erased. No acoustic difficulties have yet appeared through the use of the new material.

The aluminum is delivered at the theatre in roughly rolled plates of the same form and size as are wooden sections of scenery. Its thickness varies from five to eight millimeters.

RELIGIOUS RIOTS IN PUNJAB.

British Troops at Amritsar Suppress Hindu and Moslem Fanaticism.

LONDON, April 13.—Dispatches from India report trouble at Amritsar in the Punjab, where serious disturbances occurred in 1919. The present unrest is attributed to tension between the Hindus and Mohammedans as a result of proselyting activities on the part of both.

A riot occurred on Wednesday in which a score of persons were injured, and British troops were called to support the police. Street fighting between the rival factions again broke out on Thursday. British cavalry and armored cars have been brought from Lahore to strengthen the local troops.

HELD ON TAX BRIBE CHARGE

Henry Dolgenas, an internal revenue agent, was held in $10,000 bail by United States Commissioner Hitchcock yesterday to await action by the Grand Jury on a charge that he had accepted $150 from Albert Friedman, a florist, to reduce the income tax due the Government by the Albert Friedman Floral Corporation for the years 1917 to 1921.

The complaint states that the defendant had told Mr. Friedman that his company owed a large amount of money in taxes but that a payment to him of $2,500 would greatly reduce the amount. Friedman, in notifying the Government officials, said that Dolgenas had later agreed to accept $2,000.

It was arranged that Friedman should agree to make a payment on account and $150 in marked bills were given him to hand to Dolgenas. Shortly after the marked bills were paid to Dolgenas, it is charged, he was arrested by Intelligence Agents Hayes and [illegible].

TO INVESTIGATE SANITY OF PRIEST'S SLAYER

KALAMAZOO, Mich., April 13.—Arraignment of Father Charles Dillon, who last night slew his superior, Father Henry O'Neill, pastor of St. Augustine's Parish, was postponed late today at the direction of Judge Weimer in Circuit Court until Monday.

Postponement was granted at the request of counsel for Father Dillon, although the priest had made known his willingness to enter a plea of guilty to a charge of first degree murder. It was indicated that alienists might inquire into the sanity of the prisoner.

Father Dillon declared today that he wanted to go at once to Jackson or Marquette (where State prisons are located) and insisted he was perfectly sane. He remains calm and manifests no sign of remorse.

"When we were seated at the dinner table last night," he said, "Father Dillon appeared morose. Finally he burst out, addressing Father O'Neill, 'You'd like to get me out of here, wouldn't you?'

"Father O'Neill replied, 'You are under no compulsion. You may stay as long as you wish on, if you prefer, you may go.'

"'Then I'll go and pack up,' Father Dillon said. He went upstairs. In a few minutes he returned and without warning began to fire."

This version differs from that told by Father Dillon, who said the parish priest ordered him to leave.

TOBACCO MONOPOLY STANDS

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, April 13.—The French Government tobacco monopoly will not be given over to private exploitation, as has been often rumored in America. This became known today in connection with the sittings of the commission appointed by the Ministry of Finance to study the organization and operation of the tobacco and match monopolies.

A Government monopoly can be suppressed only by act of Parliament, and the fact of the appointment of the commission is proof of the Government's intention to continue the State's exploitation of the tobacco trade, as otherwise the commission would have no reason for existence.

At a conference of the commission today M. Ricaud, Director General of the State Manufactories, presented a résumé of the criticisms formulated by the opponents of State exploitation. M. Ricaud recognized that a number of the criticisms were just and proposed reforms in keeping with modern commercial exigencies.

Pennsylvania Coal Co. Levy Cut.

TRENTON, N. J., April 13.—The State Board of Taxes and Assessment today announced a reduction from $1,170,145 to $513,662 in the assessment on personal property levied by the Saddle River, Bergen County, Tax Board against the Pennsylvania Coal Company for 1922. The assessment was levied against coal mined and stored in the Township of Saddle River. The State Board held that the method of assessment followed by the Township Board was erroneous.

BANDITS GET $2,980, CAUSE PANIC IN LOFT

CRIES FOR HELP TOO LATE

Joseph Matosh of the clothing manufacturing firm of Matosh & Cohen was robbed of a payroll containing $2,980 in the hallway of a loft building at Grand and Allen Streets yesterday. His cries for help caused a near panic among the sixty-five employes of his shop, who, fearing fire, rushed pell-mell down fire escapes and stairways to the street. Many of them received minor lacerations and bruises from falls during the hurried exodus. Because of the hold-up pay day had to be postponed.

Matosh went to the Chatham and Phenix National Bank at Third Avenue and Fifty-seventh Street at 3 o'clock yesterday. He obtained the payroll, placed it in his coat pocket and returned to the shop, which is on the fifth floor of 300 Grand Street.

At the second floor a man started up behind him, and at the same time he saw another coming downstairs. The latter suddenly whipped out a .38-calibre revolver and shoved it against Matosh's stomach. Then the man coming upstairs removed the bundle of money from his pocket.

"Hurry upstairs" was the only remark the bandits made, and Matosh obeyed. Reaching his own loft, he put his head to the doorway and cried several times for help. The frightened clothing workers rushed to the windows shouting fire, and Matosh was left alone on the floor.

A policeman, hearing the excitement, learned of the robbery and reported it to the Clinton Street station. The workers returned to their posts as soon as they found there was no danger.
